"Aren't you ashamed to tie this horse's head up so cruelly?" The speaker was Miss Foltz, a young actress who plays the leading part in a theatrical company now in the city, and she stood on a Walnut street curb deftly adjusting the horse's blinkers and pulling a mosquito out of his eyes. Then she loosened the checkrein while a crowd looked on approvingly and the horse gratefully rubbed its nose against her shoulder. Then she proceeded to give the driver some good advice about the care of his beast.

"Well, it's my horse," he said. The animal's released head bobbed up and down out of pure joy, and the driver thought strange thoughts as he went on.

"This is a very bad town for horses," continued the young lady, "almost as bad as Pittsburg. Ever since I've been here I have noticed how tightly their heads are reined up and with what effort they ascend the steep hills. Their poor necks seem strained almost to bursting. It is a shame and ought to be stopped. Yes, I have read 'Black Beauty,' and I think every teamster should have a copy."—Kansas City Times.

Kissed by Bismarck.

Bismarck has won the hearts of all the German women by his exhibition of that fondness for kissing fresh young faces for which your General Sherman was famous. Lili Finselberg, a young German sculptress, went with her sister to call upon Bismarck in Kissingen. His habit is to let devoted women kiss his hand. When leaving, these young women tried to kiss his hand, but the prince said: "Hold on. We will do that much simpler." He then laid hold of the two girls and gave each several loud, hearty kisses. The result is that both young women have become famous throughout the empire.

Bismarck's habit of letting women kiss his hand has given rise to a strange custom. In certain circles women make collections of kisses of celebrated men. Some of these are valuable and most interesting—more so than all the stamp and coin collections in the world. Real Bismarck kisses, however, are exceedingly rare, and the Finselberg girls are the envy of all kiss collectors.—Berlin Cor. New York World.

Work of Wealthy Louisville Women.

A large number of Louisville working girls have been befriended by wealthy women in a way that they are not likely to forget. Miss Lucy Norton recently sent a Fourth avenue shop girl to Chicago and several points of interest in the northwest, paying every cent of the expense. When Miss Norton proposed to the young woman that she take the trip, she said she could not think of accepting such a generous offer. Miss Norton said if she did not go some one else would, so her offer was gladly accepted. A rich woman who lives in the southern part of the city recently took three shop girls to Chicago, paying all their expenses. It is also said that Miss Norton is paying the expenses of a Louisville boy who is attending one of the large eastern colleges.—Exchange.

The Lorgnette's Rival.

The lorgnette seems to have given place this season to the Louis Quinze eyeglass, which is a sort of compromise of the two extremes of lorgnette and prince nez. This is worn attached to a cord, or, if one likes things a little showy, to a slender chain of gold or silver matching the dainty trifle. To many persons the lorgnette—the long handled shell affair which is thrust in the corsets, to be drawn forth at unexpected moments and transfix its victim with a level stare—is an intolerable impertinence. There is an air about it certainly, but it is not a good air, except when it is in the hands of the most well bred and refined women.—New York Sun.

Jewish Women In Synagogues.

Some of the leading Jewish women of England have asked to be elected on the council of the synagogues, in the hope that some day a woman will be elected warden. "It will be seen," a Jewess writes, "how unfair it is to separate us from our fathers and brothers and sons—if we have any—and put us up in a gallery (I always call it a hencoop), just as if we were permitted to go to a synagogue as a favor, and it did not matter if we never came. This does seem absurd, especially to those who, like myself, have to keep alight the lamp of Judaism in our homes and prepare the wick of the oil for the religious illumination of the minds of our children."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Cora A. Stewart, a Vassar girl, has taken one of the three special fellowships offered by the Chicago university.

The school board of St. Paul has fixed the scale of wages for the teachers of that city regardless of sex.

Out of Albany's population of 100,000 over 15,000 are working women.

A Pretty Bad Picture.

For vulgarity, for baldness, for folly, ignorance, want of principle, petty weakness, intrigue and positive vice, you must go to the average society woman. Her one motive is self seeking. She is a bad wife, a bad mother and a false friend. For intellect she has a fair supply of shrewdness and cunning; for religion, a rotten conglomerate of emotional superstitions that do not improve her conduct; for virtue, the hope of not being found out, while for charity, good feeling, modesty and every womanly attribute she substitutes tact—the tact to respond outwardly to what she sees is required of her by different people.—Sarah Grand in Humanitarian.

A Habit That Paid Mrs. Clerke.

To a woman belongs the honor of this year carrying off the prize of 100 guineas which Mrs. Hannah Acton left for "the best work illustrative of the wisdom and beneficence of the Almighty in any department of science." Miss Clerke, the prize winner, lives in London, but is Irish by birth. Her love of astronomy is lifelong, and she can remember being a good deal teased about her habit, as a child, of slipping out into the garden at night to look at the stars. She has written a number of successful books on the science, but has had only two months' observatory work. During that time she worked almost all of every night.—London Letter.

The Churn That Soured.

Mrs. Elizabeth Akers Allen, who wrote that sweetest of household songs, "Rock Me to Sleep, Mother," read not long ago at a woman's club another of her compositions, which was much appreciated. It was a song of "The Old Time Up and Down Churn" of the farmer's wife and showed the relentless wear of that steel banded tub. Out of it in the years of its life rolled tons of butter and rivers of milk, and into it, alas! went the youth and beauty, the strength and patience, the health and temper of its weary worker till, almost too tired to die, she sank to her final rest. Mrs. Allen is a prominent member of Sorosis.—New York Times.

Solving the Tramp Problem.

A Kansas woman who has been elected police justice of her city has adopted a novel solution of the tramp problem. The first tramp who was brought before her for judgment was sentenced to two baths a day for 10 days and to hard labor on the stone pile, with the order that he should be fed if he worked and starved if he shirked. The prisoner survived the ordeal, but now the first question a tramp asks on approaching a Kansas town is whether the police justice is a man or a woman.—Milwaukee Journal.

An All Around Newspaper Woman.

Miss Eva Lovering Shorey, the new president of the Ladies' Aid societies of Maine, is business editor of the Bridgton News, published by her father. She possesses the journalistic instinct and can do good work in nearly any department of the paper. She is a lineal descendant of General Warren, who fell at Bunker Hill, and is a daughter of a war veteran of note, Major H. A. Shorey, the historian of the Fifteenth Maine. Miss Shorey is only 21.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Chicago's Woman's Library.

The woman's library at Chicago contains 7,000 volumes in 18 languages and represents 28 countries. It is to be placed in the permanent Woman's Memorial building, which is to be erected in Chicago, and will form a nucleus for the collection of the literary work of women in the future, as well as through its catalogue soon to be issued a complete bibliography of women's writings up to the present time.

A Field For Women Who Want to Wed.

Women who want to marry should turn their eyes toward Johannesburg in South Africa. There are at least ten men to one woman there. Every moderately attractive woman marries inside of a few months after landing. It is impossible to keep servants or feminine employees of any sort. Typewriters, nurses, cooks, maids, gardeners, all melt quickly away below the warmth of South African wooing.—Exchange.

Miss Braddon's Novels.

The assertion recently made in an English periodical that Miss Braddon had realized $500,000 from her novels was generally regarded as preposterous, but Henry Labouchere says in London Truth that he "is inclined to think that they have brought in a good deal more than the sum stated." The continuous sale of Miss Braddon's novels is almost unprecedented in the records of British publishers.

Women and Ceramic Art.

Women lead the progress of ceramic art in America. The Rockwood ware of Mrs. Storey of Cincinnati and the gold china of Miss Healy of Washington are the most distinctive novelties in our pottery exhibit at Chicago. It is said that Miss Healy's process is the cause of much argument and envy by European porcelain makers.—Chicago Letter.

American Women In Demand.

The Russian fancy for English and French ways has been superseded by a liking for things American. American women are sought as nurses and governesses, the favorite theaters bring out American pieces, while in St. Petersburg one of the most successful modistes is a New York woman of the name of Smith.—Philadelphia Ledger.

ONE CURE FOR INSOMNIA.

A Man From New York State Took a Little Active Exercise on Horseback.

"I once was a sufferer from insomnia," said a dentist who lives in one of the small villages of the state, as he sat talking with other men in the sitting room of an up town hotel, "but I got rid of the trouble."

"What did you take for it?"

"Bucking pony."

"Tell us about that, please."

"Well, you see, there was nothing the matter with me only I couldn't sleep. The doctor looked me over and said I wasn't suffering from any disease that he could detect, but all the same I could get only a few catnaps every night, and I felt that I would go crazy if such a condition of affairs continued much longer. A wise friend of mine advised me to try horseback exercise. Just at that time a man had brought to the village a string of ponies from the west. As the ponies were wild they were offered for sale cheap. I bought one. He was such a sleepy looking animal that we called him Rip Van Winkle. After we knew him better we dropped part of the name and called him plain Rip. The first ride I took on him furnished excitement for the whole village. Two men helped me to saddle and mount him in the stable. When the door was opened he shot out into the street like a streak of lightning.

"He ran full against the fence opposite the stable and broke several pickets. Then he reared up on his hind legs and came near throwing me over backward. Next he tried to stand on his head, but I yanked him back on his feet and drove the spurs into him. He started to run then, and I let him go as fast as he could leg it until we got to the Methodist church at the end of the street. A temperance meeting was being held in the church and the door was open. Before I could stop the pony we were in the church and half way up the aisle. Women screamed and fainted.

"Some of the men led Rip back into the street. I didn't dare to get off his back. When the men let go of the bridle he began to buck, and for a few minutes I thought my neck would be broken. He would go at a gallop when he went at all, but he would stop now and then to indulge in some bucking. Presently he changed his tactics and went from one street to another, across lots, jumping fences, turning up flower beds, damaging gardens and keeping me busy dodging the branches of fruit trees. The next street led to a turnpike, along which I spurred him for miles until he was covered with foam and nearly tired out.

"He seemed to be docile when I got him back to the stable. Next day, however, he was nearly as bad as when I first rode him, and every day for a fortnight I was obliged to race him along the turnpike several miles. My! my! How he did buck! I was so lame at the end of two weeks that I could scarcely walk to my office, but I could sleep. A few minutes after I got into bed at night I was sleeping soundly, and I awoke every morning thoroughly refreshed."

"Do you still ride the pony?"

"No. By the time I was cured of sleeplessness I had broken Rip to ride, and I sold him for double the sum I had paid for him. My advice to anybody who is suffering from insomnia is to get a bucking pony and ride as fast as he can. If no necks are broken, both man and pony will be benefited by the treatment."—New York Tribune.

To Remove Substances From the Eye.

To remove the solid particles from under the lids, it is sufficient to pull the lid away from the eye and to wipe the body with a piece of moist paper or the corner of a handkerchief. If it is under the upper lid, grasp the lid firmly between the thumb and finger, lift it from the eyeball and draw it down over the lower lid, and then allow it to slide slowly back to its natural position. The foreign body will be scraped off on the lashes.

The operation may be repeated several times. Or lift the lid from the eyeball, allow the tears to accumulate beneath the lid and forcibly blow the nose. Or place in the eye a few grains of flaxseed, which, forming a mucilage, will promptly bring relief. Or place across the upper lid the point of a pencil or bodkin, and turn the lid back over it. In this way the foreign particle is brought into distinct view and can be readily wiped away.—Washington Star.

A Long Underground Canal.

The canal between Worsley and St. Helens in north England is probably the longest and most remarkable canal of the kind in the world. It is 16 miles long and is underground from one end to the other. Many years ago the managers of the Duke of Bridgewater's estate filled its old mines with water that they might transport the coal under ground instead of on the surface. Ordinary canalboats are used, the power being furnished by the men. The tunnel arch over the canal is provided with cross pieces, and the men propel the boats along as they lie on their backs on the loads of coal.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Adam's Staff.

The Talmudic writers tell us that "the blessed God gave to the first man in paradise a staff which had been created between the stars. Adam gave it to Enoch, Enoch to Noah, Noah to Shem, Shem to Abraham, Abraham to Isaac, Isaac to Jacob. Jacob carried it into Egypt and gave it to his son Joseph. When Joseph died his household goods were taken to the house of Pharaoh. Pharaoh took the staff of Adam, which had descended to Joseph from the first man, and put it among his special treasures."—St. Louis Republic.

A Big Livery Bill.

A Bangor man who sent his office boy to return a hired team to a stable received several days after a bill for the board of the horse and another bill for the hire of the team for the time intervening. The stupid boy took the team to the wrong stable. The man said he wouldn't mind so much, but there seemed to be no limit to the number of cigars he is compelled to pay for at the instance of jeering friends.—Exchange.

A Woman Who Got Along.

The ability of a woman to get on alone in the world is sometimes questioned by her big brothers. But there are plenty of instances where women have been left in circumstances which would try the powers of the stoutest hearted man to the utmost and have come out triumphant. One of these was mentioned to a reporter the other day in connection with a rough side hill farm in a remote part of an inland town. "There," said our informant, pointing to the place, "lived Aunt Abby S—— when her husband died. She then had three small children, and another was born soon after. The farm was in poor condition and had about all the mortgage it could bear. Her husband's old father, feeble and fussy, was left on her hands.

"Did she send the old man to the poor farm, think you? Not a bit of it. She kept him a year or two, and he was so fussy she couldn't live with him. Then she hired a neighbor to take him, and she paid his board 12 years, when he died. She raised her children and brought the farm into good condition. She paid the mortgage, and when she died she left a good property free and clear of all debts. The boys hadn't the old lady's spunk, for there's a mortgage up there now, and nothing in the world but laziness did it. They had everything left ready to their hands and ain't had no drawbacks, 'cept losin their mother, but somehow the weeds have got the start of 'em, and I guess they'll keep it."—Lewiston Journal.

Will's Grave.

"That grave on the right hand of the path as you go down to the porch door; that heap of airth with no growth, not one blade of grass on it—that's Will Pooley's grave that was hanged unjustly."

"Indeed! But how came such a shocking deed to be done?"

"Why, you see, sir, they got poor Will down to Bodmin, all among strangers, and there were bribery and false swearing, and an unjust judge came down—and the jury all bad rascals, tin and copper men—and so they all agreed together, and they hanged poor Will. But his friends begged the body and brought the corpse home here to his own parish, and they turfed the grave, and they sowed the grass 20 times over, but 'twas all no use, nothing would ever grow—he was hanged unjustly."

"Well, but, Tristam, you have not told me all this while what this man Pooley was accused of; what had he done?"

"Done, sir! Done! Nothing whatever but killed the excise man!"—Rev. R. S. Hawker.

In Northern Alaska.

Juneau is the most northerly stopping place on the regular Alaska excursion route, and while it is not sufficiently near the pole to meet the midnight sun there is time during the summer season of the year for a good deal of light work.

What most troubles strangers is to know when to go to bed. The sun is apparently unwilling to pass and leaves its halo behind.

Twilight waits for dawn, or if there is an interval between I have not discovered it. It is not difficult to read ordinary print at 11 o'clock, and sitting on the deck at midnight (the ship keeps San Francisco time) watching the shadows cast upon the smooth water and the snowcapped peaks at a few miles distance is not uncomfortable with an overcoat.—Cor. San Francisco Bulletin.

The Tapping of the Deathwatch.

The so called deathwatch, dreaded by the superstitious, is a small beetle which has a very powerful joint in its neck and calls its mate by tapping with its head on the wall or on any surface where it may happen to be located. The noise is similar to that which may be produced by tapping with the finger nails on a table, and the insect can frequently be made to answer such taps.—New York Evening Sun.

A PERTINENT QUESTION.

The workmen of the mills in Fall River and other manufacturing places, after a shut down of several weeks, are working at reduced wages. They do not like to work for low wages, neither do their employers like to be forced to cut them down. Their employers are appealing to the ways and means committee to keep the protective tariff up so that they may pay good wages.

It is a pitiable picture to see the representatives of the working classes and of the great industries of this country pleading before a committee of "the working man's party," which apparently has no more ears to hear, or heart to consider, than a Chinese "Joss" to have their interests protected!

Mr. Sanford of Fall River spoke truthfully when he said to the committee: "You have it in your power to regulate the wages of our employes. Will you give them bread, or give them a stone?" There seems to be no reason for them to expect anything but a stone. The workingmen will have redress at the polls where ballots decide who shall serve and who shall make the laws.

"A WILD TEAM."

If the Louisville Courier Journal tells the truth Dr. R. C. McBride of Orange, Va., is going to drive to Chicago with the queerest team the world has ever seen. He has a five-gander team raised from a pair of American wild geese, which he trained to harness, and which draw him around in a small wagon and in a small boat; and now he proposes to build a balloon of sufficient size to float him in the air, and with his wild geese attached drive from Virginia to Chicago. He claims he can make twenty-five miles an hour against a twenty five mile wind, and that the voyage can be readily made in this way. He says his team can make a mile and a quarter a minute in a quiet day, and that after he has made his trip to Chicago he will present his gander-team to Captain Symmes to make a trip to the north pole with, after his steamer has become ice-bound in the polar regions. Dr. McBride is sure Symmes could start north in the morning, make three or four hundred miles and then get back to supper. After McBride has made his Chicago excursion the public will seriously consider his polar project.

HE SPENT HIS MONEY.

John Stephenson, the inventor of omnibuses and street cars, must have had a poor opinion of the fellow who invented posthumous bequests. He lived more than three-score and ten years, and left a property of $50,000; but he had spent for private charity and the public good in his life-time a million dollars. He spent fifty thousand dollars to have good roads at his home in New Rochelle, N. Y.; and he spent forty thousand in building sewers and drains to free his town from malaria. He gave twenty five thousand towards the building of a Methodist church there, and spent sixty thousand in rebuilding the Rose Hill Methodist church in New York city. He also gave liberally to the support of the Drew seminary and Methodist institutions in the south. He lived unostentatiously, always said he did not mean to leave a large fortune, and he enjoyed distributing his own wealth while alive and witnessing the results of his liberality. He believed in doing good with his money, and showed more wisdom than many men are endowed with.

THE VALKYRIE.

The non-arrival of the Valkyrie after being twenty-six days out has naturally excited some anxiety concerning her safety. Had there not been during her passage one of the severest hurricanes for many years along the Atlantic coast, there would have been no fears raised as to her safety.

It is idle to say that she is not overdue, that fast clipper built vessels require from thirty-five to forty-five days for a passage, and that therefore there is not the slightest cause for even surprise at this fast single-sticker's non-arrival. The Navahoe in every way an inferior boat to the Valkyrie, made the passage in seventeen days; and the Genesta in twenty-five days. Most of these yachts have made the passage across the Atlantic in less than thirty days.

Although Lord Dunraven claims he is not at all uneasy concerning the Valkyrie's failure to be reported or to arrive, he must have expected her to have made better time or he would have started her for America earlier. If the Valkyrie is not overdue, the race on account of her non-arrival has been postponed until Oct 5, to give her time to get ready for the contest, and it is strange she should not have made an earlier start if she was rated a slow ocean sailer to have met the requirements of the programme on this side of the Atlantic.

The truth is in crossing the Atlantic the Valkyrie has not met the expectations of American yachtsmen

A FARM FOR ALL.

When Uncle Sam swung open the gate to the Cherokee strip Saturday as a signal for 150,000 of his children to start in and stake out a farm apiece on his new six-million acre patch, a scene was witnessed which is purely American, and which cannot be seen in any other land upon the globe.

The rush of settlers, the staking out of farms, town lots and cities, and the settling of them, will all be completed in the next sixty days, and the boomers are so sure of building up there at once a thrifty commonwealth that they have begun to talk about asking to be admitted to the union as a state.

There is no doubt that in this eager, pushing multitude of men, women and children there are many rogues and adventurers, and thousands who will not be able to subsist until they can work the land and get a crop. But there will be thousands of these plucky and brawny pioneers who will build homes there and form the basis for a thrifty and prosperous state.

APPEALS FROM BEAUFORT.

Since the days of the Johnstown flood there has not been such a water swept and distressed section in this country as the Sea Islands. The whole country is a scene of devastation and destitution. The sea not only swept away the houses, horses, cattle and goods, but there is not a stalk of corn standing in the fields, or a pod of cotton on the plants. There are two thousand people without shelter, and at least six thousand more who are dependent upon charity for support. The people of the Carolinas cannot relieve all this distress, and the cities of New England are contributing liberally to their relief. This is one of the greatest calamities that ever befell the coast residents of this country, but the generous giving of the people robs it of more than half its distress.

Whatever may be the effect of their appeal (the Philadelphia textile workers) to the ways and means committee, the latter cannot fail to be impressed by the spectacle of over 200,000 persons in Philadelphia facing possible want. Nor can they fail to notice the earnest, non-partisan spirit of the movement.—[American Wool and Cotton Reporter.

Haven't Got Started Yet.

It would seem that democracy has made the country suffer enough, but it hasn't fairly got started yet. Wait till the tariff reform mill begins to grind out taxed sugar, taxed coffee, taxed tea, etc.—[Kansas City Journal.

Verified Facts.

The tariff preserves the home market against foreign monopoly, stimulates domestic production and competition, reduces the cost and price to the consumer of all manufactured fabrics, while paying the highest wages to labor. These facts are recorded and verified in prices current, industrial tables and statistics and well known to every consumer, yet the free trade parrots go on with their idiotic repetition that "the tariff is a tax."—[North Adams Transcript.

Leave the Tariff As It Is.

Leave the tariff substantially where it is, and with the return of prosperity the revenues of the government from customs duties will increase without a return to systems of taxation abhorrent to Americans and only inaugurated during war times.—[New York Press.

A Thrill of Pride.

Every American will feel a thrill of pride on reading the announcement that the new gunboat Castine had on her trial trip made the remarkable run of over sixteen knots an hour, so far exceeding the speed requirements of the government as to entitle her builders to a bonus of $60,000. This is a great triumph for the inventive genius and mechanical skill of the Maine shipbuilders.—[New York Tribune.

Undemocratic Ideas.

That sternly logical journal, The New York Sun, speaks of Dr. Wells in terms of personal respect, but it has no patience with his "undemocratic" ideas. It doesn't believe that the enhanced taxes on beer and tobacco would yield anything like the amount of revenue he figures out, but that is a minor consideration. The fatal objection to his plan is that it is forbidden by the Chicago platform, which, rightly read, proscribes the raising of all the revenue needed by means of a tariff on imports, and hasn't a word to say about screwing up the internal taxes, which are relics of war times and odious to the people.—[The Courant

AN ENTHUSIASTIC WHEELMAN.

He Travels 311 Miles and Tries the Roads of the State—Signboards Scarce.

Mr George A. Sawyer of Brooklyn, N. Y., who annually spends his summer vacation in Columbia, Conn., brought his bicycle with him the present season, and spent a portion of his time in making a tour of the state, visiting every county except Windham. The trip with stops, occupied about two weeks, and the distance traveled was 311 miles. Leaving Columbia Aug. 1, the following named places were visited: Hartford, New Britain, Naugatuck, Bridgeport, Branford, Guilford, Saybrook, New London, thence to Columbia. He reports a very pleasant trip.

As regards roads Mr. Sawyer says he found them best in the vicinity of Hartford, West Hartford, Elmwood and New Britain. He found the worst roads between Groton and Norwich, on the east bank of the river. The roads between New Britain and Waterbury and between Waterbury and Bridgeport and along the shore side generally in very good condition, with the exception of the roads between Branford and Guilford, and Lyme and Niantic. Between New Haven and Bridgeport the roads were excellent. He found a fine new road bed between New Milford and West Haven. He found the roads in the eastern part of the state generally poorer than in the western or any other part. Mr. Sawyer remarks that much trouble and delay in inquiring the way might be avoided if guide boards were more numerous.

The Norwich Weekly Courier is the best weekly newspaper in New England at 50c a year.

A man's wife should always be the same especially to her husband, but if she is weak and nervous, and uses Carter's Iron Pills, she cannot be, for they make her "feel like a different person," so they all say, and their husbands say so too!

"How to Cure All Skin Diseases."

Simply apply SWAYNE'S OINTMENT. No internal medicine required. Cures tetter, eczema, itch, all eruptions on the face, hands, nose, &c., leaving the skin clear, white and healthy. Its great healing and curative powers are possessed by no other remedy. Ask your druggist for SWAYNE'S OINTMENT.

Piles! Piles! Itching Piles!

SYMPTOMS—Moisture; intense itching and stinging; most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form, which often bleed and ulcerate, becoming very sore. SWAYNE'S OINTMENT stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in most cases removes the tumors. At druggists, or by mail, for 50 cents. Dr. Swayne & Son, Philadelphia.

Not one in twenty are free from some little ailment caused by inaction of the liver. Use Carter's Little Liver Pills. The result will be a pleasant surprise. They give positive relief.

Avoid Danger.

Don't put an enemy in your mouth to steal your teeth. Avoid deleterious dentifrices. Rely on SOZODONT. Nothing can be purer or more certain to prevent the teeth from becoming diseased. After each brushing they glitter like pearls, and the gums grow rosy red.

If there ever was a specific for any one complaint, then Carter's Little Liver Pills are a specific for Sick Headache, and every woman should know this. They are not only a positive cure, but a sure preventive if taken when the approach is felt. Carter's Little Liver Pills act directly on the liver and bile, and in this way remove the cause of disease without first making you sick by a weakening purge. If you try them you will not be disappointed.

ROBBED HIMSELF.

John P. Jackson Arrested for Embezzlement.

HIS STORY WAS PURE FICTION.

Injuries Could Not Be Found by a Physician.

BOSTON, Sept. 18.—John P. Jackson of Medford was arrested this morning by Chief of Police Holmes of that city on a charge of embezzlement, and later arraigned before Judge Pettingill of Malden. Jackson a few days since reported that his house had been entered by a burglar who managed to get away with some $600 in cash and papers which were under Mr Jackson's pillow. At that time it was alleged that Jackson had a terrible struggle with the burglar and was badly injured, since which time he has been practically confined to his house.

After hearing his story in regard to the matter last Friday morning, Charles E. Stewart, the bookkeeper for John A. Stewart, by whom Jackson was employed had grave doubts as to the reliability of the narrative, and at once took measures to swear out the warrant, in the absence of his brother.

This morning early John A. Stewart, who has returned from Maine, endeavored to have an interview with Jackson. This was refused by the family, who stated that Jackson was unable to see any one on account of the injuries he received

At the Hands of the Burglar.

At 7:45 o'clock, Chief of Police Holmes, together with Sergeant W. G. Ewell, went to Jackson's house and requested him to take a ride. This Jackson refused, saying he was unable to go or be taken out of the house.

Leaving Sergeant Ewell in charge, Chief Holmes went for Dr. N. F. Chandler, the city physician, who made an examination and reported that he could discover no injury that would prevent Jackson from going out if he so desired. He was accordingly placed under arrest.

The reasons given for the delay in arresting Jackson, as stated by Attorney W. P. Martin, counsel for Mr. Stewart, was because he desired to be quite sure that Jackson had been falsifying in regard to the burglary. He did not desire to have the man arrested if it was at all probable he was innocent of the crime.

For several days an investigation has been in progress, and while all the details are not made public, the prosecution felt justified in causing the arrest of Jackson

On the Charge of Embezzlement.

All of the signs of a burglary were carefully examined, and the police claim that some were very amateurish, to say the least.

The place where the chisel was used upon the door at the head of the cellar stairs, through which the burglar was supposed to have entered, showed evidence of having been used on the wrong side.

There were also other facts which lead the police to doubt the story told by Jackson, which, at present, Attorney Martin did not believe should be made public in the interest of his clients.

The case is considered by the citizens a peculiar one, and the truth or falsity of Jackson's tale have been freely discussed.

After the departure of Chief Holmes with his prisoner, Sergeant Ewell remained and made a search of the house.

It is understood that the employer of Jackson's daughter, Lillian, fully believes the story of the burglary, and as he is a wealthy man there is no doubt but that Jackson will be properly defended by counsel.

Jackson some time ago began the collection of bills owed the concern, and latterly appears to have taken upon himself practically the whole of this part of the business, although it is now claimed that the elder Stewart was not aware of this.

Up to last Friday it is charged that Jackson had collected over $600 that he had not accounted for. Then came the burglary by which the money disappeared.

TROUBLE FOR KANSAS.

Eastern Capitalists Withdrawing Their Loans as Fast as Possible.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—A World special from Topeka says: The Providence Trust company, one of the largest holders of Kansas mortgages, has written its agent at Great Bend that it is closing its Kansas business as rapidly as possible, and that any extension of standing loans is impossible.

Charles M. Sheldon, just returned from the east, says he talked with scores of capitalists, and not one wanted Kansas securities. He says eastern bankers are afraid of the financial schemes of the parties in power in Kansas. Until the death of crank legislation is assured, he says, all the eastern money now invested here will be withdrawn as rapidly as possible. This means trouble for thousands of farmers.

NICARAGUA'S RULER.

General Santos Zellaya Formally Elected President of Republic.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—The Herald's Nicaragua correspondent cables: The Constituent assembly held its first regular session on Saturday. Its first act was to issue a decree liberating all political prisoners. It then received from its junta government authorization to [illegible] the government affairs of the republic.

General Santos Zellaya was then formally elected president of the repulic, and General Ortiz vice-president. They will hold office, provided they are not overthrown by a new revolution, for five years when a new constitution will be adopted. Peace prevails throughout the republic, and there is every probability that it will continue.

PLUNDERED THE TOWN.

Dalton, O., at the Mercy of an Organized Gang of Robbers.

DALTON, O., Sept. 18.—The inhabitants of this town were at the mercy of a most daring gang of robbers Saturday night. That they were many in number, well organized and the attack carefully planned was evidenced by the successful manner in which they plundered the town and baffled all attempts at capture.

Scarcely a house remains but its occupants can relate some thrilling adventure which they had passed through. The first attempt was made upon McDowell, Jameson & Co's hardware store. After robbing the store the thieves scattered over the town, one man as a rule going to a house and plundering it singlehanded. One of the robbers forced an entrance into the house of William Sellers and gave him and his wife a stupefying drug. He then ransacked the house from top to bottom.

The police were notified that the towns of Lawrence and Greenville, east of here, were similarly raided Saturday night.

Pastor Ordained.

SOUTHBORO, Mass., Sept. 18.—Rev. Martin F. Mevis today was ordained to the pastorate of the Pilgrim Congregational church as a successor to Rev. D. E. Adams of Wellesley.

REIGN OF TERROR.

White Caps Organized in Mississippi. Governor Stone Appealed To.

MEMPHIS, Sept. 18.—A reign of terror prevails among the planters and ginners all over northern Mississippi. The white caps have organized in nearly every county, and posted notices on gins forbidding the owners from ginning cotton until the price reaches 10 cents a pound.

Several ginners disregarded the notices and opened their establishments for business. The white caps promptly burned them to the ground, and warned the owners that another attempt to resume would be punished by death.

This has spread consternation among the ginners and planters, whose financial failure stares them in the face on one hand if they do not market their cotton; while on the other the gins will be burned if they do not obey the edicts of the outlaws.

Governor Stone has been appealed to by a number of the gin owners for protection.

THE MANCHESTER MURDER.

Jose Correiro Formally Arraigned For Trial in Supreme Court.

TAUNTON, Mass., Sept. 18.—Jose Correiro of Fall River was arraigned in the superior court this morning, charged with the murder of Bertha Manchester of Fall River. He listened through an interpreter to the reading of the indictment, and pleaded not guilty.

He asked permission to speak, and asked for counsel, as he had no money or friends. I. De Terra, a Portuguese speaking lawyer of New Bedford, then told the court that the Portuguese consul has become interested in the case and would aid in Correiro defense. The prisoner was asked if he had any preference for counsel and said that he would like De Terra. Judge Hopkins reserved the appointment for a time.

CHINESE NOT TO GO.

Geary Exclusion Act to Be Extended Six Months More.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18.—Representative McCreary chairman of the house committee on foreign affairs, has been in conference with the president and secretary of state in the preparation of a bill to extend for six months the provisions of the Chinese exclusion act. The measure which was submitted by Dr. Everett was found to be defective in many respects. The bill which is being proposed at state department is intended to meet the protest of the new chinese minister. The action of the secretary of state in proposing this modification is understood to be satisfactory to the Chinese government. The president has requested the foreign affairs committee, through Chairman McCreary, to hasten action, in order to prevent international complications, by showing the good faith of the government in meeting the issue.

The six months provided in this bill, it is intended, shall enable the Chinese in the United States to register under the existing act, and those who are not eligible to registration to be taken out of the country by the Chinese government. Chairman McCreary will have the bill ready to report at the next meeting of the committee, after which it will be brought before the house and put on its passage at an early day.

Burglars Make a Big Haul.

PHILLIPS, Me., Sept. 18.—Burglars last night blew open the safe of Wilbur & Co., wholesale grain dealers, and secured cash and papers aggregating at least $30,000. They also blew open the safe in the Phillips & Rangely railroad station, badly damaging one end of the building and securing $100 in money. There is no clue to their identity.

One Third of Town Burned.

FINDLAY, O., Sept. 18.—At 4 o'clock yesterday morning the flouring mill at Patterson, Hardin county, caught fire, and before the flames could be checked over a third of the town had been destroyed, 10 business blocks, six residences, the postoffice building and all its contents, the total loss being $60,000, with but $6000 insurance.

Another Treasurer Short.

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 18.—The supreme lodge of the Knights and Ladies of Honor refused Saturday to re-elect E. J. McBride of this city supreme treasurer. An expert committee has found a discrepancy of $6000 in his accounts. McBride has been treasurer for 16 years.

A HUNDRED YEARS

Washington Celebrates the Capitol's Centennial.

SKETCH OF THE GREAT BUILDING.

First President Laid Its Cornerstone—Burned by the British.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18.—Washington today celebrated with appropriate ceremonies the centennial anniversary of the laying of the cornerstone of the National Capitol, Sept. 18, 1793. The original ceremony was for the times an imposing one, under the care of the Masonic fraternity of Virginia and Maryland. Washington was then president and himself a distinguished Mason. Accurate descriptions of the occasion are rare; indeed, there is said to be only one, that published in an Alexandria paper Sept. 25, 1793.

The building thus officially begun has had many changes and passed through many vicissitudes, growing finally, however to a generally acknowledged one of the finest pieces of architecture in the world. No one has ever attempted to classify or characterize the style of architecture of this wonderful building as to place it among any of the recognized ancient or modern types. In fact, it is composite, or, rather, of itself, peculiar and alone.

The burning of the national Capitol by the British is one of the most tragic events in American history. The invaders were commanded by General Ross and Admiral Cockburn. As they were on their march to the Capitol early in the evening, flushed with their victory at Bladensburg, a shot was fired from a building near by. It was evidently intended for General Ross, but only killed his horse. The house was burned. This did not take long, and then the march was continued to the Capitol. Soon this was reached. Several volleys were fired through the windows and a regiment of redcoats marched upon the floor of the house of representatives, now Statuary hall, with fifes and drums playing "The British Grenadiers." The soldiers formed around the speaker's chair, and Admiral Cockburn, having been escorted to the seat of honor, called the excited soldiers to order with mock ceremony and shouted:

"Shall this harbor of Yankee democracy be burned? All for it say aye."

There could be but one response to this proposition, a tumultuous affirmative.

"Fire the building! Fire this nest of Republicanism!" went up from the mob. The passageway between the two wings was formed of boards—pitch pine at that. These were torn from their places. The library of congress was sacked of its books and papers, which were scattered over the floors. The great paintings adjoining the senate chamber, in which the supreme court now sits, were cut from their frames with sabers, and the whole mass of combustible material set afire.

The British waited only long enough to see their work well under way, when they left the blazing Capitol and marched up Pennsylvania avenue to apply the torch to other public buildings. Had they waited the Capitol would have been hopelessly destroyed, but they had not been gone more than ten minutes when a heavy rain fell, which continued all evening and quickly put out the fire.

The foundation and walls were saved. The architect was recalled to Washington, and after an inspection reported that the Capitol could be easily rebuilt. He was ordered to begin work, and at once applied himself to the task and in 1817 had so well advanced it that Bulfinch, a Massachusetts architect, the builder of the state house in Boston, who succeeded him, was able to carry out the original design, and in 1827 was able to report its completion to congress. It had cost the government $2,433,844.

THE NATIONAL CAPITOL AFTER ITS DESTRUCTION BY THE BRITISH.

The building has since that time been several times extended and remodeled and has now cost, including furniture, works of art, etc., $16,000,000.

Today's exercises consisted of three principal features. First, a civic, military and naval parade; second, appropriate ceremonies at the capitol, and third, an evening entertainment in and about the capitol building, to consist of a reception, or Martha Washington party, in the rotunda of the capitol, under the auspices of the Dames and Daughters of the American Revolution, with representatives from all the states and territories; an illumination of the building and grounds, and a grand vocal and instrumental concert at the east front of the capitol.

The program at the capitol was an interesting one including the following: Address, President Grover Cleveland; oration, William Wirt Henry; address for the house of representatives, Speaker Charles F. Crisp; address for the supreme court of the United States, Chief Justice Fuller; address for the District of Columbia, Hon. John W. Ross, of the board of commissioners.

THE HISTORIAN.

The "Man in the Iron Mask" did not wear a mask of iron. It was of black velvet, secured by steel springs.

The ever burning lamps found in ancient tombs were as real as the mouse that gnawed King Solomon's staff.

The "round tower" at Newport is not a castle, nor was it built by Danish explorers. It was a mill, erected in the early days of the colony.

Wolves were not extirpated in England in the time of Edgar. Three hundred years later rewards were paid by the king for wolf scalps.

Sir Isaac Newton was not a smoker, although he had a reputation of the "smoking philosopher." He did not use tobacco in any form.

Diogenes never lived in a tub. The story that he did so has no better origin than a comment by a biographer that "a man so crabbed ought to have lived in a tub like a dog."

The "Prisoner of Chillon" did not suffer in the cause of liberty. He was a troublesome rogue sent to prison for mischief making and spent his term there in making indecent verses.

Charles V did not rehearse his own funeral in his own lifetime. On the contrary, he disliked the thought of death so much that all persons were forbidden to use the word in his presence.

The Carthaginians were not more savage than the Romans, and from all we can learn of them were at the time of their overthrow even further advanced in the arts and sciences. Punic faith was quite as reliable as Roman faith.

The blood of Rizzio, Mary Stuart's favorite, cannot be seen on the floor where he was murdered by Darnley and the other conspirators. What is seen there is a daub of red paint, annually renewed for the benefit of gaping tourists.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

THE MODISTE.

Double and triple skirts are in high vogue, and tunics, draped skirts and paniers are sure to follow.

Syrian velvet in two tones like shot silk is made up with bengaline, moire or heavily repped victoria silk

Ruffles of some sort, plaited or full or scantily gathered, as best suits the wearer, still appear on many of the new bodices.

Present fashions commend very full but not very stiff skirts, varying the length according to the occasion for which the dress is required.

Dressy black satin capes for the autumn are shown ornamented with neck and shoulder trimmings of black or ecru guipure lace and colored velvet ribbon bows.

Heavy corded bengaline silks, powdered with small flower and foliage patterns, are used upon new fall gowns as waistcoats and sleevepuffs and linings to velvet or satin capes.

Many gowns of rich silks, brocades, satin stripes and rough utility goods are left untrimmed on the lower portion of the skirt—a reaction from the overdecoration of skirts of two seasons past.

The large sleeves will remain in vogue for the fall and winter months at least and in all probability for very much longer, but the shapes are gradually growing fuller around the elbow and considerably reduced in size at the top.

Among the trimmings for autumn hats are full half long ostrich plumes, the close curled Prince of Wales feather tips, wings of various forms and sizes, sea swallows and a trio of canary birds or six humming birds set upon the front of the crown.—New York Post.

THE STOCK MARKET.

Dealings in Leading Securities in Boston and New York.

BOSTON, Sept. 18.—In the outside market call money is quoted at 9 to 10 per cent, and time money is nominally 6 per cent.

So far as the stock market goes, the week opens without any important change in actual conditions. In sentiment, however, the drift is toward a reaction. This is evinced by the slight impression which good news of any kind has upon the course of prices. Saturday's New York bank statement was the best that has been made since May. The business situation as reflected in the clearing house returns does not show the improvement that many expected, but still it indicates a slight gain. A week ago the total clearings were 37.9 per cent. below the corresponding week a year ago, and the week just ended they were only 34.7 per cent below.

Despite this, however, the tendency this morning was downward. London came about as our close, except for Louisville and Nashville, which was ¼ down, but it played no part in transactions. The bull pool, which has been supporting sugar refining, evidently has withdrawn its assistance for the time being, or is trying to market some of its purchases for the common opening 1¼ down at 83, declined further during the morning to 82¼. The preferred was off 1 to 88. General Electric likewise started off weak, down 1¼ at 40¾, but later added ¼ to that figure. Dominion coal dropped ½ to 17¼ and Pullman 1 to 170, while Bell Telephone was steady at 190.

In railway shares, Atchison weakened from 19¾ to 19⅜ and Union Pacific ¼ to 21¾. Chicago Burlington and Quincy opened ¾ weaker at 83 and dropped again to 82½. In local shares, Fitchburg preferred was off ⅜ to 78¼, and New York and New England, opening ¼ below the last sale at 24¼, slid to 23¾. Railroad bonds were dull but steady.

One reason why the Russian czarowitz can never marry the Princess Victoria of Wales, with whose name gossip has connected his, is that they are first cousins, and the marriage of first cousins is strictly prohibited by the canons of the Greek church.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

PORTEOUS
MITCHELL.

A lucky woman is rarer than a white blackbird, and yet there would be hundreds of them in Norwich if they would only watch for our advertisements in the local papers.

Every announcement of ours through the public press tells of something out of the usual run. It may be just what you need. If you buy at the right time you are considered "lucky." You will wear diamonds some day—as the saying goes—if you make it a business to follow our advertisements.

FURS! FURS!

It was a little rough on the manufacturer, but it was a matter of business with us. A manufacturer of Fur Garments was pushed for ready money. We made him a cash offer for 100 garments. He preferred the nimble sixpence to the slow shilling. The consequence is we have the 100 garments of our own price and are willing to give our customers all the benefit of the good trade. They go on sale today. Prices are like this:

19 Black Hare and Coney Capes, 30 inches long, well lined, for $5.00 each, regular value $7.50.

22 Astrachan Capes—box shape—28 inches long, heavy satin lining, for $10 each, regular value $15.

31 Astrachan Capes—military shape—28 inches long, $12.50 each, regular value $18.

24 Astrachan Capes—military shape—30 inches long—$19 each, regular value $25.

Only 100 of these Capes. When they are gone comes regular prices again.

In addition to these four special items we are showing a full line of Fur Capes that are correct in style and low in prices, all lengths—20 to 34 inches. Styles—Box and Military—Also novelties, such as Fur Capes with butterfly effects.

Look for our Advertisement in Thursday's Bulletin.

Ladies' Mackintoshes have struck us in full array. All prices, from $2 to $15.

Of course the $15 garment is imported. The variety and elegance displayed this season in our stock of Ladies' Mackintoshes, and particularly little prices, will delight all lookers.

Cravenettes are very popular, particularly for traveling. A Cravenette garment for $7 that should be $10 ought to prove tempting.

The annual meeting of the town of Preston was held Monday afternoon to hear the annual report of the selectmen, treasurer and school visitors and to transact town business.

The Woodstock fair opens today at South Woodstock. This is the thirty-fifth annual meeting of the society. The track attractions will be horse racing and trick-bicycle feats and racing.

The Second School District Petition.

The three county commissioners met residents of the Second school district of Preston Monday in the school building in relation to the petition that either an addition be built to the building or the county home children be provided a school of their own, alleging that the present quarters are not roomy enough to receive them. A member each of the state board of health and of charities must by law be called in to assist the commissioners in their decision.

HERE'S TO THE THIRTEEN CLUB.

The Thriving Organization's New Quarters in the Shannon Building.

The Thirteen club, that mystic and mysterious organization whose name is synonymous with good cheer and good fellowship, is now comfortably installed in its enlarged and modernized quarters on the fourth floor of the Shannon building. And it is with very pardonable pride that its members have decided to invite a public inspection of the apartments today. From two till nine o'clock visitors will be received and entertained, and an orchestra will add its inspiration to the occasion.

There are five main rooms—the parlor, committee, billiard, smoking, dining and reception rooms, and all are so cozy and tasty and cheery and home-like that one wants at once to penetrate the veil of secrecy or modesty which enshrouds the identity of club members, and extend hearty felicitations. An exceedingly pleasing effect to the eye have these new quarters. A delightful symphony of light pink and gold from the skilful touches of the painters, easy chairs and couches which lull one to repose and reverie, attractive pictures, graceful draperies, handsomely stained floors and soft carpets, all in perfect taste and harmony, combine to make a most favorable impression on the fortunate visitor.

The club is on a firm financial footing, and has a host of well-wishing friends. It is about as lusty a yearling as the record affords, and tips the membership scale at over one hundred.

Personals.

H. L. Eaton, formerly of Norwich, spent Sunday in town. Today he leaves on a business trip through the west for a New York house.

Mr. J. G. Bill and wife of Glasgo have returned home after a five weeks' visit to the world's fair.

The friends of Mrs Charles Colt of Broadway will be glad to learn that she is making rapid headway to recovery from the effects of her recent severe fall.

Senator Robertson's Barn Burned.

The fine barn of Railroad Commissioner Alex. Robertson of Montville, was burned to the ground at 4 o'clock Monday afternoon. The horses and the rolling stock were saved, but the hay, which filled the loft, was all consumed. The origin is unknown.

The Willimantic Fair.

The eleventh fair of the Willimantic association will begin today, lasting three days. The programme makes today bicycle day, with eight races for prizes aggregating $600. Richard Fairbanks and A. D. Smith, Jr., among the fastest riders of the Rose of New England Wheel club, have entered in the bicycle races. OBITUARY

Death of Mrs. Mary Zehrung.

News was received in the city Monday of the death in Lincoln, Nebraska, of Mrs. Mary Zehrung, on Sept 13. Mrs Zehrung was the daughter of Daniel and Mary Connell and was born in Greeneville, Oct. 7, 1835.

She removed to Buckingham, Iowa, April, 1853, with her parents, and in Nov., 1854, married John Zehrung of Toledo, Iowa. In 1869 they removed to Blair, Neb., and in 1874 to Lincoln, Neb., where she died. Mrs. Zehrung was the mother of two children. The eldest died while young; the younger, Frank C., is a prosperous business man in the drug trade at Lincoln, commencing business in 1881. Her brother, Daniel Connell, is editor of The Republican, a live paper at Gladbrook, Iowa. Relatives and friends in this vicinity will regret to learn of Mrs Zehrung's death.

Jonathan W. Hooker.

Jonathan W. Hooker, one of the oldest and best known citizens of Norwich, died at his boarding place, 77 Franklin street, Monday evening, at the age of 81 years, after a long illness.

Mr. Hooker early in life followed the occupation of a clock-keeper, but about 1859 or 1860 he entered the boot and shoe trade, forming a copartnership with Richard Goodwin under the firm title of Hooker & Goodwin, and later carried on the same business with Mr. Nehemiah Smith, under the firm of Smith & Hooker.

About thirty years ago he began business as a real estate agent, and followed that business as long as he was in active life.

He was an ardent republican and served his party in positions of honor and trust.

He was a member of the Norwich Croquet club, and twenty years ago was one of its best players.

He was a man of good judgment and fairmindedness, and was respected by his fellowtownsmen.

Mrs. Hooker survives him, and in her bereavement she will have the sympathy of a wide circle of friends and acquaintances.

SCHOOL ELECTIONS.

Officers Chosen and Reports Presented in the Central District.

Polls opened for the annual school election of officers and meeting of the Central district in Town hall at 4 o'clock Monday, and closed at 7.30 o'clock. Registrars Joab B. Rogers and W. F. Corkery appointed Alonzo E. Hill moderator, who presided during the balloting and at the meeting. Eight ladies cast votes. Miss Hattie Cross of Broadway was the first female voter to appear.

At the closing of the polls, Messrs. W. F. Corkery and John Powelson acted as tellers. Fifty votes were cast, unanimously electing the following ticket:

Members of the board of education for three years—Burrell W. Hyde, M. M. Whittemore, Richard H. Nelson.
Treasurer—Hugh H. Osgood.
Clerk—M. M. Whittemore.
Collector—William F. Hill.

Treasurer Hugh H. Osgood made the following summarized report, which was accepted and placed on file with the secretary, M. M. Whittemore:

Mr. Burrell W. Hyde, of the board of education, closed the meeting with the presentation of the following report:

No. of schoolhouses	6
of school rooms	31
of school rooms occupied	30
of sittings	1,307
of terms	3
of day sessions	190
of children registered in 1891	1,551
of children registered in 1892	1,535
Average No. per term in 1891 and 1892	908
No. per term in 1892 and 1893	930
Increase	27
Average attendance, 1891 and 1892	816
attendance, 1892 and 1893	835
Increase	19

It is believed that in attendance, discipline, general instruction and training, the past year has been as well if not better utilized and as fruitful in results as any year in the history of our schools.

As a kind of experiment, some attention has been paid to physical exercises, and have been adopted in many of the school rooms. They have been practiced with considerable energy and regularity, but for the want of a well arranged and progressive system that would develop good and healthful habits, the results have not been as successful as their importance would seem to warrant.

Closely allied to the physical exercises employed to guard and cultivate the health of the child, are the means employed to secure proper light and ventilation in the school rooms.

With the changes made at the Broadway school house last summer and the Broad street house this summer, it may be confidently asserted that all the school rooms are well lighted, but of the ventilation as much cannot be said. We feel, on the contrary, that the provision for ventilation is entirely inadequate. Nearly all our school houses were built before the importance of thorough ventilation was realized, and before the methods of heating best adapted to secure a change of air and promote health came into practice.

The organization of the schools continues in general as in former years, but some slight changes have been made. I would call your attention only to one. The several classes heretofore designated as 9th, 8th, 7th, etc., to 1st, beginning with the lowest or entering class, are now named in reverse order, calling the lowest or entering class first grade, the next second, and so on to the ninth or graduating class. These designations are more convenient because they indicate the year of school work of any given grade and hence each year's work can more easily be compared with that of other graded schools.

The ninth class, numbering 86, was graduated at the close of the year, June 23.—Only once before in the history of the school has so large a class been graduated. fifty of these graduates were examined for admission to the Free Academy, a large proportion of whom were passed and will become students of that institution.

For the successful work accomplished in all the buildings and grades, the teachers should have grateful recognition. As a rule they are enthusiastic and progressive and with commendable earnestness they seek the ways and means for increasing the efficiency of their work.

It is believed that the school year just commenced promises to be one of the most successful in the educational history of the district.

West Chelsea School District.

The school meeting in the West Chelsea district was held at 8 o'clock p. m., Palmer Bill moderator, Charles E. Briggs box tender, W. R. Cowan, Jr., clerk.

SUGAR MANUFACTURERS HEARD.

Trades and Workingmen's Reform League of New York

PRESENT PETITIONS

To the Ways and Means Committee—Beet Sugar Industry.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—A. H. Gallahue of New York opened the hearings before the ways and means committee today by presenting the petitions of the Associated Trades and Workingmen's Reform league of New York city, demanding that the duty on vegetables, products of the Bermuda islands, be removed or greatly reduced, so that the middle class and working people may be able to purchase and use the fresh vegetables which are necessary for their health in the early spring.

Henry Oxnard of Nebraska spoke against the repeal of the sugar bounty clause of the McKinley bill. Congress had no right, he said, to repeal this section; the time it should continue had been fixed and appropriations had been authorized for the purpose of paying the bounty. For the past forty years we had been paying out millions to foreign producers for sugar. In 1880 there was only one beet sugar factory in this country, producing 800 tons of sugar annually. In 1890 capital was put into the business and the output was 3000 tons. In 1891 this amount was doubled, and in 1892 it was increased 180 per cent. over the previous year. In 1893, the current year, the output would reach 22,000 tons. The United States was the largest sugar consumer in the world, consuming yearly 68 pounds per capita.

We produced about ten per cent. of the home consumption and consumed about thirty per cent. of the world's sugar supply. The industry would do more, and would have done more, if it had not been for fear of the tariff revision. This had scared capitalists. They would never have entered the business unless the bounty clause had been enacted. If it was to stand more capital was ready to go into the business, but if a change was to be made not an additional factory would be built.

T. R. Cutler, a Utah sugar beet manufacturer, indorsed the statement made by Mr. Oxnard, and spoke of the success of the industry in his state. Beet raising in Utah, though largely done by irrigation, had proved profitable. Last year ten thousand tons had been raised, and this year it was hoped that the production would be increased. He could not continue the manufacture without the bounty. They could only work 100 days out of the year, as the product (beets) was exhausted in this time, but they had skilled labor to pay all the year round.

E. P. Fowler, representing the Anaheim Co-operative Beet Sugar association of California, said the company had been promised money to build their plant, but the money could not be had as long as there was talk of repealing the bounty clause.

John Dymond of Louisiana said the sugar industry was the leading industry of his state and half a million people depended upon it. We now produce one-eighth of the sugar needed for home consumption and could soon produce it all. The Louisiana planters had protested against the bounty clause, favoring a tariff. When the law was enacted they accepted it in good faith. Money was borrowed and improvements made. The acreage was increased, as was the production per acre, and additional factories had been built. The planters regarded the law as a contract that should be kept.

John A. Hubbard of Louisiana, representing the rice growers, appealed for the retention of the tariff, stating that it was absolutely necessary to allow the industry to be continued in Louisiana and the Carolinas. In Louisiana 200,000 acres were developed to rice, producing 285,000,000 pounds a year and giving employment to 25,000 men, upon whom fully 100,000 people depended for support.

Col. William Lamb of Norfolk spoke for the coal interests of Virginia and West Virginia. Nothing, he said, had given more hope to Virginia and West Virginia than the coal industry, and he appealed to congress not to reduce the duty and ruin the business.

E. H. McCullough, president of the Westmoreland Coal company in Pennsylvania, said his company, in the rates made for the year, placed coal in Boston at $2.75 per ton. Nova Scotia coal, he was informed, could be placed there for $2.60 a ton, duty paid. If the duty was removed it would ruin the industry, or oblige the company to squeeze the laborer and railways.

John Abbott, representing the miners of the Cumberland region, presented their petitions protesting against a reduction of duty on bituminous coal.

Gov. McCorkle of West Virginia made a strong appeal for the retention of the present duty on coal. If the duty was taken off the burden he said would fall upon the shoulders of the inhabitants of his state.

Mr. Turney asked if the governor was not a democrat and a believer in tariff reform.

The governor replied in the affirmative.

Mr. Turney asked what duties the government would reform?

The governor replied that he would take New England manufactures. He would make a fair reduction, not singling out any one industry.

Mr. Reed said that he wanted him to help the New Englander whose mills were closed, while his mines were still running. He wanted him to address an argument to the committee requesting them to help the New Englanders.

Mr. Bryan asked the governor to name some West Virginia production on which the tariff should be reduced.

The governor replied that he did not recollect any at present.

The committee adjourned until tomorrow, when the hearing will close.

The Cholera.

HAMBURG, Sept. 19.—Four fresh cases of cholera and one death were reported by the health officers today. The harbor district, which suffered most a year ago, is free from the epidemic.

HAMBURG, Sept. 19.—There is positive proof that the cholera cases reported here in the last few days, were caused by the drinking of unfiltered water from the Elbe. The cases have been about evenly distributed through the city. A leakage from the Elbe into the city water works was discovered on Saturday, and has been stopped up. The officials have warned the people to purify their cisterns and to boil all water used for drinking.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 19.—The fall session of the U. S. district court was opened here this morning. An unusually large number of important cases were disposed of.

Dennis O'Brien of Norwalk was fined $75 and costs for violating the United States liquor tax laws. Hiram Green of Stonington received a sentence of five years in state prison for breaking into the Mystic postoffice. Pietro Vecessi and Vittori Ferrari of New York, the New York counterfeiters, were found guilty, but sentence was deferred. Dwight W. Sturtiff of West Ashford pleaded guilty to the charge of keeping an illicit distillery. Sentence deferred. The case of Edgar T. Swift, the defaulting Birmingham bank cashier, and Joseph Ayoub, the New York smuggler, were continued to the winter session.

At the close of the ceremony a number of incidents occurred. The home club gave the couple tickets to the World's fair, and the club officials gave them a set of furniture.

House of Representatives.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—After an objection was made to a resolution offered by Mr. Flynn of Oklahoma, calling on the secretary of war for information relative to the shooting of settlers on the Cherokee strip by United States soldiers the house resumed the fight over the federal election bill; and the yeas and nays were ordered on Mr. Burrows old motion to dispense with the call of committees.

The democrats came within five of a quorum, securing 173 votes. The filibustering continued, then a quorum appeared on a call, but on motion to dispense with further proceedings Mr. Burrows demanded tellers. A quorum appearing, the yeas and nays were demanded and Mr. Burrows moved a reconsideration, which made another roll call necessary.

Mr. Burrows' motion was laid on the table—yeas 180, nays none.

The house then adjourned.

PATROLLING N. Y. & N. H. TRACKS.

Citizens Armed With Revolvers on Watch for Tramps

DEPREDATIONS COMMITTED.

They Obstruct the Workings of the Semaphore Signals.

PORT CHESTER, Sept. 19.—Fifteen citizens of Harrison patrolled the tracks of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad in the vicinity of Harrison last night. Each man was armed with revolvers and threatened to shoot all suspicious characters who might resist arrest.

For some time tramps have been congregating in the vicinity of Harrison. Their rendezvous is in an abandoned car, about half a mile east of the Harrison depot. During the daytime they scatter through Westchester county and western Connecticut, but at night they all return to Harrison. During the nights numerous depredations have been committed by these men. Chicken roosts have been robbed and large quantities of farm produce taken.

As their number increased they have become more aggressive. On Saturday night a gang of twenty-five or thirty collected near the signal tower above the Harrison depot. At midnight, Owen Manderville, the towerman, found they were obstructing the workings of his semaphore signals, and ordered them away. The interruption to Manderville's work was unintentional, as in passing back and forth they stepped upon the wires moving the levers. Manderville finally threw a stone at the group. This enraged the gang and they surrounded the tower. Two of them rapped on the door and demanded admission. Manderville refused it. They then began stoning the tower.

Manderville had nothing with which to protect himself, and after giving the alarm to men in the towers on either side of him he took refuge from the flying missiles in a protected corner. Help was sent from the Harrison depot and the tramps fled.

Last night fifteen men, headed by Joseph McGuire, the baggage master, and Albert Southgate, station master, began to patrol the track.

Just as the second heat had been completed in the 2.27 pace, a rain and hail storm swept over the track causing the event to be postponed until tomorrow. Hyannis won the two heats in the postponed event with remarkable ease. Fulda easily won the 2.30 class trot and Haven, the favorite, took the 2.16 pace.

LUMBERMEN WORRYING.

Rise in the Kennebec Threatens Millions of Feet of Logs.

BANGOR, Me., Sept. 19.—There was a rise of four feet yesterday in the up river water, occasioned by the rain of Saturday and Sunday, and it is expected that the water will go 1½ feet higher still.

There was a very heavy rain, and it extended over a wide extent of territory. It did not come amiss, as it was needed after a somewhat dry time, but it has caused the lumbermen a great deal of anxiety, as it seriously threatens the safety of millions upon millions of feet of logs, worth an immense sum. The lumbermen are taking every precaution to save their valuable property.

At Sunkhaze alone it was estimated that 50,000,000 or 60,000,000 feet of logs were held in the dead waters, and the raftsmen yesterday were hurrying about in every direction making all secure, preparatory for the freshet. One small lot of logs broke away, but was stopped and held before any serious damage was done.

All appearances point to another heavy rain, which will raise the river still higher, and it is expected that much damage will be done.

HAWAII HUMMING.

Sugar Plantations Fully Busy and the Government Firm.

HONOLULU, Sept. 8.—The advisory council of the new government received a letter from President Dole a few days ago suggesting that on account of his health he thought it necessary for him to resign his office.

The council unanimously decided that he be granted a leave of absence for an unlimited time.

The president has decided to go to Wood ranch for three weeks for rest.

The British Columbian line of steamers running here is arranging to carry mails.

The current revenues for the first six months show a large increase when compared with the corresponding period under the monarchy. The cash balance in our treasury is more than double what it was a year ago. Public confidence has been restored. There is now a steady demand for government bonds.

There is absolutely no danger of the provisional government being shaken or overthrown. Even should the ultimate action of the United States be delayed for months, Hawaii will still be found waiting and confident that nothing will be done to check the political [illegible] of the island.

Our sugar planters are running their plantations in full blast, reaping somewhat of a harvest at the increased price of sugar.

His wife, who survives him, is a daughter of Captain George Munday of Fall River.

DEMOCRATIC CAUCUS.

Duty of Every Member to Attend Sessions of the House.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—A caucus of democratic members of the house was held this afternoon. Representative Holman presided and Representative Alderson acted as secretary. There was a full attendance of the democrats who had been present during the proceedings in the house, and the action taken, it was reported, had the hearty and unanimous concurrence of all who participated. Speaker Crisp offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That it is the sense of this caucus that it is the duty of every democratic member to attend the sessions of the house, in order that the public business may be considered and disposed of.

He supported his motion in an earnest speech, pointing out the necessity that existed for democratic representatives doing their full duty to their country and to their party, and honestly endeavoring to redeem the pledges made to the people who had entrusted them with the duty of legislating in their behalf.

Mr. Enloe, of Tennessee, moved to amend, by adding "and vote" after the words sessions of the house, which was accepted by the speaker.

Mr. Fithian of Illinois moved to add the following to the speaker's resolution and the caucus agreed: "And that when the house meets tomorrow it is the sense of this caucus that it remain in session continuously until a quorum is obtained, voting in favor of repealing the bill for the repeal of the federal election laws."

There was some discussion as to the expediency of pressing the consideration of the repeal bills and the overwhelming sentiment of the caucus as expressed was favorable to early action.

The following resolution offered by Mr. McMillan of Tennessee on this point was adopted: Resolved, That it is the sense of this caucus that the house should proceed, at the earliest practicable day during the session, to the consideration of the bill or bills repealing the laws authorizing deputy marshals and supervisors of elections at the polls. After adopting the resolution as a whole the caucus adjourned, having been in session but a little over an hour.

The caucus was called, it is understood, at the instance of Speaker Crisp, who was excessively annoyed over the failure to secure a quorum of democratic members in the house. The indignation over the failure to get a quorum was not confined to the speaker.

A Kentucky Town Threatened with Destruction by Fire.

OWINGSVILLE, Ky., Sept. 19.—Fire broke out at 4 o'clock this morning in Peed & Easterigg's livery stable on Henry street. Pierce's blacksmith and wagon shops, Peed & Easterigg's coal yard and H. C. Sherman & Co.'s lumber yard were quickly swept away and ten or twelve houses on Water street, occupied by negroes. Several other buildings in various parts of the town were destroyed. The fire is still raging and the entire town is threatened. The loss so far is estimated at $150,000.

Sherwood Foresters' Convention Ended.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 19.—The Sherwood Foresters' convention came to a close this afternoon. Two important changes in the constitution were adopted. It was voted that hereafter the Knights of the Sherwood Forest be not governed by the action of the supreme body, the Ancient Order of Foresters, in holding their conventions, but hold them when and where they may elect. It was also voted that no officers hold the same offices two consecutive terms. The next convention will be held in Newport, R. I.

INTEREST UNABATED

In the World's Religious Congress Despite Hostile Criticisms.

CHICAGO, Sept. 19.—Despite the hostile criticisms of divines such as Joseph Cook and Dr. Henson, who do not believe any good can come out of the World's parliament of religions, the interest in the several congresses at the Art institute continues unabated.

This morning in the hall of Washington, Professor Max Muller, the eminent philologist, the Rev. H. R. Haweis, Prof. Minas T. Cheraz of Persia and Professor A. B. Bruce of Glasgow sat in a row and exchanged expressions of surprise concerning the size of the audience before them.

The Persian delegates spoke upon "Toleration," urging that the widest latitude should be given to the sincere advocates of every belief that pointed man to an upward condition.

"Greek Philosophy and the Christian Religion," was the topic selected by Professor Muller, who compared the two and illustrated wherein they agreed and differed.

Dr. Haweis spoke upon "Music, Emotion and Morals."

Professor Bruce discussed "Man's Place in the Universe."

Professor Sylvester Scovel, in a profound paper, considered the question as to what constitutes a religious as distinguished from a moral life.

Testimony Favorable to the Accused.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 19.—In the Schloss murder trial this afternoon, Dr. Wolff, the medical expert of Hartford, exhibited photographic and microscopic evidence for the defense. His observations tended to displace the theory that Miss Schloss died from the effects of a criminal operation at the hands of the doctors under arrest, but that she had previously made an attempt at relief by purgative pellets. His testimony was not completed when the court adjourned till tomorrow morning.

Suicide of a Bowdoin College Graduate.

DOVER, N. H., Sept. 19.—Dr. Charles C. Pierce, a graduate of this year's class of Bowdoin college, committed suicide in his office here this evening, by taking Prussic acid. His age was 23 and he was a son of United States Marshal A. T. Pierce.

Some Have Not Responded.

Returns have been received at the state secretary's office from most of the town clerks in the state, saying that they have complied with the secretary's request in destroying all envelopes in their possession. The town clerks of Bloomfield, Southbury, Griswold, Woodbury and Mansfield have not been heard from.

In the city court Tuesday morning Richard Allen of Greeneville paid $10 and costs—$15 86, for breach of the peace.

Dennis O'Leary, residence immaterial, as he explained to Captain Burdick when brought in drunk by Officer Ebberts, went to jail in default of $7 86.

Arthur Matthews of Greeneville, accused of theft, had his case nolled on the payment of actual costs—$9 38.

Military Discharges.

The following members have been discharged from the military service of the state for the reasons assigned:

Third Regiment—Company D, expiration of term, Private Henry N. Albin, to date from September 8; Company F, for disability, Private Thomas J. McGinness to date from September 15; Company I, expiration of term, Corporal Elias H. Pincus, to date from September 15.

Superior Court.

The court came in at New London yesterday at 10 o'clock. The trial of the state against Amasa D. Main was finished and resulted in his conviction, and the court sentenced him to one year in state prison. Edgar Gardner pleaded guilty to a breach of the peace and in consideration of his having been in jail two months the court sentenced him to thirty days in jail.

Costropanni was sentenced to eight months in jail.

There being no more business for the criminal court it was adjourned without day at one o'clock.

Only three cases remain on the docket undisposed of, one in which the jury disagreed and the other two were continued on account of absence of witnesses.

Tramps Numerous and Evil-Minded.

There are so many tramps, writes a correspondent from a neighboring town to The Willimantic Chronicle, that the women are in constant fear of them. The tramps are so numerous that they have been very insolent. So far they have done nothing unusually bad, but probably it is because the opportunity rather than the inclination has been wanted. Many of the women are living in such dread of tramps that before answering door calls they arm themselves so as to be able to resist if they are attacked. It is feared that when the cold weather comes the tramp evil will be a great deal worse.

Gifts to Otis Library.

The Otis library is again favored by a gift which adds to its collection of genealogies the history of James Morgan of New London, and his descendants, from 1607 to 1869, a valuable work by the late Nathaniel H. Morgan. Among its interesting features is a portrait of the late Samuel C. Morgan of this city, once president of the Quinebaug (now First National) bank.

The same donor has presented to the library a number of volumes of The Church Review, an Episcopal periodical of rare literary merit.

Burglars at Watch Hill.

Some time Saturday night a cottage at Watch Hill was entered, and an oxidized silver clock, weighing twenty pounds, was taken. Entrance was gained by breaking a window pane, although the perpetrators shed blood during the operation, as was told by the blood stains on the piazza.

Trunks containing rugs, mats, and other household furnishings, were tampered with, but the locks held fast. During the same morning two suspicious characters were seen to leave Watch Hill in a small rowboat, rowing towards Stonington. The Westerly police have been notified, and are now engaged on the case.

Daughters of the Revolution.

Mrs. D. E. B. Randolph Keim, regent for Connecticut of the Daughters of the American Revolution, in October will make her fifth tour in the state, organizing new chapters and endeavoring to stir up a fresh enthusiasm. She is very ambitious that this tight little state should hold the lead in membership and organized chapters, as she does at present. She urges that all who intend uniting, hasten to send in their names to the registrar and secure blanks for application.

Special Acts.

The recent Connecticut general assembly enacted 171 cubic inches of special and private legislation. These liberal figures represent the cubic contents of the linen-covered volume of "Special Acts and Resolutions" which Secretary Phelan has recently issued. The superficial contents are still more stunning in their stupendousness. Each page contains 33¾ square inches of printed matter, and as there are 1,228 pages in the volume a brief recreation at the multiplication table shows that the recent session brought forth 41,445 square inches of special legislation. The statistics of the situation confirm and emphasize the belief which we have repeatedly expressed, that the legislature ought to be prohibited by the constitution from creating corporations except under general laws.—[Waterbury Republican.

"SPIKER" MURPHY'S PART.

No Lost Courage Badly in the Cranston Prison Tragedy.

The Boston Globe, in telling of the tragedy in the Rhode Island state prison, tells of "Spiker" Murphy's conduct as follows: "Murphy, who was the companion of Elwood in the meeting, although armed and the evident conspirator in the scheme to gain liberty, made no attempt to attack the officer. When the shooting began Murphy turned and ran out of the rotunda into the shop, and from there into the yard, when he threw away a lot of weapons, with which he had presumably intended to do some of the officers bodily harm if he had a chance.

"The jailbirds all pronounced the conduct of Murphy most cowardly, and the officers also look upon him as 'a poor tool.' He was armed with a big knife, a four-pound hammer, taken from a pair of scales, and a bar of iron.

"Murphy was taken into a dark cell, and there he will remain for a long time to come, as he has been in two or three bad breaks at the prison.

"Murphy is not an old prisoner. He was sent to Cranston in the early part of '89 for participation in the murder of Waterman Irons, an aged shopkeeper on Christian hill. "Pete" Hackett was Murphy's 'pal,' and Hacket has never been seen about here since the crime, which was a most cowardly one."

The Providence Journal says that the prison officials regard Murphy as the originator of the project. Ever since he was incarcerated for the murder of the venerable Waterman Irons five years ago, he has devoted himself to jail breaking plans and to inciting others to engage in efforts to escape. He has established quite the most notable record in this respect of any man who has ever been confined within the massive granite walls at Cranston.

"A WOMAN OF THE CENTURY."

A Learned Article Upon the Philosophy of the Voice.

The recent issue of Woman's Magazine, New York, contains a learned article upon the philosophy of the voice, by Mrs. Annie F. Sheardown, who has many relatives and friends in this city. Mrs. Sheardown's portrait and biographical sketch appear in the new compilation, "A Woman of the Century," where pleasant reference is made to her novel profession, that of voice specialist in "head tones," she having been a pupil of the celebrated elocutionist, the late Madame Seiler. Mrs. Sheardown's studio is in the Hastings building, Tremont street, Boston.

In her magazine article she advances many novel theories regarding the relation existing between the voice and the body, while her presentation of the Delsarte philosophy of expression is extremely logical and clear, winning her a conspicuous place in the issue.

SCHOOL DISTRICTS.

The Report on the System Discloses Some Striking Incongruities.

Connecticut and Rhode Island are the only states in New England still retaining the school district system. Massachusetts and New Hampshire were convinced of the undesirability of it some time ago, and Maine and Vermont threw over the district system for the town system this year. Even in Connecticut and Rhode Island the sentiment against the old system is growing, as shown by the fact that it has been abolished in twenty-nine towns in this state and in many of the towns in Rhode Island.

In the last report of the commissioner of the school fund are tables giving the number of children of school age in each town and the number of school districts into which each town is divided. A glance through these tables discloses some interesting information. In New London county Salem has 99 children and seven school districts and Voluntown is not far behind with eight districts for 254 children. Lisbon has six districts and 91 children, and Lebanon has 351 children and no less than sixteen districts. Ledyard has fourteen districts for 382 children, and Lyme thinks seven districts none too many for 189 children.

ARMOUR VERSUS THE STATE.

He Will Fight the Oleomargarine Law as Unconstitutional.

Armour & Co of Chicago are preparing to lock horns with the commonwealth of Connecticut.

The recent legislature passed a law specifying that all oleomargarine sold in this state must be a different color from butter. Armour & Co. have been informed by eminent counsel that this law is unconstitutional. The firm has sent agents into this state and is prepared to test the law.

The United States government requires that a special tax be paid by all persons retailing oleomargarine. No local dealers have obtained government licenses for its sale. But one license has been taken out within the jurisdiction of the local internal revenue office and that was obtained by a dealer in Birmingham.

Charles W. Pickett, deputy collector of internal revenue, will investigate and if he obtains evidence of any dealers handling the article without a license arrests will follow.

It is believed, though, that Armour & Co.'s agents will deal principally with restaurants, hotel and boarding house keepers. In this way they will not come in conflict with the federal government, as these classes of persons are not required to obtain government licenses. It is a violation of the state law, however, to use oleomargarine that is colored like butter, and the state officials will probably make many arrests.

AN ECCENTRIC PAIR.

They Sleep in Straw and are Genuine "Hayseeds."

Asa Potter of Poquonoc was in New London Tuesday on his semi-annual visit. Mr. Potter and his brother Ben are two of the most eccentric individuals to be found anywhere in New England.

They live alone in an old tumble down hut near Poquonoc plains, and what they subsist on their neighbors cannot tell.

In the coldest part of the year the two old fellows can be seen strolling around barefooted and with scarcely any clothing on. Whenever they meet anyone they will not engage in conversation unless for a brief time and then on only commonplace matters.

At the hut they sleep upon a bundle of straw on the floor. Very often when they are strolling through the village their hair and clothing are filled with hay and straw, giving them the appearance of veritable "hay seeds."

They are a pair of inoffensive old men, and mind their own business as they journey through life.

EASTERN CONNECTICUT.

New Voters—Scarcity of Teachers—Miss Alice Beckwith Resigns.

The registrars of voters met Saturday and put six names on the list "to be made."

Sheriff George A. Wood was in town Monday on official business.

No teacher has been found for the Central district. Good teachers are scarce at any price.

Miss Alice Beckwith is sick with typhoid fever, and has had to resign her position in the Montville schools.

The roads are receiving much needed repairs.

JEWETT CITY.

Personals—A Circus.

Mr. H. F. Cheney leaves town Tuesday morning for Manchester, N. H., to take his old position in the Amoskeag mills.

Miss Lizzie M. Jaffernand Mr. William O'Soule are two delegates to the World's fair this week.

Cole's circus gave a very acceptable and attractive show in town Tuesday.

Friends of Mr. William H. Wilson, formerly of this town, will be pleased to learn that he has a fine position in Winnemucca, Nevada.

The new coal yard track is completed and in running order.

PUTNAM.

Murphy Out Again—Superior Court—Various Matters.

Edward C. Murphy, the mail clerk who was seriously injured in the Dodgeville, R. I., disaster is again out, although he has not yet thoroughly recovered. Mr. Murphy has a host of friends in Putnam and vicinity, and they hope he will soon be able to resume duty again.

The case now on trial in the superior court is that of the town of Canterbury vs Elderkin Waldo of that town. This is the outcome of a case that was tried in Norwich about a year ago before Judge Crump. The case will be an interesting one, as it has several singular features. Both sides are ably represented. The town claims that the defendant, who was a selectman, neglected his duties, and sues him for $1,000 damages. The court adjourned at 5 o'clock.

George Brusso is off on a two weeks' trip to the World's fair.

Before Judge Chester, Monday afternoon, the liquor case against Frank Cruger was called. The liquors were ordered confiscated. An appeal was taken. Cruger was placed under $200 bonds.

Mr. Murphy, the distinguished temperance orator, who is delivering successful lectures in Willimantic, has been secured to lecture in Putnam the last three or four days of this month.

SIXTY DAYS MORE.

The Aspinook Work Being Driven.

The Aspinook dam at Jewett City is nearly or quite three-quarters done, and its resisting power is hardly to be estimated. The engineer, Mr. Gardner, is putting in a gravel bank in the up-stream side, that of itself would seem sufficient, if it could be held in place, to withstand any flood, and taking both together the security seems complete. The head gates will be in soon, and then the whole time will be given to the canal and the wheelpits.

Much of the excavation is done. Two of the immense L's are ready for their roofs, and the foundation of the third is well nigh in, while a part of the foundation of the main building is ready for the brick.

The machine shop is done, and some of the machines are already in place.

The next sixty days ought to see the work so advanced that frost will not hinder its onward progress inside if it does out, and to this contractors and engineer are directing their thought and their energies.

IN BOSTON MARKETS.

Produce Dealers Doing Good Business With Profit.

THE FARMER CANNOT COMPLAIN.

Butter Market Short of Supply—Trade in Vegetables Large.

BOSTON, Sept. 19.—The Boston produce markets are very busy just now. Almost every dealer is doing a good business and takes care to let no business go through his hands without some profit to himself. The farmer, however, cannot complain, for his products now find a ready sale at prices which are quite remunerative.

The Butter Trade

is rather short of supply. Receipts are growing quite light, so as to necessitate the withdrawing of stock from cold storage. During the last few days the withdrawals have become quite heavy and should this long continue next spring will see a great scarcity of butter. This would be but a repetition of the conditions last spring, when all kinds of butter was scarce and high. It is certainly hoped that western producers will soon be able to supply our current needs, that the stock in storage may remain untouched. Prices for butter this week are: Northern creamery, from 27 to 29 cents, according to the quantity purchased. New York and Vermont dairy butter is in fair demand at from 21 to 24 cents, and cold stored butter at 24 1-2 to 26 cents.

Trade in Vegetables

has been large and prices have been a little better this week. Conditions which have kept the market in somewhat limited supply are the cause for the upward tendency in prices. The potato crop is being harvested and the supply is coming in in goodly amounts. The best Houltons bring 80 cents per bushel, with Aroostook and rose and hebrons at a few cents less. Bristol Ferry rose and hebrons bring $1.75 per barrel. Tomatoes are holding quite steady at about 40 to 50 cents per bushel for both ripe and green. Onions are 75 cents per bushel. Marrow squash 60 to 75 cents per bushel, while turban brings $1 to $1.25. Corn brings all the way from 40 to 75 cents a bushel, and celery is coming in for about $2.50 per long box. Green string beans bring $1 to $1.25 a bushel; also limes and horticultural at the same figure.

The Fruit Market

never looked better than today, with its large supply of every variety in the finest perfection of growth. There is a good demand for all fruit and prices hold quite steady. Many grapes are now coming and some are very fine. Concords and Delawares are most wanted. The former are worth $3 a case of 12 baskets, while the latter bring $1.50 for the same amount. The supply of apples seems quite limited. Some Gravenstein fruit looks fine and brings as high as $3 to $4 a barrel. Harvey's are worth $2.75 to $3. Porters and Pippins bring about $2.25 to $2.50 per barrel.

Cranberry picking on Cape Cod has commenced and fruit that arrived last week brought $4 to $4.20 per barrel, but the trade has hardly yet set in.

The demand for pears is quite good. Bartletts go for $1.25 to $1.75 a bushel while what few seckles are on the market sell for $2.50 per bushel.

The Quotations.

BEEF—The word comes over from Chicago that 9½c must be obtained for the best steers in the beef market, and salesmen are trying for that price. At the same time light, grass cattle are selling very low, with the market oversupplied. Quotations are at: Choice fancy steers, 8½@9c; prime, 8c; good, 7½@8c; light, 5½@6½c; extra heavy hinds, 11½@11½c; good, 9@11c; light, 8@9c; heavy fores, 4½@5½c; light, 3@4c; backs, [illegible]; rattles, 3½@4c; chucks, [illegible]; rounds, [illegible]; rumps, 10@14c; rumps and loins, 12@14c; short ribs, [illegible]; loins, 10@17c.

BUTTER—The butter market continues very firm. New York is up another ½c, and this market is likely to follow today: Fancy creameries in small packages, [illegible]; western creamery, extra, [illegible]; firsts, [illegible]; imitation creamery, [illegible]; factory, [illegible]; northern creamery, extra, [illegible]; northern dairy, [illegible]; eastern commonary, extra, [illegible]. These are prices for round lots. Jobbing lots and fancy lots cost more.

LAMB AND MUTTON—Mutton and lambs are selling rather better than late last week, though the supply is ample: Choice to fancy lambs, 10@11c; common to good, [illegible]; poor and ordinary, [illegible]; Brightons, [illegible]; yearlings, [illegible]; muttons, [illegible]; poor to good, [illegible]; choice heavy Brightons, [illegible]; choice eastern veals, [illegible]; common to good, [illegible]; Brightons and fancy, [illegible].

POTATOES—Potatoes are dull and the market is easy. Sweet potatoes are still more easy: Eastern, barrels, $1 [illegible]; New Hampshire rose and hebrons, [illegible]; Houlton rose and hebrons, [illegible]; Aroostook rose and hebrons, [illegible]; New York stars and burbanks, [illegible]; Virginia cloth heads, extras, [illegible]; Jersey [illegible] double heads, [illegible].

MEAL—The market on [illegible] is firmer. Oatmeal is steady. Kiln-dried cornmeal for export, $2 25 per bbl; bag meal, [illegible]; yellow granulated, $2 [illegible]; ground, cut and rolled oatmeal, $4 10@4 70 per bbl; rye, [illegible] per bushel for dealers, and at [illegible] from the trade in job lots; rye flour, $3 10@3 75 per bbl as to quality.

FLOUR—Flour holds very firm, with wheat firm. Trade is a little staggered by the advance in prices, however: Fine and supers, $2 [illegible]; extras and seconds, $2 [illegible]; Minnesota bakers', clear and straight, $3 [illegible]; winter, clear and straight, $3 [illegible]; winter patent, $3 [illegible]; spring patent, $4 [illegible].

CORN—Corn is quoted at 51@51½c for Chicago No. 2 yellow, to arrive, 51½c for No. 2 yellow, and at 50½c for No. 2 corn. The spot market is irregular, with sales of steamer yellow at 50½c and at 51½c. The quotations are at: Steamer yellow, [illegible]; No. 2 yellow, [illegible]; steamer mixed, [illegible].

OATS—Oats are fairly steady, with clipped to arrive at [illegible]; No. 2 white, [illegible]; No. 3 white, [illegible]. The spot market is steady, with sales of clipped at [illegible] and up to [illegible]. Quotations are: Clipped, [illegible]; fancy, [illegible]; No. 2 white, [illegible]; No. 3 white, nominal, at [illegible]; mixed, [illegible].

CHEESE—The cheese market is very firm, and another advance is promised for today or tomorrow: Northern full creams and twins, 10@11c; fair to good, [illegible]; western choice, [illegible]; fair to good, [illegible]; sage, [illegible]. Liverpool is cabled at [illegible] for white and [illegible] for colored.

APPLES—Choice lots of apples are very scarce indeed, and fancy prices are paid. But there is little demand for windfalls and ordinary lots: Pippins and Porters, $2 50@3 00 per bbl; Harvey, $2 50@3 00; Gravensteins, $3 [illegible]; common lots, [illegible].

HAY—No changes are to be observed in either hay or straw. Millfeed is firm, with sack spring bran at $17; sack winter, $17 75@$18; sack middlings, $18 [illegible].

EGGS—Eggs hold very firm, with only a moderate trade. Quotations are firm at: Western, 18½c; Michigan, 19@20c; provincial, [illegible]; eastern and northern, [illegible].

BURGLARS SHOT AT.

But They Got Away With $100 In Cash and Valuable Papers

PAWTUXET, R. I., Sept. 19.—The residence of Waterman W. Dexter, 75 Spring street, was entered by burglars about 3 o'clock this morning, and they made off with Mr. Dexter's pocketbook, containing about $100 in money and valuable papers.

After effecting an entrance at the rear of the residence, the thief or thieves proceeded straightway to Mr. Dexter's sleeping room, and after rifling the pockets in that gentleman's clothes, started to tour the house in search of other valuables.

The noise aroused Mr. Dexter, who with revolver in hand, proceeded to the parlor, where he espied a masked man and blazed away at him. The burglar made a rush for Mr. Dexter, but the latter kept out of the intruder's reach and was unharmed.

Mr. Dexter fired three shots, some of which he believes must have taken effect, for a revolver, probably dropped by one of the burglars, was afterward picked up in the yard, and there were numerous stains of blood on the lawn. Mr. Dexter is an insurance agent, and some of the papers missing are quite valuable.

YELLOW FEVER.

One Death in Savannah and Other Cases Being Considered.

SAVANNAH, Sept. 19.—C. F. Johnson, who was taken ill on Sept. 13 with what was pronounced to be yellow fever, died at Brunswick at 5 o'clock this morning. He had been sick a little over three days.

Of the cases reported up to noon yesterday, 18 remain under treatment. The doctors refuse to give out any information as to the progress of the disease until after the meeting of the board of health at noon. Apparently well based rumors are to the effect that a number of persons under observation will be declared to have yellow fever at the meeting today. The doctor refuses to allow names of patients to be given out for publication.

The death of Johnson has increased the general gloom. The fact that he was sick but a short time and that the black vomit set in in its worst form tends to convince people that the disease is increasing in virulency as well as spreading throughout the town.

TREFETHEN'S TRIAL.

Points of Law Discussed and Some Testimony Heard.

BOSTON, Sept. 19.—The same crowd of curiosity seekers were in attendance at the Trefethen trial at the Middlesex county court house, when "Court" was called this morning.

Counsel for Trefethen have put in a plea of former acquittal on the three last counts of the indictment. The counts which the plea aims are the second, third and fourth. The ground is that the finding of the jury at the first trial, which was a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree, must amount to a verdict of acquittal on all counts in which Trefethen is not charged as principal.

The question of law was argued by counsel for the state and for the defence, the court reserving its decision. The evidence of Charles Mills, civil engineer, and Mrs. Mary J. Davis, mother of the murdered girl, was heard.

FRED AMES' WILL.

All Property Goes to Family—No Public Bequests Made.

BOSTON, Sept. 19.—J. R. Benton, counsel for the late Frederick L. Ames, this morning filed the will of the deceased millionaire, in the Bristol county probate office. The will contains no public bequests. All the real estate in Easton and the personal property there is given to the widow.

The Boston residence is already her property, and the personal property in it is given to her by the will, as is also the stable property on Newbury street, Boston. The widow is also given $500,000 outright.

The residue of the estate is given in trust to Samuel Carr, Oliver Ames 2d, and Oliver W. Mink for the benefit of the widow and children, the trust estate being first subjected to an annuity of $80,000 to the widow.

His Mistake.

I kissed her cheek. 'Twas quickly done,
Though half in love 'twas half in fun.
She turned and quick rebuke she gave,
And bade me straight her pardon crave—
Perhaps because I took but one.

Her smile was radiant as the sun
E'en as her chiding was begun.
Again, because I was her slave,
I kissed her cheek.

I saw across her visage run
An angry frown. I was undone.
This last offense was far too grave.
I surely should have been more brave,
For her it was no more than none—
I kissed her cheek.

THE RED RIBBON.

Uncle Fred was simply a very nice fellow whose name was Frederick Barrois. He was of a good disposition. That could be read on his youthful face, such a youthful face that on seeing the narrow red ribbon in his buttonhole people sometimes asked him for his story. And he, to avoid the embarrassment felt in speaking of one's self, answered somewhat maliciously:

"I was born 36 years ago, and since then—nothing ever happened to me."

But it was not so. It happened to him that he had bravely won this red ribbon which showed so advantageously upon his breast. Having been sent to Tonquin as a cavalry officer, he had freed a battery of artillery which the enemies already believed in their possession.

Unfortunately it also happened to him during the fight that he had received a bullet in the side.

As he had been too recently appointed lieutenant to be promoted to the rank of captain, he received instead the cross of the Legion of Honor, and this greatly helped to heal his wound. Still, however well healed it might have been, he remained very weak. He was [illegible] hope to become stronger.

And this is how, for the last fortnight, he had been living in clover at the home of his sister, Mme. Julia Duchemin, whose husband owned a glass works at Ryves, near Amiens.

Frederick was happy there, for he loved his sister, and his sister loved him. There was but one drawback to his happiness. His brother-in-law, Jacques Duchemin, had been obliged to leave on the day following the young officer's arrival.

As a compensation there was between the brother and the sister the latter's daughter, a girl just over 5 years of age, who appeared delighted with Uncle Fred and with the gold lace of his uniform, and for whom Frederick became a boy again.

All the acquaintances they had—but with whom they sustained almost constant intercourse—were Mme. Bourgeois, a widow, and her daughter Antoinette, a young girl of 18.

How pretty she was! Not so much in regularity of feature, but in her simplicity, her natural grace, her personal charm.

As for Mme. Bourgeois she was kind-[illegible], but a [illegible], indulgent, [illegible] smiling kindness.

Mother and daughter were [illegible].

This is what our young [illegible] had ascertained at once, to his no small satisfaction. He found an attraction he had never before experienced in meeting these ladies. Were they late in coming? Time seemed heavy to him. And if his sister advised him to go for them, off he went at once.

It was not far, it is true. Three hundred yards from the glass works. They lived in a large villa, surrounded by a fine park, which belonged to the young girl in her own right, without counting other property which it was rumored amounted to over a million.

But Frederick did not care for that. It was the young girl's character which attracted him.

One morning after breakfast Frederick was smoking a cigar in the garden by his sister's side, in whose skirts the little Martha was diligently curling her doll's wig.

At the table they had spoken of Antoinette, and now—now they still spoke of her. Then after a moment of silence Frederick said, with a sigh:

"What a pity she is so rich!"

"Why?" asked Julia, looking steadily at her brother, with eyes full of anxiety.

"To woo a young girl you know to be a millionaire, when besides your salary you scarcely have $2,000 a year, would not be acting like a gentleman."

To her brother's surprise, Julia did not answer. She had turned her head aside. He put his hand on her shoulder, with a heavy heart, exclaiming:

"You are crying! What is the matter? What ails you?"

"Nothing!" she replied, with a smile drowned in tears.

The young man kneeled before her, and putting his arms around her said:

"Julia! Julia! I have but you in the world. You have some sorrow. Oh, I beg of you do not hide it from me! Sister, dear little sister! You have no right to conceal it from me."

She hesitated for a moment; then in a low voice, in accents choked with sobs, she whispered her confidence. It was simple and short.

A bank suspended payment. Through this they would lose a large amount. That is why Duchemin was traveling. Alas, his letters announced nothing good!

But in the meantime what is the connection between this disaster and Frederick's love for Antoinette?

Ah, yes, yes! Becoming rich through his wife, the lieutenant would have come to his brother-in-law's rescue.

Julia, moved to tears, was saying:

"And then Jacques is so kind, so diligent, so honest! If you only knew, Fred, how he loves your sister and what happiness she owes him! Ah, ruin, privations—that is nothing! The hard part is that a man like Jacques should bear the undeserved stain of a kind of disgrace. Will it ever be granted to me to console him?"

In his turn the young man kept quiet, lowering his eyes, thinking of this marriage which might have saved his relatives.

But while lowering his eyes he saw his red ribbon, and it seemed to him he heard an interior voice repeating the sentence he had just uttered, "It would not be acting like a gentleman."

He also saw that Martha no longer curled her doll's wig. Sitting on the ground motionless and silent, the child was looking at her mother, who wept silently. She wept—in silence also.

"Julia," said the young man soberly, "go, in my name, to ask for Mlle. Bourgeois' hand."

"At last!" triumphantly exclaimed Antoinette's mother after Julia had formulated her request. Then calling her daughter she added in the same joyful tone: "Come—he has come to it! Answer, darling. Tell—tell how backward we found him!"

A lovely smile, so chaste in its frankness, lit up the young girl's face and without speaking she advanced toward Mme. Duchemin with extended hands. Then, kissing her:

"I am so happy," she exclaimed bravely.

The very next day Frederick began his "wooing," as it is called.

Yet what a strange thing! He, so outspoken till then—so open and so gay—was formal now, circumspect, stilted, almost unpleasant. Goodby to intimate "chatter," to all freedom! He chose his words carefully. No more jokes now!

At first Antoinette was disconcerted by it, but surmounting her painful impression she appeared happy enough for two. She was the first to speak of their plans, saying, as if inadvertently, "these dear plans."

He still called her "mademoiselle," while she called him "Frederick." She consulted him about the details of their future home. What shade did he prefer for the curtains? And when they were passing the glass works, stooping to kiss Martha, she prompted:

"Say 'Good morning, Aunt Fred.'"

The attorneys had taken the matter in hand. Everything was ready, for the lieutenant had told his sister:

"Act for me. Have the settlements drawn to suit yourself."

As for him, to all questions he answered:

"Yes. All right. As you please."

So much so that at last Julia took him aside and said to him:

"Take care, Fred. Take care lest you grieve this child."

"Grieve her!" he repeated, startled. "It would cause me the most bitter remorse."

"Yet one would think you do not love her."

"Not love her!" exclaimed the young man. "I would be the most ungrateful fellow. Oh, on the contrary, I love her with all the power of my soul, of my conscience and of my probity. Devoid of feeling as I may appear, my heart is all hers. I [illegible] and I adore her. Ah, why is she not poor? You would see—you would see then, Julia," he added, relapsing into his darker mood.

The eventful day was fixed. The banns were to be published.

After dinner the lieutenant accompanied the ladies home, walking by their side along the road. At the door they bade one another goodby. After that word had been spoken Antoinette remained at Frederick's side very close to him. She appeared to await something. He understood. And once more lowering his eyes he saw the red ribbon lit by the last rays of the setting sun. And as in an hallucination in the rustling of the leaves he thought he heard again, "It would not be acting like a gentleman."

Then, [illegible], he stepped back, and in a choking voice said: "Listen! My heart is bursting. Even if I unsettle everything, I must speak. I must tell you"——

"What? Everything!" He stated everything indeed—the situations, his scruples, his great sorrow.

Antoinette and her mother sought to interrupt him, repeating, "But—but"——

He did not listen. He went on to the end. And then only were they able to finish their sentence:

"But—we knew it!"

"What! You knew that my sister and her husband are threatened with"——

"Certainly, we know it," said the widow. "And this is why we hurried the conclusion, which will at last give us the right to ward off the misfortune they do not deserve."

"And you, Antoinette?"

Somewhat confused, she replied:

"I? Oh, I had but one fear—not to please you!"—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Polly as a Pastor.

There was a parrot once that belonged to a clergyman. In the circumstances of that gentleman's household Polly naturally became religious and learned several phrases of its master's profession. One day this irresponsible worshiper got, nobody knew how, into church while service was going on. As it was behaving itself nobody disturbed it, where it sat perched on a pew, for the remedy might have proved worse than the evil.

As for evil, the parrot never thought of it. At last the clergyman announced a hymn.

"Let us sing," said he, "the four hundred and first hymn."

But at this point it was found that Polly was in another frame of devotion. Immediately after the priest's announcement of the hymn it exhorted the congregation contradictorily, "Let us pray."—Boston Herald.

Slope of Rivers.

Generally speaking, the slope of rivers flowing into the Mississippi from the east is on an average about 3 inches per mile. Those entering it from the west have an average descent of about 6 inches per mile. The average descent per mile of the Missouri after it leaves the mountains is reckoned at about a foot; the Des Moines from its source to its conjunction with the Mississippi, 7.3 inches. The entire length of the Ohio shows a fall of over 5 inches. The Mississippi from the mouth of the Ohio to the gulf has a fall of but 3½ inches.—Chicago Herald.

The Farmer Was Forgetful.

The Berwick man who took several thousand dollars from the bank, put it in his vest pocket, and then lost the garment was convinced that the banks are yet the best places to keep money. He thought some tramp had stolen the vest, but when later he found vest and money in a grain bin where he had foolishly laid it he became more than ever convinced of the security which the Maine banks afford.—Augusta (Me.) Journal.

FARM, FIELD AND GARDEN.

A ROOT CELLAR.

How to Make a Ratproof One In the Barn With Little Trouble.

Every farmer who grows beets for stock should prepare a place to store them either in or near to the barn. It is not much trouble or expense, as there is but little danger of their freezing if a large bulk is stored together. An Ohio Farmer correspondent writes that a cellar can be made in the barn by taking the floor out of the hay bay and building double walls with 10 inch studding boarded on both sides and the space filled with sawdust and straw, or hay can be kept on the floor above until the cold weather is over.

Such a cellar—or bin, whichever you may call it—if made for permanency, as it should be, ought to be ratproof, and this is easily done at little expense. The sides can be covered inside with tin or cheap sheet iron. He lined two sides of his barn cellar, which is 12 by 14 feet, with some old tin roofing, which cost nothing except 25 cents to have it run through the rollers at a tinshop to take the kinks out of it. This correspondent says:

"The floor can be cemented at a small cost, for the common, cheap grades of cement will answer here, where there is no danger of frost and no stock to tramp it. Less than two barrels will floor a cellar large enough to store 1,000 bushels if the ceiling is seven feet high. To make a ratproof floor there should be three inches of concrete made of finely broken stone or screened gravel and cement mixed at the rate of one of cement to about six parts of the stone and gravel and pounded down solid. It should be only slightly wet—water thrown over the coarse material and allowed to drain off and the cement then mixed through it. The last coat should be mixed with sharp, rather coarse, sand, one of cement to two of sand, and spread half an inch thick. Another temporary plant for keeping beets for winter feeding, which is much better than pitting them, is to build a bin or cheap room of rough lumber convenient to the barn and store the beets, and at the approach of cold weather build a stack of corn fodder or straw over it to protect them.

"Double walls should be made filled with leaves or sawdust, and there will be no trouble to keep them from freezing. Whether the beets are stored in a cellar or outside building, there should be windows and doors, so that perfect ventilation can be had for a few weeks after they are stored. We formerly cut our beets to feed them, but now we feed them whole to all stock, and much prefer it to cutting, as we find that all our stock eat them without waste, and while a cow will sometimes choke on a three cornered piece of beet she will never do so on a piece which she bites out of the beet."

Mulching Potatoes.

The object of an experiment reported upon from the Michigan experiment station was to show the yield of potatoes grown under a mulch, as compared with mulching in the hill, and also with the ordinary method of cultivation. There was no difference in time of appearance between the unmulched potatoes and those covered with a mulch, while the potatoes planted with straw in the hill did not make their appearance until two days later.

The quality of the potatoes grown under the mulch was excellent. They were almost entirely free from scab. The unmulched potatoes were badly affected with scab, and although the yield was the heaviest the quality was inferior. On the division where the straw was placed in the hill the quality was poor and nearly every potato was affected with scab.

In comparing the results obtained we must take into account the different amounts of work put upon different divisions. If the straw is taken from an exposed stack and is free from seed, there is no work upon a mulched plat except planting, mulching and digging.

The conclusions drawn from this experiment, taking into consideration the cost of production and the quality of the yield, is that a person would be repaid in covering his potatoes with straw, especially if the season is dry.

It is believed, however, that mulching will probably never be practicable to a large extent, and, when straw is scarce, not at all. The arguments in its favor are: (1) In a dry season the mulch by retaining moisture would undoubtedly increase the yield of the crop, and (2) by choking out the small weeds and by keeping the ground moist it does away with cultivation. Its objectionable features are: (1) The increased amount of labor required to apply the mulch, and (2) the increased amount of labor required to harvest the crop. The caution is given to be sure that the straw has been thoroughly exposed to the weather in order that all the grain or seeds that it contains may be sprouted before applying it to the land, or the foul matter will grow and ruin the crop.

Comb Honey Versus Extracted Honey.

The query, "Which will pay the better if sold in the home market, comb honey at 10 cents a pound or extracted honey at $1 per gallon?" was recently answered by 24 well known apiarists in The American Bee Journal. With one exception all replied "extracted honey." The exception was Mr. J. P. H. Brown, who thought where the bees are well managed that comb honey will pay the best.

J. E. Pond said: "Extracted by all means, as there is only about 2 cents per pound difference in price. In my own locality I could make it pay better to sell extracted at 6 cents per pound than comb honey at 10 cents. Localities differ, though, in regard to honey gathering. Some beekeepers have told me that, taking all in all, they can do better producing comb honey where both sell at the same price."

Mrs. Jennie Atchley replied: "Extracted will pay the best at $1 per gallon or 8 cents a pound, as you get more honey, and if you can sell your extracted as readily at 8 cents as your comb honey at 10 cents by all means produce extracted."

In view of the threatened dearth of fodder in Europe, the French Academy of Sciences recommends utilizing the leaves of the grape vine for this purpose. Cattle eat them, either fresh or dry, with avidity, and they are stated to be excellent [illegible].

CELERY FOR WINTER USE.

The New Method Successfully Tested. Storing In Root Cellar and In Pits.

The labor involved in blanching celery has been the great drawback to its more general culture. It has now been found that just as good celery can be grown by setting the plants six or seven inches apart each way on very rich soil and doing nothing more to them, except to keep the ground free from weeds till they are large enough to completely shade it. Being so close together, they will grow straight up and blanch perfectly. This method has been thoroughly tested on both a large and small scale and has proved a grand success. Celery grown in this way should be sheltered from the wind in some manner, as it is so brittle that a heavy wind will destroy it.

Celery for winter use may be stored in a root cellar or in a pit in the garden. Although growing celery will stand several hard frosts without injury, it is always best to care for it before there is any danger of freezing. Never handle it while wet or frosty. Should the tops become frozen shear them off before storing. If put into a cellar, the roots should be moistened occasionally without wetting the leaves.

Quality considered, writes a correspondent of The Rural New Yorker and authority for the foregoing, a pit in the garden is the best place for keeping celery. Dig a trench the width of a spade and as deep as the celery is tall, and as long as may be needed. Into this set the plants upright and close together. Make a cover by nailing two wide boards together A fashion. It is best to have this roof in sections about 8 feet long for ease in getting at the celery. Better still is a roof made of wide old doors, which will make a place large enough for one to crawl into to look after the celery. If taken care of, these covers will last for years. Let the roof project a little beyond the celery at each end.

As the weather becomes cold, cover well with leaves or bog hay, but never use anything containing any grain, as it will draw mice. Leave openings in the ends for ventilation and have something on hand to stop them up with on cold nights. Stored in this way, celery will keep all winter, will blanch perfectly and retain all its good qualities. It can be taken out at one end of the trench as wanted with very little trouble. Celery grown in a hotbed can very easily be covered up and kept all winter right where it grew.

Oxeye Daisy.

At least five processes may be named for subduing that most obstinate pest, the oxeye daisy, says The Country Gentleman—viz: 1. Plow deep in August, sow rye and pasture in autumn and spring or cut for hay; plow deep again and drill with rape. 2. Pasture till June, then plow deep, sow rye in drills and cultivate well. 3. Plow lightly after harvest and deep before winter and harrow in the interval to start seeds; follow with corn. 4. Sow rye and pasture till June; follow with millet or bare fallow until September, then with winter wheat. 5. Mow the daisies in blossom and repeat as often as necessary.

The objection to all three methods is that they do not accomplish their work in one season. Another, which may be termed a sixth method, is fallow, going over the ground once a week through the summer. The objection is that all farmers want a crop on the land, and very few have enough thoroughness and energy to keep the ground constantly and completely clean. Cultivating in drills is more costly and not so thorough. More wholesale work is done with the plow.

The Tomato a Vegetable, Not a Fruit.

Regarding the much vexed question, Is the tomato a fruit or a vegetable? there are conflicting replies. The American Cultivator classes tomatoes with fruits and says in explanation: The distinction between a vegetable and a fruit is puzzling at times. A technical difference is that a fruit incloses the seeds of the plant and matures above ground, while plant growth matured under ground is vegetable. The Prairie Farmer, on the other hand, calls the tomato a vegetable and substantiates its claim by quoting a decision of the United States court—that the tomato is a vegetable, not a fruit. The question comes before it in an action brought Feb. 4, 1887, against the collector of the port of New York to recover back duties, paid under protest, on tomatoes imported from the West Indies.

In the Vegetable Garden.

All plants from which the crop has been harvested ought to be removed, and the ground used for late crops, such as turnips, spinach, etc. Remember that a mulch of loose earth is a great help in a dry time, and therefore hoe frequently or otherwise keep the soil well stirred between growing plants and in the rows. Plants still in vigorous growth will be benefited by frequent applications of soap suds and liquid manure.

Gather the seed of garden varieties of beans before the pods crack open or rot from dampness. If you have not already done so, give the asparagus bed a dressing of quickly available manure. Squashes, melons and late cucumbers ought to be cultivated until the vines cover the ground.

Cattle Foods.

Professor W. W. Cooke of the Vermont experiment station issues a bulletin on several waste products from corn that are being sold for cattle food. Three products tested were cream gluten meal, corn germ feed and Buffalo gluten feed. The latter is sold under the general name of "sugar meal" and is a byproduct in the manufacture of glucose sugar from corn. It is a good feed, but is very concentrated and, like cottonseed meal, should be fed sparingly. Three pounds per day are enough.

Effect of Music on Penn.

Walter Savage Landor introduces Peterborough in conversation with William Penn and makes him applaud Penn cynically, when the latter declares that there is something in a violin if played directly that appeareth to make hot weather cool and cold weather warm and temperate, not, however, when its cords have young maidens tied invisibly to the end of them, jerking them up and down in a strange fashion before one's eyes, and unless one taketh due caution wafting their hair upon one's face and bosom, and their very breath, too, between one's lips if peradventure one omitteth to shut them bitterly and hold tight.—Musical Courier.

Stealing Ideas.

It must be surprising to the uninitiated to see how soon fashions become generalized in Paris. A "creation," a new fashion, is hardly out of an exclusive house of the Rue de la Paix—hardly out of the workrooms, it might be said—when you see it copied in the show windows of the Louvre and the Bon Marche, where it can be bought for less than one-fourth of the price asked by the great couturiers. At first the rulers of dress thought that some of their workpeople were bribed to give points, but they soon discovered that the pilfering of ideas took place in the showrooms instead of the workrooms. The Louvre and the Bon Marche engaged handsome, distinguished looking young women, dressed them as if they had $20,000 a year and were accustomed from infancy to having and wearing the best, gave them a private carriage and had them go to the great costumers to order garments "just come out."

These afterward served as the models of things which the week after you might buy by the dozens. The large shops resort to this means to obtain novelties not only in the beginning of the season, but all the year round, and the couturiers have no way of avoiding the sales, for their showrooms are open to all who wish to purchase and give orders. To be sure these couturiers make most of their creations for authentic princesses and duchesses, but here also the shops get the best of them.—Cor. New York Tribune.

An Eccentric Washington Woman.

There is a woman in Washington society whose eccentricities in certain lines are so well known as to pass without comment. Her position as a matron of literary proclivities is the motive for sundry gatherings at her house during the season. On one occasion the guests bidden to the literary feast were informed upon arrival that they must enter by a side door, as the morning being rainy they would otherwise track mud over the hall carpet. That the hostess is not so much a respecter of persons as of things is further evidenced by her conduct at an afternoon reception.

Those of her guests whose garments were ornamented with jet were asked during their stay to remain in the second parlor, where the furniture was of mahogany. This sorting out process was explained by the frank announcement that if people would wear sharp ornaments on their clothes she must protect her own property by excluding them from the sacred precincts of the first parlor so that the rosewood furniture could not be scratched.—Kate Field's Washington.

How to Keep a Chameleon.

The Florida chameleon, which also is frequently brought home by the tourist, is a bright and intelligent creature. He requires almost unlimited sunshine to bask in, and flies, which he catches on the end of his long tongue, to eat. A fernery is a comfortable place for him. This fellow, it is said, has a temper, and if not well treated or if teased he will show fight, though he can hardly do much harm. The genuine chameleon, after whom the Florida lizard is named, is one of the quaintest and oddest of pets, but he is a native of the old world and rarely seen in our country.

Another American of the family, often sent from the west and south to pet lovers, is called the horned toad, though he is no toad, but a lizard. He is said to be an interesting pet and capable of being taught. All the small members of this race live on insects and need to be kept in very warm quarters.—Olive Thorne Miller in Harper's Bazar.

The Boomerang Is Not New.

The boomerang, the Australian native's weapon of offense and defense, referred to in all reference works as an instrument unknown until after the discovery of Australia, was doubtless known before the time of Christ. Pliny the elder, a contemporary of our Saviour, writes as follows in his "Natural History" respecting an instrument made of the wood of the aquifolia:

"If a staff made of this wood, when thrown at an animal, from want of strength in the person throwing, falls short of the mark, it will come back toward the thrower of its own accord, so remarkable are the properties of that tree."

It is altogether probable that the learned Pliny did not consider the shape of the "staff" and referred its peculiarities to the nature of the wood of which it was made.—St. Louis Republic.

AN ABUSE OF POWER.

The treasury department at Washington rules that the checks used when national currency was scarce and at a premium, to keep manufactories running and workingmen employed, are subject to a 10 per cent. tax.

This action of the treasury department is in direct opposition to the views taken by the United States senate upon the matter when a resolution was introduced to ask the comptroller of the currency whether the banks of New York were not violating this law by the issuance of clearing house certificates. The democratic senators then protested against such action being taken in a time of such financial stringency.

The customers of the banks used these checks and now the treasury department shows the democratic interest in the prosperity of the country by putting a tax on the men who accepted a way of saving from ruin many establishments, and from loss of wages many men.

The Hartford Courant says: "It has been estimated that $300,000 of these checks were put in circulation in Hartford, which will call for the payment of $30,000 in taxes."

This looks as if the administration believed in a policy to help the workingmen and the business of the country.

The Hartford Post remarks "that this ten per cent. tax on the checks used to pay employes amounts to ten per cent. increase in the cost of the production of the goods, which, probably, more than uses up the profits."

The manufacturers and bank officials do not think that this tax can be collected. They claim the checks were not issued as currency, but as a convenience to banks, manufacturers and workingmen.

The correspondence between Collector Hutchinson and the treasury department will be found in another column.

FOREIGN WITNESSES.

Those who doubt that the democratic party is tending towards free trade should take notice of the witnesses that the authorities at Washington invited to testify before the ways and means committee to show that the McKinley tariff was not what it ought to be for foreigners.

During the first week the subjects of Queen Victoria from the Bermudas were praying to have foreign grown onions and potatoes admitted free, and complaining that the McKinley bill was too much of a tax upon them! A fact which the republicans have asserted, and the democrats have positively denied.

Then a paid attorney representing foreign industries was allowed to cross question and to attempt to disconcert American manufacturers of oil cloths, and to protect the interests of importers and the manufacturers of these foreign goods, before the committee, with the approval of Secretary Carlisle.

The committee also called in an Austrian manufacturer of textile fabrics to present his experience for the benefit of the committee against a committee representing fifty thousand of the textile workers in the United States, who were appealing to have the protective tariff kept on. Of course this Austrian manufacturer had a very poor opinion of the McKinley tariff, and it harmonized with the opinions of a majority of the democratic committee, who called him in to testify.

Commenting upon this part of the proceedings The American Economist says with truth: "This Austrian manufacturer is the first foreigner who has ever been invited to Washington on such a mission. Let us pray that he also will be the last. This invitation was as impertinent to the American people, as unpatriotic as it was obtrusive."

THE GREAT PROTECTIONIST LEADER.

There is nothing uncertain in the republican campaign in Ohio this fall. That "obnoxious doctrine" of protection is the issue, and Gov. McKinley "the father" of the bill with the utmost faith in the benefits of it, and in the intelligence of the people, is valiantly leading his party in the campaign. Gov. McKinley does not shrink from the advocacy of the law which the democratic platform calls a "robber tariff," but stands as the embodiment of all it advocates and as its bravest and boldest champion.

The iron workers and mechanics of Ohio, who have been appealing to the democratic committee on ways and means not to remove from the industries they represent the protection which has enabled their employers to give them the best wages they have ever received for a day's work, recognize and openly avow their allegiance to protective tariff; and recent "object lessons" have fully satisfied all the people that the markets of this country should not be made free to the foreign manufacturers and producers, and they will give Gov. McKinley their undivided support.

His re-election will not only restore confidence in the great state of which he is the honored head, but it will be a victory which will make him a strong and a popular candidate for the presidency in 1896.

"AN OPPORTUNE MOMENT."

A great English manufacturer of cotton goods, who has not been able to compete with American manufacturers under republican protection, now writes the importers:

"I contemplate making a tour in the United States shortly, and seeing that there is every probability of a reduction being made in the tariff I thought it might be an opportune moment to bring my productions to your notice, and thus make an opening for business."

Strange all the foreign manufacturers should expect so much from the democratic party. The fact that they do is the best reason why the American workingman should expect little from it. The democratic party cannot benefit the American workingman in any industry by favoring foreign manufacturers.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Senatorial courtesy is very elastic, and like a half-inch rubber band, is capable of making way for a great deal of "stuff."

Wonder if the treasury department in Washington will think that Populist Governor Waite's "check-rein" is subject to a ten per cent tax?

The "white caps" in Mississippi burn the cotton of farmers who offer to sell for less than ten cents a pound. This is democratic protection—a southern way of keeping prices up!

What the United States congress knows about silver makes a big book. There are over a thousand pages of it and the printing presses are still turning out Congressional records.

A Bridgeport and a New Haven woman had a corn-on-the-cob eating bee the other day. The Bridgeport woman put away eighteen ears, wiped off her mouth with a napkin and was pronounced the winner. The papers say the woman didn't seem to be overcrowded, either!

There is a great newspaper discussion going on as to the whereabouts of Guiteau's bones. The public do not care whether they are under the jail floor or hung up in some dime museum, and, possibly, it may make no difference to Guiteau's ghost!

CHECKS TO BE TAXED.

Correspondence Between Collector Hutchinson and the Internal Revenue Commissioner.

UNITED STATES INTERNAL REVENUE,
Collector's Office, District of Connecticut,
HARTFORD, Sept. 8, 1893.

The Hon. J. S Miller,
Commissioner of Internal Revenue,
Washington, D. C.

Sir:—The circular letter dated September 7, '93, concerning the issue of certificates of deposit payable in money or currency of the United States is received. There is a form of currency in circulation in this vicinity like the one herewith enclosed. These obligations to pay on demand are issued to be used as money, owing to scarcity of currency and by common consent merchants and employes have taken them. They pass from hand to hand and are issued in small denominations of ones and twos and upwards to make them available for purpose of circulation.

The newspapers have advocated their use on the grounds that they could be used as money or currency. Every reason advanced for their use conflicts with the spirit of sections 3,413a and 3,413b, revised statute. Employes have been obliged to take them in payment for services rendered, and merchants have been put to much inconvenience in the matter of furnishing currency in making change. I respectfully request to be informed whether checks or notes of this kind and used for the purposes stated i. e. for circulation in place of money or currency, are subject to the 10 per cent. tax.

Very respectfully,
J. I. HUTCHINSON,
Collector.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT.
OFFICE OF THE COMMISSIONER OF INTERNAL REVENUE,
WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 16, 1893.

J. I Hutchinson, Esq.,
Collector Internal Revenue,
Hartford, Conn.:

Sir:—Your letter of the 8th instant has been received, enclosing a specimen of currency in circulation in Hartford, which reads:

"The Hartford Trust Company.
"Pay to ——— account Pay Roll ——— or bearer ——— one ——— dollar, $1 00," and is signed "The Billings & Spencer Co. by the ——— Treasurer" of that company.

You say: "These obligations to pay on demand are issued to be used as money, owing to scarcity of currency, and by common consent merchants and employes have taken them. They pass from hand to hand and are issued in small denominations of ones and twos and upward to make them available for purposes of circulation."

You are advised that they are notes in contemplation of section 19, act of February 8, 1875, (18 Stat., 311) and that the Billings & Spencer Co. are liable for a tax of 10 per cent. on the amount used for circulation and paid out by them.

Respectfully yours,
G. W. WILSON,
Acting Commissioner.

The collector will soon send out blank forms to those who issued the checks on which they must make sworn statements of the amounts of the checks that were issued. These statements will be sent to the authorities at Washington, who will decide whether the checks shall be assessed or not.

VOICE OF THE PRESS

A Reason for Earnestness.

A reduction of one half in the skilled departments of the industry, and of nearly two-thirds in the unskilled departments, is something to make wage earners earnest in their plea.—[New York Press.

Let Us Hope!

Let us hope the country will rise superior to even this administration, and that the folly of attempting to carry out the stupendous heresies of the Chicago platform will be realized before this country is plunged in deeper distress.—[Jamestown Journal.

They Spread the Truth.

Democratic leaders will rejoice when the tariff hearings are over. They have been the means of spreading an uncomfortable amount of truth in regard to the necessity of protection.—[New York Press.

They Did Their Duty.

The women came, they saw, they voted according to their convictions, and conquered ignorant prejudice, thus demonstrating to the satisfaction of themselves first and to the men that they are not too timid or too weak to do their duty as they understand it.—[New Haven Palladium.

A Righteous Hope.

It is announced that the czar has decided to abolish the use of the knout on persons accused of crime. This shows that progress is made, even in darkest Russia. Perhaps after a time civilized sentiment in our southern states may be strong enough to prohibit the wholesale mob murder of colored men.—[New York Press

Getting Nervous.

We observe with a feeling akin to pain that various sub-committees are to be empowered to hear the views of the manufacturers with respect to the tariff. If the views of the protected interests are to be considered as of more importance than the views of the people, the democrats may as well turn the whole business of tariff reform over to the republicans, who are pledged to take care of the manufacturers.—[Atlanta Constitution.

The Norwich Weekly Courier is the best weekly newspaper in New England at 50c a year.

I suffered from acute inflammation in my nose and head—for a week at a time I could not see. I used Ely's Cream Balm and in a few days I was cured. It is wonderful how quick it helped me.—Mrs. Georgie S. Judson, Hartford, Conn.

For three weeks I was suffering from a severe cold in my head, accompanied by a pain in the temples. Ely's Cream Balm was recommended to me. After only six applications of the Balm every trace of my cold was removed.—Henry C. Clark, New York Appraiser's Office.

A man's wife should always be the same especially to her husband, but if she is weak and nervous, and uses Carter's Iron Pills, she cannot be, for they make her "feel like a different person," so they all say, and their husbands say so too!

Caution.

Imitations have been put upon the market so closely resembling ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS in general appearance as to be well calculated to deceive. It is, however, in general appearance only that they compare with ALLCOCK'S, for they are worse than worthless, inasmuch as they contain deleterious ingredients which are apt to cause serious injury. Remember that ALLCOCK'S are the only genuine porous plasters—the best external remedy ever produced; and when purchasing plasters do not only ask for but see that you get ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS.

If there ever was a specific for any one complaint, then Carter's Little Liver Pills are a specific for Sick Headache, and every woman should know this. They are not only a positive cure, but a sure preventive if taken when the approach is felt. Carter's Little Liver Pills act directly on the liver and bile, and in this way remove the cause of disease without first making you sick by a weakening purge. If you try them you will not be disappointed.

A Young Girl's Fortune.

AN INTERESTING SKETCH.

Nothing appeals so strongly to a mother's affection as her daughter just budding into womanhood. Following is an instance: "Our daughter, Blanche, now 15 years of age, had been terribly afflicted with nervousness, and had lost the entire use of her right arm. She was in such a condition that we had to keep her from school and abandon her music lessons. In fact, we feared St. Vitus dance, and are positive but for an invaluable remedy she would have had that terrible affliction. We had employed physicians, but she received no benefit from them. The first of last August she weighed but 75 pounds, and although she has taken only three bottles of Nervine she now weighs 106 pounds; her nervousness and symptoms of St. Vitus dance are entirely gone, she attends school regularly, and studies with comfort and ease. She has recovered complete use of her arm, her appetite is splendid, and no money could procure for our daughter the health Dr. Miles' Nervine has brought her.

When my brother recommended the remedy I had no faith in patent medicines, and would not listen to him, but as a last resort he sent us a bottle, we began giving it to Blanche, and the effect was almost immediate."—[Mrs. R. S. Bullock, Brighton, N. Y.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent direct by the Dr. Miles' Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid. It is positively free from opiates or dangerous drugs.

BABY'S THREE NEEDS.

Cleanliness, Sound Sleep, and Proper Food.

No Pains Should be Spared to Secure the Infant's Health.

Upon the Little One's Diet Depends Its Life and Happiness.

An infant has but three big needs—food, sleep, and cleanliness.

During the important first few years, when the child is rapidly developing, no pains should be spared to secure food of absolute purity and sufficiently nourishing for every need of healthy growth.

Breast milk is at first baby's ideal food; but there are circumstances under which artificial feeding becomes absolutely necessary. The proportion of mothers in our large towns who are able to fully discharge the maternal duty of nursing during the whole of the natural period are few.

Until within recent years infants deprived of mother's milk have been reared in a hap-hazard and unscientific manner, with the usual result that the enormous mortality during the first five years of life has been a reproach to medical men.

But all this is now changed. Practical scientific men of the highest standing have devoted themselves exclusively to these problems of infant-feeding. Many results have come, but the greatest and most practical is the preparation of lactated food—next to mother's milk, the most nourishing, strengthening, readily digested, and palatable food that can be given a baby.

Very many babies that could not be reared, that pined and wasted on other food, have grown fat, ruddy, and strong when fed on lactated food.

Just now when the death reports show a fearful prevalence of diarrhoea and cholera infantum, lactated food is doing its best work.

It is saving the lives of babies in nearly every city and town in the union. Every day most touching letters come from mothers whose babies have escaped or safely gone through dangerous complaints by the help of lactated food.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Graff, of Corvallis, Oregon, write:

"Our baby was born in October. After trying milk and several kinds of infant foods we began using lactated food. On this she thrived and grew well and strong. We regard lactated food as all that is claimed for it." sep20d

MILLS FOR REPEAL.

Boldly Declares Against Views of Constituents.

SPEECH COMMANDS ATTENTION.

Another Attempt to be Made to Shorten Debate.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—R. Q. Mills of Texas, who addressed the senate today, commanded attention for several reasons. In the first place his position is peculiar in that, coming from a state where the president has been burned in effigy because of his views upon the subject of silver, he took his place on the administration platform and argued for unconditional repeal. In the second place Mr. Mills is an extremely earnest and energetic speaker, and does not read his speeches, and therefore he is able to avoid monotony by proper emphasis.

Mr. Voorhees has not been affected by the adverse criticisms that have been passed upon him, and he will pursue with patience the course which has been agreed upon by the steering committee in reference to the debate. There is some expectation that he will take another step looking to a curtailment of the apparently endless discussion, perhaps in the direction of lengthening the hours of the daily session of the senate. No change in this respect is likely to take place today, however, as the joint Republican caucus which has been called for 4 o'clock tonight will require the attendance of the Republican senators.

The Criticisms by the Bankers of New York and the money centres of the management of the silver controversy in the senate by Senator Voorhees have caused much indignation in administration circles and among Senator Voorhees' friends in the senate. "Those people at a distance who complain of delay," said Senator Gorman, "do not realize the difficulties and embarrassments which surround the anti-silver contest in the senate. They forget that a majority of the Democrats of that body are opposed to the proposed legislation. They believe in free coinage and allege that the people of their states are supporting them in their course. In addition to this fact," says Senator Gorman, "the Democratic senators who are opposing the administration policy are the personal and political friends of Senator Voorhees and myself. Therefore we have been pursuing a conciliatory course up to the present time. Under the practices of the senate it is doubtful whether any other course would be sustained. We are in hopes that the nonaggressive course which has thus far been pursued will enable us to reach the great result

For Which We Have Been Striving."

Some of the leading opponents of the repeal bill insist that they will resist a vote as long as they have the endurance to do so. The Democratic managers, however, are of the opinion that when reasonable debate has been exhausted the opponents will permit a vote to be taken, commencing on the numerous amendments which are to be offered. If it is found that the opponents are not disposed to recognize the considerate treatment which has been accorded to them, the friends of repeal will be compelled to give some attention to the wishes of the people which they represent and which are those also of a clear majority of the senate. In the face of the situation in the senate, Chairman Voorhees, after consultation with his friends in that body, did not think it appropriate to go to New York for the purpose of making a speech and attempt to explain a condition over which he had no control and consequently could not give any assurances when a vote would be reached.

It was thought that this week would bring the last stages of the general debate, but the indications are that the discussion will run not only this week but all of next. A number of speeches on both sides remain on the list, and will not be interfered with by Chairman Voorhees and the other managers. Senator Gorman said today that he thought by the

First of October a Vote Can Be Reached

He does not say how it will be brought about, but he is very confident that such will be the fact.

The majority members of the ways and means committee have not yet decided upon a time for beginning the work of formulating the bill to replace the present McKinley law. Friday next will be the first regular meeting of the committee after the hearings have ceased; but it is hardly probable that the members will want to rush right into that part of the work after nearly three weeks continuous sessions. Besides all the testimony submitted by those who have appeared before the committee is not yet printed and the members will probably desire to study the statements made to them before entering upon the preparation of their bill. The probabilities are, therefore, that nothing will be done on the details of the bill before next week. It is the expectation of Chairman Wilson and his colleagues on the committee that the measure will be ready for presentation to the house by November.

Mills Resume Work.

PROVIDENCE, Sept. 19.—The five woolen mills of the Rodman Manufacturing company and the Gregory mills started up on Monday after a shut down of eight weeks.

Two Cholera Deaths at Hull.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—There were two deaths from cholera at Hull yesterday.

ASA POTTER'S TRIAL.

Unless Government Can Put In Offered Proof the Case Fails.

BOSTON, Sept. 19.—The time of Judge Putnam, in the United States circuit court, this forenoon, was taken up hearing arguments of counsel in the Potter case. The government wishes to show that Mr. Potter's direction to Mr. Work to make the reserve "look well" was a general direction and applied to the books of the bank.

The government this forenoon substantially said that if the offer of proof is rejected the prosecution has no case. Mr. Hoar said he could show that the slips handed to Mr. Potter by Mr. Work were uniformally false from Jan. 19 to March 10. He wished to be allowed to show that Mr. Potter when given the slips showing the low state of the reserve told Mr. Work to make it "look well," and further, to show by additional evidence that the instruction was intended to be and was regarded by Mr. Work as a general direction to make changes in the books of the bank.

Mr. Hoar thought that it could be shown by a general course of business, that a specific act took place, and that knowledge of Mr. Potter might be shown by showing the general course of business in the bank; and that it could be proved in this way that Mr. Potter knew how his orders were being executed. Mr. Hoar talked for an hour, but the substance of his argument was that unless the offer of the government was allowed to go in the prosecution has no case.

The court at the conclusion of the argument of Mr. Hoar took a recess until 2, to enable Mr. Hopkins to prepare his reply and allow the district attorney an opportunity to arrange some authorities. The jury was excused for today.

PRAYING FOR RAIN.

Destructive Fires In Pennsylvania Sweeping the Country.

CONNELLSVILLE, Pa., Sept. 19.—Forest fires have been raging all along the Laurel mountains from Mt. Pleasant to Uniontown, for the last 18 days. Owing to the continuous drouth these fires are becoming dangerous. Just above Connellsville the whole mountain side is ablaze. Unless rain soon comes the whole summer's work of the farmers living in the burning districts will be lost.

No fall work has yet been done. A fire is said to be working its way dangerously near the soldiers' orphan school at Jumonville. All the sources of water supply for miles around have gone dry. At some country churches special services have been held to pray for rain.

Important Nominations Made.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—The president sent to the senate today the following nominations: William B. Hornblower, to be associate justice of the supreme court of the United States, vice Samuel Blatchford, deceased; James A. Van Allen of Rhode Island, to be ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary to Italy; Assistant Naval Constructor William J. Baxter to be naval constructor in the navy.

Silver Platers Resume Work.

HARTFORD, Sept. 19.—The William Rogers Manufacturing company and the Barbour Silver Plate company started their works on full time yesterday. The plant is one of the largest in New England.

FROM THE ORIENT.

Great Flood In Japan, Many Drowned. Dysentery Epidemic.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 19.—The steamship Peru arrived last evening from China and Japan, bringing news up to Sept. 4.

The Japanese Gazette under date of Aug. 26, gives an account of the great flood in Fifu-Ken. The Nagara-Gawa river began to rise about 5 p. m. on Aug. 22, and at midnight it had risen 10 feet. Many persons were drowned, and there is great suffering among the survivors.

On the Sakai-Gawa, 30 yards of the bank was destroyed, flooding seven houses, while the bursting of the Funahara bank put the whole of the Matsuye under water. The Gunjo burst its banks and carried away 11 houses, beside flooding 200 others. The Trabo carried away 25 houses. The result of inquiries into the damage done by floods is as follows: Embankments burst in 60 places, over 200 houses carried away, and over 180 people drowned.

At Yawatka, in Guago-Gun, a side of a mountain fell away on Aug. 22, crushing over 30 persons to death. At Nara the Yotsu-Gasa has burst its banks, and caused a flood which is the greatest since 1889. One hundred and fifty-four persons were drowned in the Fifu-Ken flood, and nearly 20,000 persons are receiving relief.

Advices from Saga state that dysentery is prevailing in that prefecture more fiercely than ever, the total number of cases being 2863, and the number of deaths 477. At Wakayama dysentery also prevails, there having been 2462 cases and 416 deaths.

DOG FISHERMAN.

Canine Wonder Whose Score Equals That of the Crew.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., Sept. 19.—Captain George Winters of schooner Charles S. Tappan of this port has a dog which accompanies him on his fishing trips, and has a record of catching as many fish as any of the crew. He is of a mixed breed, half Newfoundland and half wolf, and is a thorough water dog.

It is a frequent occurrence for fish to escape from the hook when at the surface, and when this occurs the men speak to the dog, who jumps overboard and dives for the fish and is nearly always successful in capturing him. The tongues of the fish so caught are cut out and credited to the dog's account, the same as one of the crew, and at the end of the trip his catches are found to average with those of the men.

POLICIES CANCELLED.

Without Warning Foreign Exhibitors Find Their Insurance Gone.

WORLD'S FAIR GROUNDS, CHICAGO, Sept. 19.—Without any warning whatever policies aggregating hundreds of thousands of dollars on foreign exhibits at the fair have been cancelled by Chicago insurance agents. The first intimation that the foreigners had that the risks were not satisfactory was when they got notices that the policies had been cancelled.

With these notices came checks representing the sums that had been paid for the unexpired period. All of the foreign commissioners could not be seen yesterday, but it is understood that the insurance on most of the exhibits had been canceled by the companies.

SITUATION CLEARER.

More Lawrence Mills to Start Up—Mass Meeting of Operatives.

LAWRENCE, Mass., Sept. 19.—Although it has not been definitely announced that the lower Pacific mills will assume operations on Monday, yet such is supposed from the fact that the notices announcing a new wage list have been posted in the lower as well as the upper mills.

The agents as a whole say the situation is somewhat clearer. At the Washington mills all differences have been settled. City Hall have been secured for a mass meeting to be held Friday, Sept. 22, to take action on the general cut down of wages in the mills. The speakers will be James F. Connelly of the Lowell Central Labor union and T. P. Cahill of this city.

Old Newspaper Man Gone.

EXETER, N. H., Sept. 19.—Exeter loses by death this morning one of its oldest and most respected citizens, Samuel Hall, aged 80. Mr. Hall was a printer by trade, and by long service as editor and publisher, working at the case and pulling the old style hand press, he accumulated a large property and was worth at the time of his death at least $100,000.

Miners Out on Strike.

PARIS, Sept. 19.—The miners' strike in the department of Pas de Calais has begun to spread already to several other districts. This afternoon 43,000 miners in the north of France had quit work. Although there has been no disorder, many precautions against riot have been taken by the military in the districts affected by the strike.

Haverhill Woman Injured.

HAVERHILL, Mass., Sept. 19.—Word reached here this morning that Mrs. E. M. Hyson, a leading member of the Women's Relief corps, post 47, Grand Army, of this city, had been severely injured by a collision of street cars, while visiting the World's fair.

VISIONS OF HEAVEN.

All desert dwellers, it is said, die expecting to awake in a wooded land supplied bountifully with cold water.

The natives of Bouguden, one of the hottest regions of the earth, believe that heaven will be a land of cool streams and shady groves entirely cleared of all underbrush and thistles.

A STATE OF ANARCHY.

Serious Condition that Exists at Rio Janeiro.

EDITOR OF RIO HERALD KILLED.

Only One Fort Loyal to the President—Lack of Discipline in the Army.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—The Herald's Montevideo (Uruguay) correspondent cables: It is not yet known here whether Rio Janeiro has been taken by the naval revolters or whether their bombardment of the capital has ceased, all correspondence with Brazil having been cut off by the postal authorities. Passengers who reached here from Rio by the steamer Magdalena say that when they left the city was in a state approaching panic.

The rebel squadron was attacking fortified points on the bay shore, and all the forts, except Santa Cruz, were either neutral or favorable to Admiral Mello. Ammunition and provisions for the Santa Cruz garrison has given out. There was much confusion and lack of discipline in the army, though it was yet nominally Faithful to President Peixoto.

All vessels arriving were kept outside the blockade lines. With the consent of the commanders of the foreign warships in the harbor, part of the cargoes of the new arrivals was purchased and taken on board by Mello's squadron. This gave the rebels the provisions which they so badly needed.

Admiral Gama, director of the naval school, had refused to obey an order of Peixoto, which was intended to turn his school into a hospital. Other naval officers on shore have declined commands offered them by Peixoto, declaring that they could not fight against their former commander, Admiral Mello.

The general opinion of the Magdalena's passengers, and also of Ruy Barbosa, is that unless the foreign powers interfere in his behalf. Ruy Barbosa says he did not seek refuge with the Chilian legation in order to escape Peixoto's vengeance. He finally got away in disguise and made good his escape to this place. The captain of the Magdalena says Rio is practically in a state of anarchy.

The editor of the Rio Herald, a Spaniard, has been murdered by army officers, owing to his outspoken support of Mello. The Brazilian minister here received telegraphic dispatches from Rio yesterday, but refused to divulge their contents. He hints that the news they contain is grave.

The Brazilian gunboat which has been stationed at Santos, and for some time remained faithful to Peixoto,

Has at Last Joined the Rebel Navy.

The report of the desertion of Peixoto, by the Bahia, Pernambuco and the whole Rio Grande squadron, is fully confirmed.

The Tiradentes is here with her machinery disabled, by order of the Brazilian minister, in order to prevent any effort on the part of the rebel forces. Several of her officers have been put under arrest by the captain, who feared they intended to influence the crew to mutiny and declare themselves in favor of Mello.

On board the Aquidaban, Deputy Seabra and a lieutenant of marines have been shot by order of the rebel admiral, for attempts to discourage the crew with prophecies of defeat by Peixoto and subsequent punishment.

The Rio Grande revolters are combining and mobilizing their forces for a final effort to defeat the Castilhistas. Castilho has asked Peixoto for aid, but his appeal is, of course, vain under the circumstances.

House Burned at Obery.

PLYMOUTH, Mass., Sept. 19.—Pascal White and family, living at Obery, went cranberrying, leaving their house in charge of a small child. In their absence the building took fire and burned to the ground. The child was saved. Loss $2000; uninsured.

After Campaign Speakers.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—Josiah Quincy, assistant secretary of state, chairman of the Massachusetts Democratic state committee, is here for a few days. One of his purposes is to obtain national speakers for the state campaign.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 19.—Reports at midnight from the disturbed section above the city are that everything is quiet and that the guards are still on duty patrolling the levee and interior roads with Winchesters.

Perry of Limerick will deliver the historical address, and Rev. John Barstow of Glastonbury, Ct., will read the ode.

Wages Will Be Cut Down.

NASHUA, N. H., Sept. 19.—Agent W. D. Cadwell of the Nashua and Jackson company, employing about 2400 hands, states that it is very probable the mill here will, at an early day, make the same cut in wages, about 10 per cent, which has just been made in Manchester and Lowell.

Shoemakers Strike.

LYNN, Mass., Sept. 19.—All the employes of Thomas Plant & Co., shoe manufacturers, went out on strike this afternoon. They were ordered out by the Knights of Labor in support of the strike instituted by the edgesetters last week.

American Forgers Abroad.

Mr. Frank H. Bowen of Springfield, Mass., has recently patented a machine for typewriting music. Hitherto the lack of some means for accurately and easily producing from one to a few dozen copies of a piece of music has been increasingly felt.

THE CYNIC.

The only way to get the upper hand of a woman is to be more woman than she is herself.

One may make anything out of an old love—even a new one—anything except friendship.

The surest way of making an unhappy marriage is to make up one's mind to marry happily.

There is only one way of being happy where the heart is concerned, and that is to have no heart.

To try to cure one's self of a woman one loves by leaving her is like trying to cure thirst by refusing to drink.

One never loves as one is loved, and so the art of being happy in love consists in giving all and asking nothing in exchange.

Ideal happiness is found when two lovers love each other equally. Next to that the best happiness is when they both cease to love at the same time.

The worst thing which can happen to a madman is not to be entirely mad. The worst thing which can happen to a lover is to reason about his love.

Learning to know women is learning to know in advance the details of the suffering they will cause you without having any antidote against that suffering.

Love is a disease, and the most fortunate patient in this as in other diseases is he who, never having read a book of medicine, does not know what ails him, but suffers dumbly.—Paul Bourget.

THE SCHOOLMARM.

Professor Edward S. Dana of Yale college has been granted a year's leave of absence in order to recruit his health.

The Dajakese of Borneo never bury a dead member of their tribe until a slave can be produced, who is beheaded at the interment or cremation, to attend the deceased in the next world.

Pledging one's health was formerly done by a man sitting next the drinker standing up beside him with a drawn sword in order that no one should stab him while his hands were holding the cup.

Many of the houses in Holland have a special door which is never opened save on two occasions, when there is a marriage or a death in the family. The bride and groom enter by this door; it is then nailed or barred up until a death occurs, when it is opened, and the body is removed by this exit.

A man can beard the savage tiger in his lair without a quiver of his muscles, but he cannot bring an unexpected friend to dinner on a washing day without trembling in every limb.

A man can be a senior wrangler and acquire fame as an authority on the most abstruse subjects, but he cannot answer the questions of a 3-year-old child without revealing his ignorance.

A man can wait many years in proud silence for the public appreciation of his work, but at a domestic crisis he cannot get up and light the fire every day for a week without feeling that he is fit for immediate canonization.—London Tit-Bits.

THE STOCK MARKET.

Dealings In Leading Securities In Boston and New York.

BOSTON, Sept. 19.—In the outside market call money is quoted at 8 to 10 per cent, and time money is nominally 6 per cent.

It requires but a few sentences to tell the story of the stock market. Each day of suspense at Washington only drags heavier upon it. Operations now are within the narrowest limits, and, unless some favorite is vigorously attacked, no persistent effort is made to sustain prices.

London, likewise, has ceased to render assistance. Quotations from there this morning were irregular, Erie, St. Paul and Union Pacific all being weaker. The opening here was slow and downward. Atchison continued to be freely sold, opening ¼ off at 19¾ and sliding to 19⅛. The seconds ranged between 28¼ and 29. Sugar Refining was irregular. Starting off at the last quotation, 85, it dropped below 85, and then rallied above it, while the preferred was ¼ stronger at 80. Chicago, Burlington and Quincy advanced ¼ to 84¾ while Union Pacific registered a loss of the same amount. New York and New England opened fractionally weaker at 24¾ and Fitchburg preferred ½ up at 79.

Tubbs' orchestra provided appropriate and inspiring selections, and the guests departed with best wishes for the future success of the organization.

The Jewish Holiday.

The stores kept by local Hebrews will be closed today in recognition of Yom Kipper, the day of atonement, the great Jewish festival of the year, and the day will be observed as a holiday.

The orthodox Jews fast all day and many rabbis do likewise, but the congregations of the modern type do not observe very strictly this regulation.

Joshua Barstow in Meriden.

The Meriden Journal says: Joshua Barstow of Norwich is visiting his nephew, C. T. Barstow at Ives, Upham & Rand's. Mr. Barstow, who is eighty-five years old, is one of the pioneer printers of this country, having been with Horace Greeley when he edited his first paper, The Log Cabin.

Sustains Defendant's Claim.

Judge Shipman has filed an opinion with Clerk Marvin of the United States court in the case of the Sawyer Spindle company et al. vs. the W. G. & A. R. Morrison company of Willimantic, in which he sustains the defendant's claim that the spindle in question was not the same in every particular as that which the plaintiffs claimed.

The "Elenora."

The New London Telegraph says: The new steam yacht that the Bath Iron works will build for William A. Slater will probably be called the Elenora, Mr Slater having expressed a preference for that name. And then, again, there is a superstition among yachtsmen that there ought to be only seven letters in the name of a yacht to insure that she will be attended with a reasonable share of good luck.

Paying the Soldier Boys.

The new military law provides that troops shall be paid within ten days after the tour of duty. No payment has been made yet for camp duty which ended August 26. Muster pay rolls which were submitted to headquarters in camp, in order to secure accuracy according to the interpretation by headquarters of the new law as to pay, are now being returned with directions for corrections.

President Thomas Clark of the Norwich & New York Transportation company started for the Adirondacks Monday. He will be absent several weeks.

ROBBED AT CHICAGO.

Samuel Dudley's Inside Vest Pocket Rifled of $155.

The New London visitors at the fair include Samuel Dudley, says The Day. Mr. Dudley's trip will be more expensive than he expected.

One day's expenses at the fair cost Mr. Dudley $155 plus what he intentionally paid out.

The amount named was in Mr. Dudley's inside vest pocket, nicely stowed away in a pocketbook. It was there in the morning, but in the evening when Mr. Dudley happened to look into the pocketbook, the cash was gone.

There is only one explanation for the loss. A pickpocket had been at work. The thief must have been a particularly nervy chap to have thus gone to an inside pocket. And especially nervy was he to place the pocketbook back after he had emptied it.

WILLIMANTIC.

The Fair Dates Advanced a Day—The Women Hold a Caucus—The Murphy Meetings.

The opening day of the eleventh annual fair and exhibition by the Willimantic Fair association was rainy and caused a postponement of the fair, which opens today for three days. Everything points to a successful exhibition this year. Nearly one hundred entries have been made in the bicycle races and over half as many in the trotting and pacing classes.

Thomas Murphy opened his temperance campaign at Loomer opera house Sunday evening and each night hundreds of people are turned away unable to gain access to the spacious theater. It is estimated that 3,500 people squeezed in to hear Mr Murphy the first night and nearly as many more were turned away.

The funeral of William H. Osborn was held from his residence Tuesday afternoon, the Rev. C. W. Scott officiating. Appropriate music was furnished by a quartette composed of Mr. and Mrs. L. J Jordan, Albert L. French and Mrs. J. L Walden. Interment was in the Willimantic cemetery.

The ladies who have registered have held their caucus and nominated Mrs. Harriet Capen and Mrs. Jennie C. Kies for the board of school visitors, and Mrs. Emir W. Hamlin and Mrs. Abbie W. Abel for members of the High school committee. Mrs. C. A. Dinsmore was appointed to bring the slate before the regular republican, Mrs. C. H. Colgrove before the democratic, and Mrs. Chas Crane before the prohibition caucus

Owing to illness Murphy did not make an address Tuesday evening. The speakers were Rand of East Hartford, Boyd of Providence and Lawton of Hartford.

"Although it is a question of a few isolated cases of cholera, the Hamburg-American Packet company, acting in accordance with the advice of Dr. White, representing the United States marine service, and Dr. Nash, representing Dr. Jenkins of New York, have decided to make Cuxhaven the port of entry and departure for all steamers in the future. There all steerage passengers are kept for five days under medical observation and control before embarking."

AFTER SLEEPLESS TOIL.

The Mineral Range Express Robbers Are All Captured.

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 19.—A special to The News from Marquette says: After three days' sleepless toil the detectives have captured all who were implicated in the robbery of the express car on the Mineral Range train Friday, but are as far as ever from finding the plunder. The money has been accurately traced through the hands of all who were in the plot, but here the clew ends. The robbers have either cleverly concealed the booty, or, as they aver, and the detectives are now disposed to believe, others have succeeded in filching the money from the robbers themselves

Of the $75,000 stolen from the train it is now pretty well known that aside from $1,900 found in Liberte's trunk none has been recovered. John Winters and Wesley Shop, the men who handled the trunk here, have been released. No evidence could be obtained against them, and they proved that they had no knowledge of the contents of the trunk.

Railway Accident Caused by Disobedience of Orders.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Sept. 19.—Owing to disobedience of orders by Engineer Hufford and Conductor Shaffer of a local passenger train, it was run into this evening by the New York express, at Slocum siding, on the Lehigh Valley road. The engines came together with much violence and both were badly smashed. Strange to say neither the firemen nor the engineers of either train were hurt, and all stuck to their posts. The passengers on both trains were thrown over the seats and into the aisles. Nine persons were injured, none fatally.

Bill to Repeal Law Requiring Payments Toward Sinking Fund.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—Representative Sayer of Texas today introduced a bill to repeal the law requiring annual payments of 1 per cent. toward the sinking fund. The bill simply abolishes the compulsory requirement. The total requirements for the sinking fund up to June 30 last, if the law has been strictly complied with, would have been about $970,000,000. The amount actually paid up to that date in the redemption of bonds and other obligations was $1,914,905,463

Bill to Prohibit National Bank Officers or Employes from Borrowing Its Funds.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—The house committee on banking and currency today directed Mr. Cox to prepare a favorable report upon his bill to prohibit any officer or employe of a national bank from borrowing from its funds. Mr. Brosius moved the appointment of a committee of five, to which should be referred all bills authorizing the issue of national bank notes up to the par value of bonds deposited to secure circulation. Action on this was postponed until next week.

The Valkyrie Not Yet in Port.

QUARANTINE, Sept. 20.—The Valkyrie was not sighted up to 1 a. m. Several tugs went down the lower bay in search of her. Incoming steamships were hailed but none of their captains had seen the English yacht. The wind had died out and there was almost a dead calm off shore during the night. The yacht could make little headway under such conditions and there is little chance of her getting in to port before tomorrow afternoon.

Paid for Prosecuting Their Claims for Seats.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—In the senate today a resolution to pay Mr. Beckwith $3,900 for his time and expenses in prosecuting his claim for a seat in the senate, under appointment from the governor of Wyoming, was agreed to.

Also like resolutions to pay Mr. Mantle of Montana and Mr. Allen of Washington $3,500 each.

Connecticut State Fair.

MERIDEN, Conn., Sept. 19.—The twenty-fourth annual fair of the Connecticut State Agricultural society opened this morning at the Meriden Trotting park with the usual rain storm, but toward noon the weather cleared up and the indications are that the fair will be the most successful in every particular yet held by the society.

Corset Manufacturers Talk.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 19.—Twenty five corset manufacturers met here tonight and discussed the advisability of protesting against the tariff bill now before the ways and means committee. As this bill removes the tax on corsets they are anxious not to have it passed. They will hold another meeting soon.

Ives Again Defeats Roberts.

CHICAGO, Sept. 19.—In the international billiard match Frank Ives tonight, again defeated John Roberts, Jr., of England. Roberts played a magnificent uphill game. By careful nursing Ives made 110, 134 and 140. Roberts developed a wonderful reserve that nearly earned him a victory. Ives scored 1,001 and Roberts 969.

The Dakotas have always had reason to boast of their wheat crops, and now apparently South Dakota justly can be proud of its corn crop. The state has a "corn belt" of twenty six counties.

It has just been ascertained that the working of the electric railway in London can positively be felt as far away as the north of Norfolk, the motion being conveyed by the telegraph wires along the whole distance—about 120 miles.

The most singular ship in the world is the Polyphemus of the British navy. It is simply a long steel tube, deeply buried in the water, the deck rising only four feet above the sea. It carries no masts or sails, and is used as a ram and torpedo boat.

MOB WAS MET BY RIFLE BULLETS.

Attempt at Lynching Foiled by the Roanoke Light Infantry.

NINE MEN KILLED.

The Mayor of Roanoke, Va., Shot in the Foot—Prisoner Secreted.

ROANOKE, Va., Sept. 20.—Robert Smith, a negro, today assaulted and nearly killed Mrs. Henry Bishop, wife of a well-to-do farmer in Botetourt county. Mrs Bishop was at the market with a load of produce and Smith bought a box of grapes. He asked her to go with him to get the money, and taking her to a house near by, locked the door and drawing a revolver, he demanded her money. She gave it up and while doing so, jerked the revolver from his hand. The negro then choked her, threw her down and pounded her head with a brick, leaving her for dead.

Mrs. Bishop shortly afterwards regained consciousness, and returning to the market told of the outrage. Detective Baldwin soon arrested the negro.

An excited crowd attempted to take him away from the officer and lynch him, but Baldwin with the prisoner on a horse, dashed away at full speed and soon had him behind the bars. A crowd gathered around the jail and kept increasing as night approached.

At 5 o'clock the Roanoke light infantry marched to the jail by the orders of the mayor. Guards were posted and the streets in the immediate vicinity cleared. About dark the crowd was increased by a hundred men from the woman's home, headed by Mrs. Bishop's son, a fireman on the Norfolk & Western railway.

At 8 o'clock portions of the mob battered at a side door of the jail where the militia and Mayor Trout had retired. Being refused admission the mob commenced to shoot and the mayor was shot in the foot. The militia were then ordered to return the fire and a volley from about twenty-five rifles was poured into the mob. It is thought that about five men were killed by this fire, and as many more wounded, some of them fatally.

During the excitement caused by the volley, the negro was taken from the jail by an officer and secreted. The dead and wounded were removed to a drug store and in charge of physicians. The militia then left the scene as quietly as possible.

The following is a list of the dead and wounded: S. A. Vick, hotel proprietor; Will Sheats, fireman on the Norfolk & Western railroad; Charles Whitmore, conductor on the Norfolk & Western road; J. B. Tyler, George E. White, fireman on the Norfolk & Western road; W. J. Jones, engineer on the Norfolk & Western road; Emmet J. Small, George Settle and John Mills.

Injured: Otto Falls, shot through the body and will die; Will Eddie, shot through the groin; George O. Moore, Frank Mills, shot in the arm; Tom Nelson, leg off; Leroy White, shot in the neck; J. B. McGhee, shot in the leg; Charles Powell, shot through the body; J. H. Campbell, Edgar Whalls, C. W. Fugal, C. P. Noell, O. B. Taylor, —— Hall, David Engelen, H. E. [illegible] and T. B. Nelms.

Several speeches were made after the militia retired, and Judge Woods of the Hustings court assured the mob that Smith had been removed from the jail, and [illegible] two of the crowd through the jail to prove the truth of his statement. This and the speech of J. Allen Watts, the democratic candidate for the state senate, did much to pacify the crowd; but they hung around the jail and adjacent streets for several hours afterwards, many dispersing to search for the secreted prisoner.

At midnight the scene had quieted down and no further trouble is expected. The militia remain under the mayor's orders, although it is probable they will not be called out again. Mayor Trout declares that he will uphold the law.

WORCESTER DRIVING PARK.

September Meeting Opens With a Small Crowd Present.

WORCESTER, Mass., Sept. 20.—The September meeting of the Worcester Driving Park association opened today with a rather small crowd present. The week opened badly for the favorites as two of them were thrown down, but the third won in straight heats. In the 2 30 trot, Miller Boy was the favorite, but he was not in the game with Beulah, although he won the second heat after a great race.

In the 2 18 pace Hy Wilkes, the favorite, won in straight heats. Ben Bolt was the favorite in the 2 27 trot, but he did not cut much of a figure in the race which is unfinished, Eunice having won two heats and Crusoe one. Darkness caused a postponement until tomorrow. The summaries:

Racing at Pittsburg.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Sept. 20.—The racing at Hopewood today was replete with surprises. Two races went unfinished and two were completed in good style. Hypsie, who had won two heats of the 2.27 class pace on Tuesday, lost the event because of a bad cut in his left forefoot received in the fourth heat, and it was won by Bonnie B. Bonnie B. lowered his mark two seconds.

Happy Wanderer, the favorite, won the 2 21 class trot, lowering his mark nearly two seconds. Marvel took two heats in this race.

Vitallo looked like a sure thing for the 2 13 pace until Lucille R. took the third heat from him at the wire. Judge Keller took the first two heats of the unfinished 2 25 trot, though Obediah seemed the most deserving. Keller brought his mark down from 2.25 to 2 21½ in the first heat. The betting today was lively. The attendance was 2,500.

Episcopal Academy Opens.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 20.—The Episcopal Academy of Cheshire opened its school year this morning with an unusually large attendance. Rev Mr. Stoddard and almost the whole of last year's faculty return.

During the past summer vacation extensive improvements in the grounds and buildings have been made, and, judging from the present outlook, the coming year will be a highly successful one.

INTERESTING SIGHT AT THE FAIR.

Representative of Each Religious Faith Blesses Liberty Bell.

CHICAGO, Sept. 20.—The attendance upon the parliament of religions this morning showed something of a falling off, many of the delegates having gone to Jackson park in advance of the religious demonstration this afternoon, when a representative of each faith of the world, beginning with the most ancient, will sound the new liberty bell in the name of peace, unity and liberty of all religions, at the same time repeating a silent prayer of his respective divinity, a king blessings on the bell.

The questions discussed this morning related to the present religious condition of Germany, upon which Count Bernstorff spoke briefly; Christian evangelization in America, regarding which some facts were narrated by the Rev. Dr. James Brand, and the spirit and doctrines of Islam, which formed the subject of an interesting essay by Mohammed Russell Alexander Webb. The Rev. F. Fay Mills, the noted evangelist, also delivered a general exhortation upon "Christ, the Saviour of the World."

The congress of the three religious associations was opened in the hall of Washington, the delegates being welcomed by Chairman Bonney. At a meeting of the congresses of Unitarians and quakers, the papers read dealt exclusively with church work and methods.

The Schloss Murder Trial.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 20.—The testimony for the defense was continued at the Schloss murder trial today. Dr. Wolff of Hartford continued his testimony on microscopic and photographic work in his examination of the case and produced evidence to the effect that the girl had made an effort to kill her unborn child several days before her own death.

Nathan Wolf, a friend of Cash, the girl's betrayer, told the story of his interview with the doctor at the time the alleged operation was performed. He imparted the astonishing evidence that Cash, Ruth, the hack driver and himself had made a dishonorable agreement to conceal the fact that the girl had previously taken purgative pills.

After a severe cross-examination by Prosecuting Attorney Fox the court adjourned.

Supreme Lodge Sons of Hermann.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 20.—The supreme lodge of the Sons of Hermann changed the several clauses of their constitution in their meeting today. The age for admission was fixed at 18 years.

The reports read show that 17 states are represented with a combined capital of $800,000. The order is building a monument to the memory of Hermann, the great German, for whom it takes its name. The monument is being erected at New Ulm, Minn. It will cost about $30,000. The lodge voted a tax of 20 cents per year for each member until the sum is raised.

This evening's session was devoted to amusement. Tomorrow a big parade will be held in which 2,000 members of the order will participate.

How the Heir to the Austrian Throne is Traveling.

SPOKANE, Wash., Sept. 20.—Archduke Franz Ferdinand, heir to the Austrian throne, passed through Spokane en route to the Yellowstone park yesterday. He had been invited to inspect or review an encampment here of 800 regular troops, but he sent the following telegram through Count Wurmbrand, head chamberlain in waiting, which is important as indicating his course while in the United States:

"Northport, Wash., Sept. 19.—Lieutenant Colonel Cook—Thanks very much, but his imperial highness regrets very much not to be able to accept your kind invitation of inspecting troops and visiting—traveling in strict incognito."

Letter Carriers Meet.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 20.—More than 200 representatives of Uncle Sam's army of gray-coated letter carriers, with credentials as delegates and holding proxies from letter carriers' associations in 320 cities of the country, were called to order in Masonic Temple yesterday morning, the opening day of the fourth annual convention of the National Letter Carriers' association.

The morning session consisted of speech making. President Smith delivered his annual address, and the report of the executive committee was presented at the afternoon session, and the evening was devoted to a reception.

Burglars Secure Ten Cents at the Warehouse Point Post Office.

WAREHOUSE POINT, Conn., Sept. 20.—Another burglary occurred at the post office this morning about 1 o'clock. With tools secured from a blacksmith shop the thieves pried off the casing of the front door, and were engaged in drilling the safe when they were heard by Night Watchman Smith of the Warehouse Point [illegible] company. An alarm was given and the burglars fled. All they secured was ten cents taken from a drawer.

This is the fifth time the office has been entered.

New England Trotting Horse Breeders' Association.

BOSTON, Sept. 20.—The annual trotting meeting of the New England Trotting Horse Breeders' association, for which $25,000 will be awarded in prizes and purses will open on Monday next at Mystic park, to continue five days. Every class is well filled and some excellent trotting is sure to be witnessed.

A Methodist Pastor Wanted in Boston.

BOSTON, Sept. 20.—It is stated that Rev. Dr. James Boyd Brady of the Franklin Street Methodist church in Newark, N. J., has been asked to come to Boston and accept the pastorate of the People's church now in charge of Rev. Emory J. Haines.

"SPIKER" WANTS TO CONFESS.

But Another Convict Named Wall Gets Ahead of Him.

PLANS DETAILED.

Murphy the Leading Spirit—Elwood's Body Awaiting Claimants.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Sept. 20.—"Spiker" Murphy, who concocted the scheme to break out of the state prison, in attempting to carry out which "Gentleman George" Elwood was shot and killed by Deputy Warden Rowe Monday evening, has sent for Warden Viall, stating that he wishes to make a confession. He is still in the dark cell and will be kept there.

George Wall, one of the conspirators, this noon made a full confession. The scheme included the murder, which Albert Howson last night confessed were planned.

Wall brings another convict into the scheme—Albert O'Hern. Two other men ran out of the shop at the time Elwood did, intending to join in the delivery. They thought better of it, however, and quickly went back to their work. Their names are withheld for the present, pending another investigation, which is to determine how extensive the delivery was planned to be. Severe punishment is to be meted out to every convict concerned in the affair.

Wall's confession is as follows, and it shows that Murphy was the leading spirit:

"Murphy asked me to help him and Elwood in their attempt to escape. He wished me to close the doors in the hall when he rushed in from the shop, and asked me to throw pepper in the officer's eyes after he had struck him with the hammer. He said he would take me along with him; that we could make lots of money by passing counterfeit money, as he knew how to make it, and that we would go to California.

"He put a note in my pocket as we were marching in line, he being behind me in the line. The note he wished me to give Elwood in the shop. I did not look at the note, but threw it in the water closet.

"He had been giving me a plug of tobacco about every week because he did not want me to give him away. He used to drop the notes besides Elwood's bucket in the yard, after I told him that they were watching me.

"The first time we talked the matter over was on the Fourth of July in the yard. The time for the break was then set for some time in September. He promised me a silk handkerchief and to keep me in tobacco if I kept the matter quiet. Elwood was to signal me when the time came to make the break.

"Eli and he were to hit and knock out the deputy and Mr. Ward, and they were to get the pistols and clubs and then to rush into the hall, and while one unlocked the doors the other was to make Mr. Ward throw up his hands. Murphy said that the deputy carried a large amount of money and that would help us.

Murphy was to take me by the hand and carry me along with him. We were to take to the woods.

"I had been sick and confined to the hospital until Aug. 25, and it was on that day that he proposed that I take part in the affair. Before that he paid me to keep it quiet. He said he would kill the first officer who harmed me, even if it took his own life.

"I told my mother while I was in the hospital about this, and she advised me to tell the warden about it; but I was afraid to tell him for fear I would be put into the dark cell.

"Murphy said that Elwood was not afraid of anything; that he had been shot before, and had broken out of a place where there 140 officers and over 700 prisoners, and that a man who could get away from there could surely get out of here, and that the officers here were all cowards. Albert O'Hern was to be reported the same day, and come in with us. I saw O'Hern pass notes in the shop to Elwood which he got from Murphy.

Murphy said he was trying to get up to the hospital, as he knew he could work that, and Elwood was to try to get up, too, as they thought they could saw a bar off and fix the night watchman if he tried to stop them.

Murphy said he was an innocent man; that two other men did the work that he was sent here for, and that he did not come to die in a place like this. He told me not to tell my mother for fear she would tell the warden, and that we both would be punished for it.

"This is about all I can think of now, and it is all true."

Wall's confession was written out and signed by him.

Edwards' remains are in the prison tomb, awaiting the claims of any friends or relatives who may wish to bury them. An inquest on them will be held tomorrow.—[Special to Boston Herald.

Meeting of Trunk Line Association.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—A meeting of the Trunk Line association was held here today to consider a proposition made by the Pennsylvania railway to reduce the excursion rate to Chicago to $15. After discussion the proposition was rejected, but it was agreed that all the trunk lines may allow a special $15 rate from the 19th to the 23d of October, to accommodate New Yorkers who want to be in Chicago.

Burglars Beat Him and Fled.

NORWALK, Conn., Sept. 20.—Daniel Gantley and Thomas Cook of Norwalk burglarized Judson Raymond's house at Wilton last evening, securing a couple of guns and other articles. Mr. Raymond discovered his loss later, and found the thieves on the roadside a mile away with the stolen property.

The burglars attacked Mr. Raymond and gave him a terrible beating and then fled, but were arrested at midnight. They will be taken to Wilton for trial.

Robbed an Insurance Office.

MERIDEN, Conn., Sept. 20.—Howard Higbee, a young man who belong to a good family here, was arrested in Wallingford early this evening, on the charge of robbing the insurance office of Holt & Stearns and getting over $350 in cash on Monday night. Higbee was a former employe. His wife was also held.

THE TARIFF.

Carpet, Match and Brush Manufacturers Before the Committee.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—Representative Ryan of New York introduced reports of the carpet industry, and spoke of the importance of the industry in Yonkers. The carpet mills there employed 7,600 persons. Over half the population of the place depends on the industry for employment. The mills had paid over $3,000,000 in wages.

Allan Ainsworth, a Yonkers carpet operative, said there was a general feeling among workingmen that if the tariff was let alone they would have plenty of work.

O. C. Barber of Chicago, match manufacturer, requested the committee to allow the present tariff of 10 cents a gross to remain on matches.

J. E. Walbourn, a brush manufacturer of Baltimore, was against a change on the brush schedule of the tariff.

Representative McCall of Massachusetts, in behalf of his constituents, asked that the committee first agree upon the time at which the proposed tariff should go into effect. If it was taken for granted that there was a general reduction, this would give manufacturers and importers time to arrange their affairs.

Frank Benton of this city made an appeal for the retention of the present duty.

Hearing adjourned.

House of Representatives.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—Immediately after the approval of the journal the fight over the federal elections bill was resumed.

Mr. Burrows moved to dispense with the call of committees for reports.

Pending this, Mr. Catchings (dem.) of Mississippi presented a resolution from the committee on rules; but before it was read Mr. Burrows raised the point that the resolution was not in order.

The speaker overruled the point of order, and then the house was thrown into great confusion. Mr. Reed made one of his witty speeches, in which he denounced the speaker's decision. If the majority desired to stand by that decision, of course it could do so; but if Herod was to be outHeroded Herod wanted to witness the transaction. [Loud laughter and applause].

Mr. Reed and the speaker had some very bitter passages; and then Mr. Burrows appealed from the decision, and Mr. Fitch (dem.) of New York moved to lay the appeal on the table.

Matters at Newport Torpedo Station.

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 20.—The delay in the receipt of projectiles for the submarine gunboat Ericsson, destroyer, is seriously interfering with the experimental programme laid out at the torpedo station. The projectiles will have to be balanced before the trial will take place, and this alone will consume some time. After overhauling the torpedo boat Cushing she will again be ready for duty. Her air and torpedo tube mounts have been put in. She will return to Peconic bay for practice with Whitehead torpedoes soon. The official trial with the Howell torpedo are suspended during extensive repairs to the stiletto engines.

Hard Luck for Settler Tomlinson.

ENID, O. T., Sept. 20.—Baker Tomlinson, who settled on a claim six miles west of this place, left his wife and two children at noon yesterday and came here to file his claim at the land office. While absent a prairie fire, fanned by a brisk southwest wind, overtook his wife and children and turned them terribly. Mrs. Tomlinson and one of the children cannot recover. Fourteen hundred dollars, which the settler had left in his wagon, was also burned. Tomlinson was in line, waiting to file his claim, when the terrible news was broken to him.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—The Rev. Samuel B. Halliday, for many years the assistant of the late Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, and who was supposed to have had a slight stroke of a paralysis in the parlors of the Plymouth church at the Welch Ladies' choir yesterday, was much improved today. His illness was not due to paralysis, but to indigestion. He will be about as usual in a day or two.

Flames Making Havoc Among the Frame Buildings.

1,500 MEN FIGHTING FIRE.

People Seeking Safety in the Mines—Awe Inspiring Sight.

DEADWOOD, S. D., Sept. 20.—At 5 30 p. m. the forest fires which has been burning in this vicinity for ten days, reached Dead City. The Homestake saw mills and the lumber yards were the first to go.

The flames fanned by a strong wind, are now making havoc among the frame buildings of the town.

Help has been requested from all the neighboring towns and 1,500 men are battling with the fire. The city of 10,000 inhabitants seems to be doomed. On the east the fire reached the foothills, five miles from here.

The property of Henry Stearnes was burned and also that of Charles T. Haver. The Stearnes family, numbering six, drove two miles through the flames. Their condition is critical. The smoke is suffocating and people are getting ready to move.

The Continental hotel and the Cliff house, Plunder's ranch and Thompson's ranch, all situated three miles from here, have been burned.

The forest fires have advanced to Fantail gulch, and people are seeking safety in the mines. Many buildings and miners' residences have been destroyed.

North and west of the city is a seething mass of flames tonight and the scene is terrible, grand and awe inspiring.

ON THE TROLLEY.

Several Providence People Badly Injured by a Smashup.

PROVIDENCE, Sept. 20.—There was a singular accident and smashup of a single passenger car on the East Providence route of the trolley car system last night. A car containing twelve passengers was wrecked and five persons were badly injured. Two are seriously hurt and one was taken to the hospital. The car left Providence after midnight with a fair-sized number of passengers. There was a land fog overhanging the lowlands of East Providence, and near Ingraham's Corner it was very dense. The motorman was not fully acquainted with the road, and he ran full tilt upon the sharply curved track at the corner. The car jumped the rails, plunged into a large iron watering trough and turned topsy turvey, smashing windows and splintering the woodwork.

In the car at the time were ten passengers, while on the platform were two others, one of whom was John D. Eddy, a well known business man. Eddy jumped when he saw the car going toward the watering trough, but he was caught under the wrecked car and had to be pried out by a gang of men who were called from neighboring houses.

Eddy was badly injured externally and internally, and was taken to the hospital. The passengers inside the car were all cut and bruised.

Miss Isabella Browned of East Providence had her wrist cut and her side and back were badly hurt. She may also lose an eye.

Ernest Witherell of East Providence was cut on the face and hands, his side was cut open and he received internal injury.

John Dodge of Drownville had two ribs broken and he was injured internally.

Motorman Read was also badly injured.

Parade of New York Italians.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—The Italians of New York turned out about 8 000 strong today in gorgeous costume to celebrate the twenty third anniversary of the occupation of Rome by the Italian government troops. Every patriotic son of Italy had decorated his residing place with American and Italian flags, until the east side between Chambers and Houston streets resembled an Italian village.

On account of Mayor Gilroy's action in refusing to allow the Italian flag to fly from the City hall today, the parade did not pass in review there before Colonel George McClellan, as was the original intention.

The Fate of a Pennsylvania School Girl.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Sept. 20.—A nine-year-old girl named Cooper, daughter of an employe of the Hummelstown Brown Stone Co., who lives about two miles from Hummelstown, went to school yesterday morning carrying a lunch in a basket. When she failed to return home in the evening her parents became anxious and instituted a search, which resulted in the finding of the body of the child strangled to death. She had been outraged and murdered, a portion of her underclothing being used to strangle her. It is supposed the fiend who committed the crime was a Hungarian laborer.

The following prizes are offered in the ten mile handicap road race of the Rockville Wheel club: First, double action revolver; second, bicycle lamp, third, razor; fourth, L. A. W. pin, fifth, watch charm; sixth, Indian clubs. Special time prize, pair of opera glasses. The entries are as follows: Snow, Kite, Tanzier, Silcox, Filton, Liebe, E. Noble, Smith, Buchanan and Hartenstein. The above riders are well known in Norwich, having taken part in the different meets of the L. A. W. of Eastern Connecticut. Several of them captured prizes in the races here Labor day.

Interesting to Football Players.

It is the prevailing opinion that at the meeting of the Intercollegiate Football association, to be held October 1, the obnoxious undergraduate rule will be abolished and a milder measure substituted. At present Captain Hinkey of the Yale team is determined to live up to the rule, but it is known that he does not favor the measure. It deprived him of some splendid material, and when the proposition to repeal it is brought up he will undoubtedly be a strong advocate of repeal.

A RALLY SUNDAY

For the First Congregational Church at Norwich Town.

The First Congregational church, at Norwich Town, is planning to observe next Sunday as a Rally Sunday. An effort is being made to secure at the morning, noon and evening services as full an attendance as possible, in preparation for the fall and winter work. An appropriate sermon will be preached in the morning; the Sunday school, including the home school and the home department, will have its rally at the noon hour, and the evening worship will include a testimony meeting under the leadership of the Christian Endeavor society.

FATHER HARTY FIRST.

He Will Probably Be Successor to Bishop McMahon.

It is authoritatively announced that the voting on the part of the irremovable pastors and the board of consulting pastors, for the successor to the late Bishop McMahon, stood as follows: Rev. William H. Harty of Hartford, first: Rev. M. Tierney of New Britain, second, and Rev. John A. Mulcahy of Waterbury and Rev. Edward J. Broderick of Hartford, third, the two latter named priests receiving equal recognition from the conference of clergymen. These names in the order specified were forwarded to the pope.

The bishops of the archdiocese have not yet selected a set of names to forward to Rome.

It will be something of a surprise to Catholics generally to know that Rev. Father Harty was the first choice of the conference. It was the general belief that Rev. Father Broderick would be named first. Rev. Father Harty is one of the ablest priests in the diocese.

LAW AND ORDER LEAGUE.

The Annual Meeting—$6,000 Expended in the Work.

The annual meeting of the Citizens' Law and Order league of Connecticut was held in the United church chapel in New Haven on Wednesday afternoon, the 20th inst. Secretary Thrasher submitted his report for the year's work, which showed remarkable growth and energy of the organization. One hundred and fifty persons had been convicted. Many saloons, gambling dens and brothels had been closed. The secretary stated that public sentiment had undergone a wonderful change during the year, much to the advantage of the society. He made a vigorous defense of the detective system as employed by the league, reading from court decisions and charges endorsing the use of detectives.

The financial statement showed that about $6,000 had been expended in the work. Reports from local leagues were read, all showing that much had been accomplished.

An enthusiastic meeting was held in the evening at the same place, presided over by Prof. William C. Robinson, and addressed by Amos P. Wilder of New York, Col. L. Edwin Dudley of Boston and others. It is quite evident that the Law and Order league has come to stay, and that those who are determined to break the law had better keep a weather eye open. The organization has members in one hundred and ten towns of the state. Ten new leagues have been formed during the year. The work seems to be in a flourishing condition.

HIGHLY DRAMATIC.

Both Houses of Congress Are in a Deadlock.

DIFFERENT CAUSE IN EACH CASE.

First Time Double Deadlock Was Ever Known.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—The situation in congress is becoming decidedly dramatic. For the first time in the history of the government the spectacle is presented of both houses in a deadlock on different lines at the same time, and each prepared to enter upon a struggle of physical endurance to accomplish the purpose which the majority in either chamber has in view.

The difficulties which the house will encounter in the preliminary stages of debate on the election bill are likely to prove much less serious than those with which the senate has been struggling over for weeks and with which it will probably go on struggling for some weeks longer. The majority in the house has simply to secure the presence of a quorum of its own members and keep them in attendance, and the committee on rules, aided by the speaker, will do the rest. The debate will probably be long and very bitter, and all the resources in parliamentary strategy will be exhausted to delay action, and there is a clearly defined Outcome in Sight in the House.

It is far different in the senate. An incident in yesterday's debate in that body has been productive of much comment outside the chamber, as perhaps indicating a serious possibility. When Mr. Dubois of Idaho rose, instead of Mr. Teller, to pick up the Northern gage of battle, his tart reply carried with it suggestions that brought back unpleasant memories. After stinging to the quick the "administration Republicans," as he called them, by satirical references to their course, he asked whether the silver repeal bill might not eventually be beaten by the same indirect means that proved fatal to the force bill. As Mr. Dubois truly said, the senate never voted on the latter bill, for, under one of the peculiar rules of that body, it was one day simply displaced by the reapportionment bill, as the unfinished business after occupying that position for 30 days. Thereby is fell and was never heard of in a legislative sense, although it has been frequently the subject of more or less unpleasant reference and recrimination in ensuing debates. Yesterday Mr. Dubois remarked significantly that even the silver senators might eventually be so overcome by administration influence as to be found supporting the Democratic senators in their effort to pass the bill to repeal federal election law.

That was the remark that disturbed some of the oldest senators, and the inference they draw from it is that the silver senators hope to protract the debate until the house has passed the Tucker bill and then join with the southern Democratic senators in voting to take it up in the senate and thus displace the silver repeal bill—exactly

As Was Done With the Force Bill.

Meanwhile in both houses all general legislation will remain suspended until a conclusion is reached on the two topics daily becoming more closely entwined with each other—the repeal of the Sherman law and of the federal elections legislation. The introduction of bills still goes on, but the committees simply receive them in a perfunctory way and pigeon hole them for a future day.

Some pessimistic onlookers are inclined to think that if Chairman Wilson of the committee of ways and means is able to carry out his present intention of introducing a tariff bill by Nov. 1, that measure will be just about in time to take the place of the two topics now engrossing attention.

During the past 24 hours a great mass of petitions and remonstrances have been received by Chairman Wilson of the ways and means committee from West Virginia (his own state), Alabama, Tennessee and old Virginia as lost the closing of the tariff hearing, which was fixed at the 20th. The chairman and his Democratic colleagues insist that they

on the side of the manufacturers. They take the ground that if they extend the time longer the same influences will be brought to bear to keep open the agitation and protract the settlement of this question, which both sides agree should be disposed of at the earliest practicable moment. The committee has agreed to receive any communications bearing on any of the questions before it, pending the compilation of the tariff reform bill now in its hands. The Democratic members of the committee propose to begin on Thursday the holding of daily sessions, for the purpose of expediting their work to the utmost. As soon as the bill is completed it will be submitted to the full committee.

Chairman Wilson has mapped out a line of action which will control the selection of the articles which are to be embraced in the proposed revision of the tariff.

Free Raw Material Is the Corner Stone of the reform system, beginning with free wool, in regard to which the majority is a unit. On the question of free coal and free iron ore the majority does not exhibit the same unanimity. The representatives from Alabama, Tennessee, Virginia, Maryland and West Virginia have constituencies largely interested in the development of these two industries. To put these articles on the free list just at this time, say their people, would strike down enterprises which in their sections are still in their infancy, but of growing importance. The manufacturers of iron, steel rails, and metals in certain elementary forms, in the east and west, urge that these raw materials be put on the free list. This they claim will enable them to compete with the manufacturers whose plants are located contiguous to the coal fields and ore banks.

Great Part of Town Destroyed.

OWINGSVILLE, Ky., Sept. 20.—The fire here yesterday was gotten under control after a great part of the town had been destroyed. A close estimate places the aggregate loss at $160,000, and the insurance at $50,000.

An Apparent Injustice.

Mollie had been to church for the first time, and on her return home her grandmother asked her what she thought of it.

"I liked it very much," she replied, "but there was one thing I didn't think was fair."

"What was that, dear?"

"Why, one man did all the work, and then another man came around and got all the money."—Exchange.

TWO EMPTY GRAVES.

The Skeletons Now Decorate the Rooms of College Students.

MONTPELIER, Vt., Sept. 20.—There is considerable excitement, mixed with deep indignation, in the pretty little town of Middlebury over the discovery that three students of the local college have their rooms decorated with skulls and skeletons taken from a neighboring cemetery.

Time honored college pranks, such as removing signs and gates, have been overlooked, but the ghastliness of robbing graves has started a row that promises to make things warm for the young ghouls if the matter can be brought home to them.

Middlebury college is located in the town of that name, situated on the main line of the Central Vermont railroad. The town has about 3000 population, and is the Addison county seat.

It was a shock to the worthy townspeople, and to their neighbors for miles around, to learn that there are now two empty graves in the village burying ground, and that the skeletons of two worthy people decorate the rooms of irreverent college students.

THE POTTER TRIAL.

Case Drags Slowly Along While Lawyers Discuss Disputed Questions.

BOSTON, Sept. 20.—The sixth day of the Potter trial began this morning with the same monotony that has characterized every other opening since the trial began. As usual, too, the jurors were excused, and the somewhat wearisome arguments of counsel on the law points raised were continued.

There is no doubt that the points discussed are of grave importance, and that the arguments are unusually able, but they cannot, without taking rude liberties with the truth, be said to be particularly exciting. That this is true is evident from the fact that the trial is attracting no more spectators than the trial of an internal revenue case.

Colonel Hopkins set the ball rolling by continuing his argument on the statute under which the indictment is found, saying that under it the defendant cannot be indicted as a principal, as he had been, but should have been indicted as an aider and abettor, if at all.

UNIQUE TRAIN ROBBERY.

Two Rogues Collect Fares From Several Hundred Passengers.

GUTHRIE, O. T., Sept. 20.—A unique train robbery took place on the Santa Fe, north of here, Monday night. Several hundred people boarded a south-bound local freight, and soon after it started two men went through the cars selling tickets.

Nearly everybody paid cash fare, and the self-appointed conductors pocketed every amount tendered them, giving no change, and in several cases grabbing money from passengers and threatening them with the revolvers if they protested. Near Orlando the men jumped from the train, but they were afterward captured and locked up in the United States jail here. They had nearly $1000 on their persons, but refuse to give their names.

HIS NECK BROKEN.

Yet Michael McKeon Is Jolly and Laughs and Talks Merrily.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—Michael McKeon a driver, has been lying in Manhattan hospital with a broken neck since Sunday. The entire lower portion of his body from the breast down is completely paralyzed, and his left arm is partially paralyzed. His neck is so supported that he cannot move it.

The man is quite jolly. He laughs and talks merrily and occasionally passes a joke with the attending physicians and nurses. He may die in an hour, and it is just possible that he may live for years, but will never be able to leave his bed.

FAILURE AND FRAUD.

Many Valuable Goods Found and Evidences of Rascality Multiply.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 20.—The recent failure here of the wholesale notion firm of Simon, Ellman & Co., with liabilities of $160,000, has developed a sensational phase. Attorney John Boogher says one lot of goods valued at $10,000 had been found at Grand Island, Neb., one of $4000 at Memphis, and others at Springfield and Alton, Ills., Oklahoma City and other points. New York relatives are also implicated in the transactions.

Instances of fraud continue to multiply, and the sum total will reach not less than $100,000, according to the creditors' attorneys. Simon and Ellman cannot be found at present.

AFTER THE TRUSTS.

Letter of Inquiry Sent to All Corporations in Illinois.

SPRINGFIELD, Ills., Sept. 20.—In compliance with an act of the general assembly, the secretary of state has mailed to each corporation licensed to do business in the state a letter of inquiry and notice of the requirement that each shall file a certificate showing its connection with "trusts." The total number of letters mailed was over 28,000.

The corporations are required to make a report within 30 days, with a fee of $1 each, under penalty of prosecution by the attorney general. A judgment involves the forfeit of the right to do business in the state.

FATAL COLLISION.

Boston Flyer Runs Into Freight Train With Deadly Result.

BELVIDERE, N. J., Sept. 20.—It is reported that a fatal collision occurred on the Lehigh & Hudson river road at Lake Grinnell, this morning between a Boston flyer and a freight train. Andrew Herrick, conductor of the freight train, was killed, and a number of persons are reported to be injured.

Both locomotives were thrown down an embankment. The Pullman cars took fire and were burned. The road is completely blocked. Only meager details have thus far been received.

HELD WITHOUT BAIL.

Patrick Blake Charged With Murder Goes to Jail at Lowell.

LOWELL, Mass., Sept. 20.—Patrick F. Blake, charged with the murder of Joseph Hereaux, had his examination in the police court this morning.

The principal witness was Miss Annie Lenuce, who alleges that she saw Blake kick Hereaux in the side, and that after the assault Blake told her that Hereaux assaulted him last week, and he was now square.

Testimony was also given by Dr. Bicker, who assisted at the autopsy. The cross-examination was by Henry S. Courtney, attorney for the defense. Blake was committed without bail to await the action of the grand jury.

Another Sealer Seized.

VICTORIA, B. C., Sept. 20.—The schooner E. B. Marvin, which returned yesterday, brought 1236 skins. She brings news of the seizure of the Victoria sealer Maud S. by the Russians. The Maud S. was spoken by the Marvin on the date of the former's meeting with the warship. She had been ordered to Yokohama and was proceeding there. A FAMOUS NEVADA FIGHTER.

How He Prevented a Conflict With a Hot-Headed Youth.

[San Francisco Chronicle.]

"Big Jim" Cartter, the famous Nevada fighter, died the other day. Mark Twain in "Roughing It" tells a story of his prowess. Twain's account well illustrates the quiet determination of the man.

One evening Cartter entered a restaurant and unintentionally sat down on the hat of a tall and athletic hot-blooded young gentleman, who was with two or three other equally hot-spirited companions.

When Cartter realized what he had done he apologized, straightened the hat out to the best of his ability, and gave his assurance on his honor as a gentleman that it was not an intentional affront, and in a few modest words tried to appease the wrath of the young man, who was a worthy citizen, though a trifle inexperienced.

The man with the broken hat insisted that it was an outrage that could not be forgiven, and, taking off his coat, challenged the stranger to combat.

"If we must fight we must, I suppose," said Cartter slowly, as if undecided what to do. "I don't like the idea, though, for I don't believe the whole lot of you would have any chance with me. Let me show you something."

Quietly sitting down at the big table he took hold of it with his teeth and, bracing his knees against the lower part of the table, raised it and its contents, a big dinner for four, roast and all, and with his horse load stood erect.

When he put the table to the floor without spilling a drop from the well filled glasses there was an oppressive silence, which he broke by saying:

"I have already apologized. My name is Cartter. Let's all take a drink."

Nobody refused.

MAKING PRECIOUS STONES.

Mr. Edison Exercises His Talents in Cheapening the Cost of Gems.

The latest discovery of Thomas A. Edison is the secret of the composition of precious stones. That is, he has discovered how some precious stones are made, and he is now manufacturing rubies. Mr. Edison is not making rubies for ornament or with any intention of entering the jewelry trade, but simply to supply a want created by the manufacture of delicate machinery. The rubies he is making at the Orange laboratory are used as bearing in phonographs and in other delicate mechanism where great hardness is required. "I had been buying commercial rubies from Ceylon," said Mr. Edison recently to a New York World reporter, "and found that they cost a good deal of money. They are sold to the jewelry trade for the bearings of watches, and the ordinary 'jeweled' watch contains more or less of these stones By a system of analysis I discovered their chemical composition, and am now making rubies as good as I used to buy and a good deal cheaper."

"Are they the same as the rubies sold by jewelers?"

"No," said Mr. Edison, "they are not colored. I suppose it would be possible to color them. In fact, this has been done, and it is only a short time ago that it was discovered that a syndicate in Paris had been making and selling rubies for ornament, which passed as genuine in the jewelry trade. A leading firm of jewelers in New York was stuck on a lot of them, and had sold some to their customers as genuine stones before the fraud was discovered, when they refunded the money. The Paris syndicate was compelled to disgorge a large part of its profit. This only shows, however, how science is unravelling the secrets of nature. The ruby, the emerald, the garnet and other precious stones are allied, with little chemical difference except as to color, and I suppose it would be possible to manufacture them."

"Can you make a diamond?"

"No," said Mr. Edison. "I have tried that, but have not succeeded. The diamond is the hardest thing known. The most useful kind is the black diamond, which is used to polish the white variety. See what a great thing it would be if some one would find out how to make black diamonds cheap! They could be sold at a moderate sum to be used as rock drills, thereby cheapening engineering works and excavation. It is apparent, however, that the diamond differs radically from the ruby, the emerald and all other precious stones. It is much harder, and is in effect nothing but the purest carbon. Gold is only valuable because it is rare. It is not nearly so useful as iron, which is the real precious metal."

"What do you think of aluminum, 'the metal of the future?'"

"It is not much good," said Mr. Edison. "Aluminum is too soft. It is light, but it lacks strength. The metal of the future is nickel-steel, which combines strength with pliability. Gold is not worth as much as lead in commerce, and brass is more than worth its weight in gold."

Cold Air Machine.

[From the Detroit Free Press]

It was a hot day. It is not necessary to say how hot. Everybody knows what a hot day is without any further description or explanation. It was a hot day, then, when a man came into the editor's room and cast himself into a chair in an abject condition of hopeless disappointment.

"What's the matter?" inquired the editor as he drew his shirt sleeve across his soaking forehead.

"You know that cold blast invention of mine?" moaned the man; "that one I paid you 25 cents a line to write up for me, and spent $1,000 in advertising generally?"

The editor nodded.

"You remember how I said in the public prints that by introducing it into residences and offices the delightful temperature of a spring morning could be maintained all summer?"

The editor nodded.

"Well," and the man groaned, "it's no good after all."

"How no good?" and the editor looked sorry and sympathetic.

"Just no good, that's all," sighed the inventor. "I put one into a flat upstairs and as long as the weather was cool it did nicely, but as this confounded hot spell got hotter and hotter, we had to force the cool air faster through the pipes, until, by Jove, the friction of the rushing atmosphere made the pipes so hot that by the time the air reached the register it was at a temperature of 100°, and that last hot afternoon we came mighty near setting the flat on fire."

"What are you going to do about it?" inquired the editor kindly, after a few moments.

"Do about it? Do about it?" exclaimed the man, with a glitter in his eyes, "what shall I do? Send it up to Greenland, I guess, to thaw holes in the Arctic circle," and he raised himself from the chair and stumbled out of the office.

Love in the dawn is honey sweet—
  Sweet to the taste and fair to the sight;
Kisses are balm when young lips meet.

The heart in the throes of its first white heat
  Burns, a meteor shining bright;
Love in the dawn is honey sweet.

Enjoy while you can such moments fleet—
  Those transient spells of a fond delight;
Kisses are balm when young lips meet.

Glad as the morning, Marguerite,
  Are your girlish face and your bosom white;
Love in the dawn is honey sweet.

The lilies smile at our very feet,
  The roses blush to our left and right;
Kisses are balm when young lips meet.

Wedded today in this bower discreet
  Our lives shall fall upon lines of light;
Love in the dawn is honey sweet—
Kisses are balm when young lips meet!

WOMAN'S WORLD.

THE ART OF BREATHING.

Properly Exercised It Will Prevent or Retard Pulmonary Affections.

Dr. Mays will be surprised at the inference which some paragrapher has drawn from his paper in the August Century on "Breathing Movements as a Cure," which inference is to the effect that the wearing of corsets prevents consumption in women and is therefore a strong point on the side of those who wish to and do wear these articles of clothing.

Although this conclusion is possible perhaps from the premises presented, it is a hasty and surface one, admitting wide qualification, and, moreover, it introduces an issue upon which the paper does not bear in any degree. In his researches for data upon his subject Dr. Mays secured tracings of the breathing movements of several classes of women, full blooded Indians, partially and semicivilized and civilized, getting results proportionally different.

He found that the civilized woman, accustomed for generations to restricting clothing, uses the upper part of her breathing apparatus more thoroughly than her savage or semisavage sister or than do men.

And as we are all supplied with more lung surface than we habitually need, it chances that the portions left unemployed by Indian females and men, but perforce brought into service by the corset wearing woman, is the upper part or apex of the lungs.

And this, it seems, is the most common seat and genesis of pulmonary troubles.

Now, as the most reliable statistics show that women enjoy a greater immunity from consumption than men, a connection between the two facts is suggested. It is not established or even positively assumed.

But it is just here that some careless reader and hasty writer has seized upon and made his "point"—viz, that corsets prevent consumption.

The faulty nature of such an argument in favor of lacing is quickly apparent to any one who will finish the paper. All the serious vices of the habit remain unmoved by it, and its accidental virtue, as Dr. Mays points out, though not in this connection, is readily gained in a much better way.

The fact which the paper does bring out is the value of right breathing as a means to avoid and retard pulmonary affections. The author suggests some simple exercises that any mother will do well to have carried out in her family of children. The best of these is to swing the arms backward on a level with the shoulders as far as possible during each inspiration, bringing them together in front on the same level during each expiration, or to bring the hands slowly to the highest point above the head during inspiration, letting them fall gradually at the side as the breath exhales. The caution is added that a deep breath must be taken and slowly expelled to make these operative.

"Another very serviceable chest exercise," says the paper, "is to take a deep inspiration, and during expiration count or sing as long as possible. A male with a good chest capacity can count up to 60 or 90, while in a female even with good lungs this power is somewhat reduced. Practice of this sort will slowly develop the lungs, and the increased ability to count longer is a measure of the improvement going on within the chest. Or, again, the taking of six or eight full and deep breaths in succession every hour during the day, either while sitting at work or while walking out in the open air, will have a very beneficial effect."—New York Times.

Praise For American Women.

The usual cry reaches us from across the other side of the channel. English women who can dress smartly enough at home are wearing out their old clothes, and, worse than that, allowing themselves to look absolutely untidy at continental watering places. At railroad stations they appear gloveless, with hats and veils awry, and their boots old and dusty. Never does it so behoove a woman to look neat as when traveling, and more particularly an evidence. An American can be spotted in a moment, whether in a railway carriage or on board a steamer. As a rule, she eschews the sailor hat when on voyage. Instead, she wears a trim smart "boat" shape of waterproof felt, with waterproof ribbons, and bristling with wings stuck in by a cunning hand. Her gauze veil is always fresh and immaculate, her gloves easy fitting, but well cut and newly bought. Her skirt never draggles. No buttons are off her boots. Would that English women would follow our American cousins' example in this.—London Gentlewoman.

Keeping Tan Shoes Polished.

"They say that the girl of the future is to have a mustache," said the sweet looking girl in wood color. "I think we could dispense with beards, but it might be a good idea to have some places established where we could go and have our shoes polished. I have tan shoes by the dozen pairs that I had to discard because I wouldn't be bothered with smearing shoe dressing over them. One's hands get so sticky and horrid. Quite often I would have given anything to have my shoes polished, but I never could get up courage enough to go into a shoe store and ask if they would fix them for me. The men certainly have the advantage on that point, if we do wear their hats and collars and cravats."

The End of Mrs. Stanford's Jewels.

As is well known, by no means the least valuable possession of Mrs. Leland Stanford are her magnificent jewels. One Thursday last winter, as she "received" her weekly guests, all eyes were drawn to a superb parure of rubies and diamonds worn with a gown of delicate gray. The ruby in the brooch was as large as a pigeon's egg. After many of the visitors had gone Mrs. Stanford took occasion to say to an intimate friend: "Do you know these are the first jewels that my husband gave me when he first began to think himself a rich man, and this is the first time that I have ever worn them. The other day, when I was dressing, he said, 'It seems to me you do not care much for my first gift,' so I have put them on at the earliest opportunity. Colored stones cannot be worn with every gown."

In some further talk the friend alluded to Mrs. Stanford's celebrated set of diamonds that once belonged to the queen of Portugal, and their present owner observed: "Almost all my jewels are historic. They will bring their price, and their destiny is decided, so that whichever of us survives, the other will see it carried out. They will be sold, and the proceeds will go to the orphans' home in San Francisco."—San Francisco Letter.

Fashionable Flower Baskets.

For decorating dinner tables, flat baskets are used. High flower structures are entirely out of fashion. The baskets are of mixed straw, low and square cornered, fitted of course with a pan inside with a square handle tied with satin ribbon. The flowers are arranged to make a flat bed and are usually of one kind and color, but baskets of roses are of mixed colors. Flower baskets are the rage in Paris for decorating rooms and for gifts among friends. Nothing is prettier than one of these flat baskets filled with a bed of forgetmenots, which have been brought into vogue by their color, and tied with a big bow of green. There are also deep baskets standing some 3 feet or more high, in which are arranged huge bouquets made of long branches of lilacs, roses, violet hued rhododendrons or even a growing plant or azalea. These high baskets are without handles, of flat, plaited rushes stained in green and brown tones and have great satin bows on them. They set on the floor or on a corner pedestal and are charming, with a simplicity that yet saves itself from affectation.—House Furnishing Review.

A Girl With Changeable Eyes.

Said an observant young man yesterday: "Among the many attractive girls of Bowling Green is one who would make a fortune for the proprietor of a dime museum. Her popularity among the young men is by no means dependent upon the peculiarity of her physical makeup, but it certainly adds to her attractiveness. The color of her eyes changes like the chameleon with the hue of objects which surround her. I made this discovery last week while riding with the young lady from Bowling Green to Lebanon. She explained that when she wore a blue dress her eyes became blue, a brown dress turned them into a hazel hue, and when she dons red she might be taken for an Albino. Her eyes often turn green, but not with envy, and it is said that her best fellow sometimes wears a yellow costume, then imagines that she is jealous at his attentions to some one else. Though this is said to be true, it would not do to give names, lest enterprising managers worry her trying to make a contract."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

The Debutante's Rough Road.

There is one cause for dissatisfaction among the unmarried belles of Newport. It is that the married belles are altogether too much in evidence. The position of a debutante is exceedingly trying. It requires a great deal of finesse to successfully evolve from a timid, blushing society bud into the full blown, nodding center piece that is an irresistible attraction. It would seem as though any kindly disposed ones would give them a chance, and remembering their own hard fought trials be only too glad to discreetly leave the field of conquest. On the contrary, the unsophisticated maidens of society must constantly trim their rush lights, and standing side by side with a married belle flirt (some prefer to put it) they must trust to luck that this gentle light may prove a restful change to the electric light dazzlers of the fixtures of society.—Newport Letter.

Mrs. Bishop and Delsarte Exercise.

Mrs. Coleman E. Bishop of Washington, chief instructor of the Chautauqua summer school of physical culture, is a striking example of what one may achieve by Delsarte exercise. "I was a stoop shouldered, sunken chested, sharp voiced woman until I began training in this way," she says of herself. "I started in with the regulation 10 lessons, but improved so rapidly in health and spirits and became so firmly convinced of the system's value that I resolved to devote my life to the work." Mrs. Bishop is by nature a remarkably charming woman, whatever education may have accomplished for her as well, and is now one of the most successful apostles of the modern creed of health and beauty.

Blunder Worse Than Guilt.

There are some penalties on innocent acts essential to human safety, and the signaler whose failure has destroyed a train must be punished, even though, when he pleads that he was in a "dwam," he is to his own mind telling the simple and sufficient truth. Nature is even harder on blunder than on guilt, and though man has no right to be as stern as nature, which, for example, executed a dynamiter at Madrid—not for his intention to murder, but for his carelessness in dropping his bomb—still, there are points upon which he must be nearly as hard.—London Spectator.

Colonel North's Strong Room.

Colonel North is said to have at Eltham one of the strongest of strong rooms probably in the world. Not only is his gold and silverware stored here, but lady visitors to Eltham are provided for, special arrangements being made for "taking care" of their jewels during the night. The "room" is floored with cement and walled all round with weighty granite. To get into its interior you must pass through many gates, all fitted up with burglar alarms. The treasures are kept in iron cages, and the "room" is 80 feet under ground.—London Tit-Bits.

FOR LITTLE FOLKS.

A Baby at the North Pole.

When Lieutenant and Mrs. Peary left for the north pole some time ago, they took with them, besides good things to eat and plenty of fur robes, a little tin bathtub and a baby's cradle. Besides these there were ever so many baby's dresses and some little knitted shoes, which looked as if they would fit a little boy very much smaller than you are.

A baby's wardrobe and a cradle are queer things to take to the north pole, are they not? And what do you suppose that they are for? Why, for a baby, to be sure! Suppose, way up at the north pole, where nobody has ever been, that Mrs. Peary should find a baby! And suppose that the baby had no clothes and no one to take care of it! Think what a sad thing it would be! Now, if Mrs. Peary finds such a baby at the north pole she can dress it in nice little dresses and can rock it to sleep in a little cradle. And when she returns to this country, two years from now, she will bring the baby along, and then you will all say, "How very fortunate that those clothes and that cradle went along!"—New York Ledger.

A Wicked Boy's Hot Day Joke.

A woman who lives in the suburbs of Brooklyn usually places a large tin pan on her front doorstep to receive the ice that the iceman delivers to her each morning. During a recent hot spell her little grandson, who is full of mischief, thought that he would play a joke on his grandmother. The next morning, when the pan was put on the step, he filled it partly with water and then yelled "I-c-e!" It was nearly five minutes before the grandmother started to take the ice into the house. She was surprised to find that the ice had melted so quickly. Meantime the iceman had come and saw no pan for the ice. He did not leave the usual piece, and the grandmother was telling her neighbors of the unusual heat until the other day when the young hopeful told his big brother about the joke he played.—New York Sun.

Looking In Mother's Eyes.

Pierre and Maurice are French children. Pierre is the elder brother. It never has occurred to him to be jealous of the last comer, Maurice, or to be troubled about "his nose being out of joint."

He is very fond of his small brother and seems to feel it his duty to see that he is never neglected or forgotten.

One day he was looking lovingly into his mother's face, when he happened to glance at her right eye, and to his delight he saw his image reflected in it. "Oh, there is Pierre!" he cried.

Then he looked eagerly into the left eye and exclaimed in sorrow and surprise, "Why, where is Maurice?"—Youth's Companion.

Two Fresh Air Boys.

Among the fresh air children from New York at one of the western Pennsylvania mountain towns was a bright faced but sickly looking boy. He had never seen so much greenness before nor sniffed into his snub nose so much fresh air, and while he seemed to enjoy it all he did not show so much enthusiasm as the other children. He was noticed by the kind hearted farmer at whose house he was staying, and by a few adroit questions his story was learned. He wanted his little brother Billy to be with him, he said.

Billy had one fresh air visit, but he was sick and ought to have another. He had wanted the man in New York to let Billy come again in his place, but the man thought Billy's brother needed the outing more than Billy. The farmer could not resist the appeal, so he wrote to New York and at his own expense had Billy brought on. When the time was up, the farmer and his good wife concluded to take the boys as their own, and the New York parents being not loath the arrangement was made. And that is how two fresh air children got mountain homes.—New York Recorder.

A Boy's Mud Turtle.

A small boy in Maine who brought home a mud turtle from a pond a quarter of a mile away noticed that whenever set free the turtle set off in a beeline direction toward the pond. The boy tried to confuse the turtle in every way he could devise, but the turtle was too smart for him and always started off in the right direction as if he knew where he was going and was bound to get there in the quickest time possible. And now the boy has puzzled the whole township by demanding to know how that turtle knew in what direction his ancestral pond lay.—New York Times.

Danger In Toasting One's Feet.

"Don't put your feet so near the fire, grandpa," said a little boy who was watching the old gent toast his toes. "You're always groanin about your corns and there's no knowin but they'll pop."—Exchange.

Force of Her Father's Example.

Miss Beulah True of Hancock, Me., an accomplished artist, who furnished the illustrations for a recently published history of Castine, has acted during the summer as purser on one of the Maine steamers, of which her father is captain. Miss True is quite young, being yet a student in the normal school, at Castine, but is thoroughly conversant with nautical matters and able, if necessity demands, to take her place at the wheel. This practical knowledge was gained by going on long voyages with her father.—Exchange.

The First French Doctress of Law.

Mlle. Jeanne Chauvin, the first French doctress of law, has held since Jan. 1 last the post of professor of law in the girls' colleges of Paris. By a special order of M. Gerard, vice rector of the Academy of Paris, professors are prohibited from placing in the hands of their girl pupils copies of the code itself, so that the young neophytes whom Mlle. Chauvin initiates into the civil and criminal code have only their teacher's oral lessons to go upon.—Paris Letter.

The Taste Girls Should Have.

A Louisville magistrate has decided "that girls have just as good a right to smoke cigarettes on the streets as dudes. But the dear girls should remember that they are supposed to have better taste than dudes—and refrain.—Minneapolis Tribune.

A Big Lobster Pound.

There is a lobster farm, or pound, as it is called, 12 acres in extent at Southport, Me. This pound is the most successful on the coast, whence 1,000,000 lobsters are shipped each year. The pound is formed by building a solid dam across a tidewater cove. This dam does not quite rise to high water mark, but across the top is placed a fence of iron rods, permitting a daily change of water and preventing the lobsters from escaping. In the spring and fall business is most brisk.

When the fishermen bring the lobsters to the pound, the "fish," as they are called, are hoisted to the dam, measured, and those which are more than 10½ inches long, the legal limit, are thrown in. If a lobster is clever, his life in the pound may be long and full of joy. If he is stupid, he will be fished out with a drag seine and packed in a barrel, with a piece of ice for a pillow, and sent to Boston. The seine is made of stout twine and is weighted at the bottom with a heavy chain. Along the top is a row of corks, which sustain the weight of the seine while the chain drags on the bottom of the pound.

A single cast of this seine will bring up lobsters enough to fill 11 barrels. The chain as it sweeps along the bottom stirs up the lobsters, which immediately shoot backward into the slack twine. In taking them out the men wear heavy mittens, though even then they are often nipped. In the pound the lobsters are fed on salt herring, men rowing about in skiffs and pitching the herring overboard. This is called "feeding the chickens," and it takes about six barrels to make a light luncheon for the flock.—Boston Globe.

The Cat In Ancient Times.

The cat was so very highly regarded in England at one time, both as a rat and mouse catcher, and as an ornament to society, that we find the following salutary law passed by one of the princes of Wales:

"If any one steal or kill a Cat that guards the Prince's Granary, he is to forfeit a milch Ewe, its Fleece and Lamb. Or, as much Wheat as, when poured upon the cat suspended from its tail, with the head touching the floor, would form a heap high enought to cover the tip of the former."

Though the Welsh had a high opinion of the cat, the ancient Egyptians had a still higher. These intelligent and civilized people treated cats with great distinction. It was a crime to kill them, and when they died they received a public burial, at which the people mourned, having first shaved off their eyebrows as a token of sorrow. The most prominent cats were upon death embalmed in drugs and spices, and cat mummies have been found side by side with those of kings. When Cambyses, the Persian, attacked the Egyptian city of Pelusis, he cunningly provided his soldiers with cats instead of shields. When the host advanced, the Egyptians retired in confusion upon discovering that they would be unable to do damage to their enemy without seriously imperiling the lives of vast numbers of cats. And so the city was taken easily and without the loss of blood or of a cat. It cannot be disputed that the ancient Egyptian cats must have enjoyed life very much.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

"Yankee Doodle."

The tune of "Yankee Doodle" has had seven or eight treatises written upon it in the last 30 years, ascribing it to various dates and origins, even back to The Netherlands and the days of Cromwell and the Charleses. Dr. George Grove of London, author of the "Dictionary of Music and Musicians," has investigated thoroughly the various musical libraries and the British museum in England, finding no traces of it whatever, thus exploding all the mystical, traditional and apochryphal accounts thereof.

But "Yankee Doodle" had an origin and has a history. It was written by Dr. Richard Schuckburg, whose commission dates 1737, in the French and Indian war of 1755 under General Jeffrey Amherst and was intended as a "take off" on the "rag, tag and bobtail" recruits of the colonies that came into the army. It "took" so well, however, that the Americans have ever adopted it and would not part with it for anything. The first words,

Father and I went down to camp, were in the Boston Journal in 1768, and the first record of the tune is in Arnold's "Two to One," 1780, so that "Yankee Doodle," although written by a British surgeon, is really American.—Boston Transcript.

Economy In Foot Wear.

The neatest and most economical possible foot wear is a low cut shoe of a special pattern to be worn with gaiters to match each dress. This style of foot clothing has many advantages. The low shoe is easily aired, and the inner sole will retain the odors of the feet with the neatest of persons if not properly aired, especially when one walks much. The gaiter breaks the apparent size of a large foot and forms a very attractive finish when matched to costumes.

Skirts rubbing against the front of high kid boots will wear the seam, while the lower part remains in perfect condition. Gaiters, upon the other hand, can be changed as soon as defaced and worn with the same foot. Many pretty gaiters are possible for different occasions and styles of dress.—Jenness Miller Monthly.

Met With a Serious Fall.

"You are very late this morning, Mr. Baldwin," said a dry goods merchant recently to one of his clerks. "Do not let it happen again."

"Very sorry," said the clerk humbly. "I met with a serious fall."

"Indeed," replied the merchant, relenting. "Are you hurt much?"

"Principally, sir, in your estimation," answered the clerk respectfully.

"Oh, never mind that," said the merchant kindly. "I am very sorry and had no intention to be severe. We are all liable to accidents. How did you get the fall?"

"Well, you see, sir," said the clerk confidingly. "I was called quite early this morning—earlier, in fact, than usual."

"Ah!"

"Yes, sir; but somehow or other I fell asleep again."

"Go to your desk, sir, and don't try that on again," exclaimed the merchant, with an air of severity which was belied by the twinkle in his eye, which denoted that he enjoyed the joke.—New York Herald.

Depredations of a Coon.

That coon of Rueger's, which has been sauntering around the lamppost on the corner of Ninth and Banks streets from time to time during the past three months, made things lively Sunday afternoon at Mr. B. A. Fox's bird store on Broad street.

Mr. Rueger got tired of the quadruped and wished to dispose of him. The coon was accordingly turned over to Mr. Fox, who was to sell him. He was kept at the bird store. Sunday afternoon, when everybody was away, there began a general havoc on the part of the animal. Climbing over a partition in a show window, he proceeded to chew up five Abyssinian rabbits. Only one of the pets was left to tell the tale. His coonship then dined upon a handsome Brahma cock in the rear of the establishment and afterward proceeded to deprive a beautiful tropical song bird of his plumage.

He next made an attack on a number of goldfish, and when his appetite was satisfied there wasn't a single representative of the piscatorial tribe left in the aquarium. Several other depredations were committed, and his coonship was making preparations to exterminate every valuable bird in the establishment when two festive coppers crawled over the transom and put an end to his calculations. He was carried back to Rueger's, but soon effected his escape and made it lively for the squirrels in the Capitol square. A small regiment of small boys were in pursuit of the animal, which with an all important air mounted the Washington monument and soon sat complacently on the top of George's head, eying his pursuers with an expression of mingled defiance and curiosity. He was finally captured.—Richmond Times.

Spohr and the Kings.

All are not kingly who wear a crown. At a court concert the Duchess of Gotha expressed in the curtest style her disapproval of the loud playing of Spohr, the great violinist and composer. While he was playing she sent a chamberlain to request him not to make so much noise.

The king of Wurtemberg was in the habit of amusing himself at a court concert by playing cards. Spohr, being invited to play before the king, informed the chamberlain that he must decline the honor unless the king abstained from card playing. The chamberlain was horrified, but the violinist insisted, and the king conceded the point. But in order that the royal time might not be wholly occupied in listening, he stipulated that the two pieces set down in the programme for Spohr should follow each other.

Nevertheless his majesty showed that the violinist's demand had ruffled the royal temper. Etiquette prescribed that the king should give the signal for applauding. At the conclusion of each piece the king gave no signal and a solemn silence reigned in the salon. The king had his small revenge.

The king of Bavaria was a gentleman. At a court concert he noticed that the usher had neglected to place a seat for Mme. Spohr, an excellent harpist, who was to accompany her husband. The king placed his throne chair on the platform and with the mild insistence of a gentleman compelled the lady to sit in it.—Youth's Companion.

The Everlasting "Why."

There is an ocean of the unfathomable in every raindrop, and God says today as he said in the time of Job, "If you cannot understand one drop of rain, do not be surprised if my dealings with you are inexplicable." Why does that aged man, decrepit, haggard, vicious, sick of the world and the world sick of him, live on, while here is a man in midlife, consecrated to God, hardworking, useful in every respect, who dies? Why does that old gossip, gadding along the street about everybody's business but her own, have such good health, while the Christian mother with a flock of little ones about her whom she is preparing for usefulness and for heaven—the mother who you think could not be spared an hour from that household—why does she lie down and die with a cancer? Why does that man, selfish to the core, go on adding fortune to fortune, consuming everything on himself, continue to prosper, while that man who has been giving 10 per cent of all his income to God and the church goes into bankruptcy? Before we make stark fools of ourselves let us stop pressing this everlasting "why."—Dr. Talmage in Ladies' Home Journal.

HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA.
Swellings in the Neck
Grateful for Permanent Cure by Hood's Sarsaparilla.
"I cannot praise Hood's Sarsaparilla enough. For twelve years I have been troubled with scrofula and swelling of the glands in the neck, I consulted several physicians and took many medicines. My neck was also operated upon at the Mount Sinai Hospital, but this did not give me any permanent improvement. One day I read in a paper about Hood's Sarsaparilla, and on trying a bottle I found it was doing me good, so I took two bottles more. The swelling has entirely disappeared, and I am as healthy as anyone in the city. Anyone who should see my picture ten years ago and now, would notice

NOT SO UNDEMOCRATIC.

The New York Sun in its disapproval of the Hon. David A. Wells' report upon a method for increasing the internal revenue, reaches a climax by the declaration that the scheme is "undemocratic!"

Dr. Wells' comprehensive paper upon the subject of increasing the revenues $345,000,000 by taxing American beer and tobacco, did not strike THE BULLETIN that way. As we waded through a whole page of The New York Evening Post, we thought the plan was based upon the democratic power to make way with beer and tobacco, and that it is democratic first, last and forever.

The scheme presupposes first the democratic ability to consume these commodities in large quantities and also recognizes the enthusiasm always manifested by democrats when beer and cigars are passed around.

There is something else in this scheme which our contemporaries have not noticed, and that is its elasticity. The democratic party is afraid of a deficit and abhors a surplus in the treasury. By this revenue plan, if there is danger of a deficit, the party can drink heartier and smoke with more fervor; and if there is danger of a surplus the party can drink less and smoke less. The option of making up a deficit or reducing a surplus is left with the party.

Dr. Wells' plan makes the democratic appetite and its fears the balancing power—the finders of "the equilibrium." This is democratic, indeed, for it rests the matter with the people; and where is the democrat, when the cash is getting short in the United States treasury, who will not patriotically increase his daily potion of beer or his daily allowance of tobacco.

This tax scheme, of course, is not partisan, but partisanship enthusiastically manifested by the democrats can make Dr. Wells' scheme, which seems so "weak and so unfeasible" to some republican and some democratic papers, both democratic and successful. In their criticism of the plan, we fear many papers have lost sight of the capacity of the individual democrat!

THE THREAD CITY WOMEN.

The Willimantic women have set a good example for the voting women in all other places in the state to follow. They not only registered under the new female suffrage law in larger numbers in proportion to population than in other places, but at once held a caucus and nominated in the most business like way women to act as members of the school board. They also appointed committees to wait upon the men in all three of the party caucuses to urge their right to representation in the school offices.

From the first movement made by the Thread city women in political life there is no doubt that they appreciate the suffrage bestowed upon them; and they also recognize the opportunity to make themselves felt in matters which are of importance to themselves and families. They did not, as many of the new women voters did, quietly merge their ballots in the regular male vote, but realizing that one-half or more of the population is composed of their sex, they came up, as partisans and, sometimes, cliques of adopted citizens come up, and made a demand for recognition and a place in the offices.

The women of Hartford did the same thing and won the distinction of electing the first woman acting school visitor in this state.

There is no reason why these examples should not be successfully followed by the women of every town in the state.

THAT REVELATION.

The revelation that the blarney stone in the Irish village of the Midway Plaisance at the Columbian exposition in Chicago is a base counterfeit may be slightly annoying to those who have in kissing it gratified a vain ambition, but it causes all others to smile and to assure themselves that they were suspicious of that "rock" all the while.

But those who have kissed the Midway Plaisance "blarney stone" for good luck should not despair. There is no evidence on earth to show that the thousands who have been held by their trousers legs as they have leaned over the edge of Blarney castle to perform this osculatory feat have afterwards enjoyed any more good luck in the world than those who stood on the ground and witnessed the act.

That is cold kissing at best; and we advise those who osculate, even for good luck, not to take a trip to Ireland or Chicago for the purpose of kissing a rock, but to seek a more responsive and less hazardous attraction nearer home where there may be double joy and double luck if the osculatory ceremony becomes serial and serious.

LOOK OUT FOR YOUR P'S AND Q'S.

If the esteemed Register objects to our condensing its views on the American boy into the natural history phrase which it once cordially commended Governor Roswell Pettibone Flower for using, we will hasten to salve our contemporary's lacerated feelings with an apology. It's never our intention to be guilty of causing the train of The Register's buoyant happiness to run into an open switch. There, now.—[NORWICH BULLETIN.

The apology is accepted and we forgive and forget, reminding our suave contemporary, in passing, that expressions for the exigencies which sometimes face the governor of New York state, are not always justified in the treatment of such problems of grave importance as that forced upon us by THE BULLETIN.—[New Haven Register.

The Register should be careful and "give credit where credit is due." THE BULLETIN left the American boy between The Waterbury Republican and The Register some time ago, and Editor Wells is taking good care of him. THE NORWICH BULLETIN is not in it! "The apology" so readily accepted, should have been credited to The Waterbury Republican.

THEY DID NOT KNOW IT.

A Washington special to The Hartford Courant Tuesday evening said: "Neither of the Connecticut senators has heard of the demand of the internal revenue bureau that those Hartford firms which, during the panic, issued pay checks in order to obtain the means with which to pay workmen, are liable to a scrip tax, and that the aggregate tax due from the Hartford firms on scrip issued is $90,000, the payment of which is demanded.

"Senator Hawley, when his attention was called to the fact, said that there is a law which would make it possible to levy such a tax upon the scrip, but he thought that in such a time the internal revenue bureau would do well not to be too severe.

Representative Russell had not heard that such a movement had been inaugurated, and he thinks that it is unjust in the internal revenue bureau to attempt to collect such a tax under the circumstances."

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

The caucuses for the October elections are next in order.

Senator Teller says "there are fifteen senators more to speak, thirteen of whom have not opened their mouths." If they expect to win that "thirteen" ought to keep still!

The American coffee drinkers are disgusted with the Brazilian revolution, because coffee is getting about as "high" now as the Brazilian navy is. Both must come down!

When President Cleveland refused to pardon a pension shark from prison he did right; and if he would take in Hoke Smith he would be doing commendable work in the right direction!

The yellow fever has taken a strong hold at Brunswick, Ga., and now all is done that can be done to prevent the spread of the disease. A six weeks' siege with the disease is expected.

The hop crop of the northwest this year is estimated at one hundred and fifty thousand bales. The crop is being harvested, and the speculators are in hopes to corner it and make a clean four millions by the transaction.

The Faulkner compromise puts nearly two hundred millions more of silver in the way of being pocketed, if adopted; but it does not increase the opportunities for the average citizen to help carry it around for his country. What the average citizen wants to find is better and quicker ways of getting silver into his pocket!

If the Valkyrie was sighted at 10 o'clock Saturday making ten knots an hour she has been making slow time ever since. Since that time till noon Wednesday was ninety eight hours, and if she had averaged a little over four miles an hour she ought to have arrived about midday Wednesday. She is slower than such yachts average or else she was not seen.

VOICE OF THE PRESS.

As Always!

Republicanism stands now, as always, for a free ballot and an honest count!—[N. Y. Tribune.

Has He the Qualifications?

Mr. Hornblower has youth and a successful career as a corporation attorney to commend him, but if he has the qualifications which fit him for a seat on the supreme bench of the United States, the fact is still to be demonstrated.—[Boston Journal.

They Do Not Want What They Voted For.

A petition is in circulation in the local factories requesting the president not to permit any change of the present tariff laws. It is signed entirely by democrats who voted for Mr. Cleveland.—[New Haven Leader.

How Will He Be Benefited?

With new tariff duties on sugar, tea and coffee, a double tax on beer and tobacco and reduced wages in the factories, how much will the poor workingman be benefited by lower duties on foreign woolens and silks?—[Springfield Union.

No Honest Man Deprived of His Vote.

We repeat that under the operation of these federal election laws no honest man has ever been deprived of his vote, nor has any hardship been incurred more than accompanies the enforcement of any law through the ordinary accidents and mistakes of administration.—[New York Tribune.

Should Have What She Wants.

Miss Clara Barton of the Red Cross association has, at the request of Governor Tillman, assumed the work of relief among the flood sufferers in the South Carolina sea islands. What Miss Barton says she wants, she should have without question or delay.—[Springfield Union.

They Never Refuse Office.

The first families of Virginia are reported to be terribly disturbed at the reading of a white editor of that state to Haiti, where it is presumed he will have to "eat with niggers," as they express it. And yet it is not recorded that any Virginia gentleman has had the courage to refuse any office within his reach, whether it is located in Ethiopia or fair Circassia.—[Boston Herald.

Republican Victory Will Mean Much.

The fall elections, which are fast approaching, will serve either as signboards pointing backward to the well-beaten highway, Prosperity; or they will be another milestone along the same way of industrial destruction which the country has been traveling for the past six months. Republican victory will mean much this fall. It will give hope to the laboring man who is out of work and almost face to face with starvation, and it will cheer the manufacturer who does not dare to embark on the sea of commerce in the leaky craft of free trade.—[Cambridge Tribune.

Killed at Last.

Another veteran is dead as a result of the malicious and cruel policy of the pension office under Hoke Smith's management. His name is Charles Simms. He was a colored man and had been wounded in fighting for the union. A dispatch from Baltimore states that Simms "died at the City hospital Tuesday from fatigue and injury from old wounds. He stood five hours in line at the post office last week to receive his pension. The heat was intense, and the old man sank to the ground exhausted while waiting his turn to comply with the new order, requiring him personally to receive his check at the post office. Cases showing the injustice done the old soldiers under the new rules are coming to light here every day."—[New York Press.

Remember.

If Benjamin Harrison had been re-elected president, the country would not have had the present panic. That is not all. The panic being here because of "the change," if it had been possible to "change" back at once and to place immediately in the presidential chair Benjamin Harrison, or any republican of his quality and views, the panic would have been stayed, and that is not all. The panic being on, if Grover Cleveland's honest purpose to do the right thing on the silver issue had been joined with a clearer grasp of what to do and how to do it, the panic would not have been stayed, but it would have been greatly mitigated. A sound heart and a firm will are much in such a crisis; but a sound heart and a firm will united with a sure head and an unerring hand are much more.—[Philadelphia Press.

ABSENCE OF NEWS

Construed to Mean That the Rebels Control Rio.

PEIXOTO'S POWER IS WEAKENED.

The Revolution Alleged to Be Growing in Strength.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—The Herald's Montevideo special says: The Brazilian minister to Uruguay has not received any communications for two days concerning the progress of the revolution.

This is regarded as unfavorable to the cause of Peixoto, Brazilian residents here arguing that the absence of official communications indicates that the revolutionists are in control of the city of Rio Janeiro, and that the president's power has been so weakened that defeat will soon follow.

Private messages have been received from Lisbon stating that the Brazilian warships Riachuelo and Benjamin Constant will soon sail from Toulon to aid Admiral Mello. The officers and crews of both vessels have declared

In Favor of the Revolutionists.

Peixoto suspected the loyalty of the [illegible] vessels, and recently sent crews from Rio of whose loyalty he was convinced, to man them and relieve those in charge of them.

News has also been received concerning the previous reports of the shooting of Deputy Seabra and a lieutenant in the navy by order of Admiral Mello. The lieutenant was steering a boarding boat, and had both arms shot off. He was then taken on board the Aquidaban and shot through the head by order of the admiral. No further news has been received about the second bombardment of Rio.

All of the ships of the Brazilian Lloyds are now in the Control of the Revolutionary Party.

The United States cruiser Charlestown sailed for Rio last night. It is reported here that the steamers off Rio Janeiro are unable to communicate with the shore. Nevertheless, mails continue to be dispatched from Montevideo in the hope that some means will be found to land them.

The American minister to Argentine will enclose duplicates of all messages for Rio with his official correspondence, under cover, and send them to Minister Thompson.

FOR THE SECOND TIME

The Railroad Station at Walpole Is Entered and Robbed.

WALPOLE, Mass., Sept. 20.—The New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad station at Walpole Center, on the line of the Walpole and Wrentham Branch, was entered by burglars at an early hour this morning.

Entrance was effected by the front door opening into the gentlemen's waiting room, and when found this morning by Station Agent Roberts was wide open, the lock and door casing being badly broken. The door which leads from the waiting room to the ticket office was also open and badly demolished.

The safe was blown open, and its contents, about $25 in cash, was taken. The safe door was blown completely off, and a quantity of clothing which was hanging against the safe caught fire from the explosion, and when found this morning was still smouldering. The ticket case was unmolested.

This is the second time within a year that this station has been entered by burglars, and the safe blown.

TREFETHEN'S FATE.

Finding of Tena Davis' Body Testified to—Curious Crowd.

BOSTON, Sept. 20.—There was a curious crowd again on hand this morning when the third day's session of the Trefethen trial began. The witnesses examined were Patrolman Kelly, who was recalled, Frank H. Fitzpatrick, James B. Wellington and Thomas Leahy of Somerville.

The testimony was chiefly concerned with the evidence that a vehicle passed along the bridge on the night of the alleged murder and with the finding of the body of the unfortunate young woman. There was less friction between the opposing counsel than there was yesterday, and the trial advanced more smoothly.

Refused to Enforce Geary Law.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 20.—Collector of the Port Wise has refused to appoint 20 deputies without pay to enforce the Geary law. He told the committee of the Anti-Chinese Law and Order league that his hands were tied by orders of the treasury department. The collector agreed to send to Washington any communication that they decided to make and request an immediate ruling thereon.

Scarlet Fever Closes Schools.

FOXBORO, Mass., Sept. 20.—The public schools in the center of Foxboro have been closed for a time owing to the prevalence of scarlet fever in town. Several cases have been reported to the authorities by the local physicians, who have taken the matter in charge and are using all means to prevent a spread of the disease.

Cholera Causes a Panic.

MADRID, Sept. 20.—The appearance of cholera in the Bilbao district has caused a panic. All the rich families who have been passing the last weeks at Bilbao, San Sebastian, and other resorts on the Bay of Biscay, are leaving for their homes. Most of the large hotels are already deserted.

INSURANCE CONSPIRACY.

Wholesale Burning of Buildings to Fraudulently Obtain Insurance.

CHICAGO, Ills., Sept. 20.—In the cases of alleged wholesale conspiracies to burn houses to get the insurance, said to be headed by W. F. Smith, who is now under arrest, Insurance Inspector Cowie and Fire Inspector Conway made three additional arrests last night. O. C. Churchill, confidential man of J. Goodrich, lawyer; D. Brown, who had two stores belonging to Smith, and Sam Herzog, an auctioneer for Smith, were the victims.

The inspectors say that the plot, when unravelled, will be shown to extend over half a dozen states, and the amount that has been realized fraudulently from insurance companies to reach into the hundreds of thousands of dollars. This plan, it is said, was to stock up stores with cheap goods, insure them for double their value, burn them and collect the insurance.

The inspectors say that, in the alleged conspiracies to do this work, there were engaged insurance adjusters, storekeepers, lawyers and real estate men.

WILLIAM M. THAYER DEAD.

Veteran Newspaper Man's Body Found in Hotel Room.

BOSTON, Sept. 20.—William M. Thayer, a veteran newspaper man of this city, was found dead in his room at the hotel Vendome, Park square, this morning. Death apparently resulted from heart disease, though the body will be held at the hotel pending an examination by the medical examiner.

A few years ago Mr. Thayer was a familiar figure in newspaper circles, being widely known and respected by members of the fraternity. For several years he held the position of night editor of the Boston Post.

He severed his connection with newspaper work to engage in the railroad business, and later devoted his abilities as a broker in mining and railroad stocks, having an office in the Ames building at the time of his death.

STRIKE SETTLED.

Men of the Littlefield Factory Work by Order of the Union.

AVON, Mass., Sept. 20.—The strike at the Littlefield factory has been settled. The men returned to work this morning by order of President Smith of Brockton, who is general president of the Lasters' Protective Union. Mr. Smith, with several other members of the order, had a conference with Mr. Littlefield yesterday which resulted in the men being ordered back.

Brinnell, the objectionable man, has not been discharged as yet, and as Mr. Littlefield intends to stick by his decision regarding running a free shop it is quite probable that he will be retained. How the returning strikers will receive this remains to be seen.

FOREST FIRES RAGING.

Reports From Minnesota Show Great Damage Near Duluth.

DULUTH, Minn., Sept. 20.—Forest fires of independent origin are raging all over the promontory of land jutting over into Lake Superior, between Duluth and Ashland, and a great amount of damage has been done.

Incoming vessels report heavy banks of smoke hovering along the South shore as far as the Apostle Islands, and all trains are obliged to run very slowly on account of smoke and the impossibility of seeing more than a few car lengths ahead. DEMAND FOR SUGAR.

Large Sugar Refineries Are Swamped With Orders.

WORKS RUNNING NIGHT AND DAY.

Unable to Fill the Demand That Comes From All Sections.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—Never before in the history of sugar refining in this country has there been so great a product from the various refineries as is being turned out at the present time. All the works under the control of the sugar trust, which is another way of saying all the works in the country are working full time and overtime—by night as well as by day. In Boston, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Jersey City, New York and Williamsburg all the enormous concerns, whose machinery a few weeks ago either was stopped altogether or running so languidly as barely to be in motion, now are humming with the full force of all their productive capacity. The like was never known before.

Yet with all this expenditure of energy the supply is inadequate to the demand. For three weeks the refiners have been completely

Snowed Under With Orders.

In spite of all their exertions and the snowy mountains of sugar, the refineries heaped up, the mountains of letters and telegrams demanding sugar piled up faster. Should the demand continue, the present plant would be absolutely inadequate to meet it.

Speaking on this subject, Mr. Marshall of the American Sugar Refining company says: "It is all due to the recent financial depression and the stringency in the money market. During the most of August and July the wholesale and retail grocers and others dealing in sugar bought as little as possible. Firms that had been in the habit of buying 500 barrels at a time bought 100, and purchasers who had been getting 100 barrels got one. Nobody knew what the outcome would be. There were all sorts of rumors about the great canning establishments in the west.

They Could Get No Money,

as there was no money in sight, and it was said that they would have to shut down for lack of means to buy tin and sugar. All this time we kept on manufacturing. As a result of keeping on manufacturing with comparatively no demand for the product, we found ourselves with a large stock on hand.

"This it was thought would be sufficient to meet the increased fall sales, but in the interval came the general revival in business. The wheels commenced moving all along the line. Then it was that the dealers whose stocks of sugar had run down to low water mark began sending in their orders. They poured in upon us in astonishing volume. In less than no time the large stock we had ahead, which we relied upon to meet the increased trade of the fruit preserving season, was swept away, and the season had not fairly begun. Worse than that, the country was not yet stocked up with sugar to its usual summer supply. In consequence, when the fruit season did come, we were swamped."

THE JEWELER'S ART.

A substitution for perforated work is seen in the use of silver wire, now especially popular.

Round ebony rulers are sumptuous. They have a silver bar or handle for their manipulation, with a beautiful perforated ornament in the center.

Brierwood pipes are besprinkled with tiny horseshoes, bound with cables. They display blazonry of colors in yacht flags and insignia of that sort.

Large cable cord chains of silver are made for gowns. These, it must be understood, are not heavy, but although large have distinctly a light effect.

Large silver bracelets are worn. They have a linked rope effect, but are not weighty. The union of polished and dull metals is decidedly valuable in these.

As there are heavy women, so in silver drapery pins there are long whips across which a saddle perfect in every detail is hung. Tennis and croquet devices also appear, but the prettiest devices are floral.

There is sentiment in a heart shaped cigar set. The lamp crowns the edifice. Below is a gilt lined cavernous opening for cigars and two smaller receptacles for cigarettes, with a silver bar on which to rest the lighted weed.

A new pocket receptacle for postage stamps has a little book of rice paper in flat silver covers. They are only long enough to hold two of the old and two of the new issues. In the back of one of the covers is a little celluloid calendar.—Jewelers' Circular.

An interlocking tower containing 40 levers has been put in operation at Litchfield, Ills., by the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis road.

The first railroad to enter Chicago was the Galena and Chicago Union, which was chartered in 1836, completed to Harlem, 10 miles, in 1846, and to Elgin in 1848. It began operating in 1848.

The new southern line of the Rock Island railway runs through the famous Cherokee strip nearer the middle than the Santa Fe line, and therefore the Rock Island expects to handle big business.

The Missouri, Kansas and Texas railroad has won its long fought suit against the International and Great Northern road with regard to the possession of the Galveston, Houston and Henderson Railway company.

THE STOCK MARKET.

Dealings In Leading Securities In Boston and New York.

BOSTON, Sept. 20.—In the outside market call money is quoted at 8 to 10 per cent, and time money is nominally 8 per cent.

The stock market is without any new features. As soon as the house voted to repeal the purchasing clause of the Sherman law similar action on the part of the senate was at once discounted by the operators in the market. Whether the prices were set too high then does not matter, the delay in the upper branch to take any definite action has turned the earlier buoyancy into despondency, and pulled prices gradually down. The only supporting element is the narrowness of the market and the belief that ultimately the august senators will have to yield to the demands of the country which prevents those who bought at panic prices from throwing their stocks over at once. These two factors are the basis of the present situation.

London this morning came a little stronger for Atchison, Reading and Erie, while Louisville and Nashville was 1 per cent down. The movement of this stock is exciting a deal of interest, and rumor has it that a considerable shipment of the stock has been made from London to ease the borrowing demand for it here, the premium being ¼ per cent per day. The continued heavy decrease in the earnings of the road, too, have strengthened the opinion that a suspension of dividends sooner or later is inevitable. In the local market Sugar Refining continues the basis of business. Opening ¼ down at 87¾, the common ranged between that and ¾, while the preferred was up ¼ to 88. General Electric likewise was weak, starting off ¼ down at 46¾ and during the morning rallying only to 47. Atchison held between 20 and 19⅞, while Chicago, Burlington and Quincy lost ¼ at the opening at 84⅞ and dropped further to 84¼. The convertible is weakened ⅛ to 89 and the 7s ½ to 113½. Union Pacific was in sympathy with the list, starting off ¼ down at 21⅜, while Cleveland and Canton preferred advanced ⅛ to 8¾ and Boston and Albany ¼ at 203.

AN INNOVATION

How many times has every housekeeper wished that she could polish her stove when it was warm.

But then that is something that can't be done, you'll say, so what's the use of wishing for it? You couldn't bear your hand on the heated surface.

But it can be done—we say so. Yankee ingenuity has solved the problem.

Visit our store during the next three days—Thursday, Friday and Saturday—and Mr. Watson, who represents the manufacturers, will explain how easily it is done by the use of a new

Fireproof and Waterproof Felt Stove Polishing Pad.
Price of the Entire Outfit, 25c.

For today only—every purchaser of the polishing outfit will be given free of charge a box of the famous Iron Clad Stove Polish.

This is something which ought to interest every housekeeper, because it is in the line of progress and the cost is so trifling.

At the same time there will be on exhibition in our display window an exact representation of the U. S. Gunboat Indiana, with a grand water scene. A novel and interesting display gotten up by the manufacturers to advertise their "Ironclad" Stove Polish.

Everyone should see the window display.

Mr. Watson will be here for three days only.

WILLIMANTIC.

The Fair—Winners in the Bicycle Races—An Accident—An Unfinished Race in the 2.27 Class.

The Willimantic Fair association's eleventh annual fair and exhibition was opened Wednesday and the programme was carried out in full. The crowd was a big one, the largest ever upon the grounds on a first day.

The cattle exhibit was large. This year the poultry exhibit is the largest ever made and is in the spacious hall under the grand stand.

The exhibition building is well filled with interesting exhibits and fine displays have been made by a number of local business men.

Excellent music was furnished by the Hartford City band, Chas. P. Hatch, leader.

Promptly at 1:30 the bicycle races, under the auspices of the Thread City cyclers, were commenced. The first event was a one mile novice race, won by Holcomb R. Howard of Stafford Springs, with W. R. Scott 2 and L. L. Kelgwin 3, both of the latter members of the T. C. C. Time, 3.47¼. Prizes: Traveling set to the first, solid watch chain to second, L. A. W. pin to third.

Second event, one half mile handicap, R. C. C. C. W. E. Teagler, Rockville Wheel club, 1; Richard Fairbanks, Rose of New England, Norwich, 2; D. G. Baker, T. C. C., 3 Time, 1.18¾. Prizes: Diamond scarf pin, 1; opera glasses, 2; sweater, 3.

Third event, One mile. E. A. Nelson, Springfield, 1; F. R. Fuller, Hartford, 2; C. R. Newton, T. C. C., 3. Time, 2 56 Prize: High grade bicycle, 1; oak library desk, 2; smoking set, 3. The time was not satisfactory to the judges and the race had to be run over. In the second trial the starters were Nelson, Fuller and Alexander of Hartford. Nelson, 1; Alexander, 2; Fuller, 3. Time, 2.44¾.

Fourth event, one mile, Windham and New London county championship. Wm. P Jordan, T. C. C., 1; A. D. Smith, Jr., Norwich, 2. Richard Fairbanks, Norwich, 3. Time, 3 46¼. Prizes: Silver tea set, 1; mackintosh, 2; traveling bag, 3.

Fifth event, one mile, three-minute class, for Connecticut riders only. Fuller, Hartford, 1; H. R. Holcombe, Stafford, 2; L. L. Kelgwin, Willimantic, 3. Time, 3.08¾. Prizes: Fall overcoat, 1; field glass, 2; silk umbrella, 3.

Sixth event, one mile handicap, open. Nelson, Springfield, 1st; Newton, T. C. C., 2d; Fuller, Hartford, 3d. J. W. Linnerman of Buffalo, N. Y., was scratch man, but did not connect for a prize. Time, 2.42. Prizes: Double-barrel shotgun 1st, rifle 2d, revolver 3d.

Seventh event, one mile handicap, T. C. C. W. P. Jordan, scratch, 1st; L. L. Kelgwin, 2d. Prizes: Fall suit 1st, initial ring 2d.

Eighth event, one half mile boys' race. Michael Sullivan, 1st; Nelson Daniels, 2d; Harry Putter, 3d. Prizes: Fishing rod 1st, sweater 2d, bicycle shoes 3d.

—In the second event Hinman, T. C. C., and Smith of Norwich collided and were thrown; Newton was close behind and ran over both, being thrown himself and breaking his wheel. Hinman sustained a bad bruise on one eye, cuts on leg and bruise on wrist. Smith escaped with a few scratches. This accident was bad for the T. C. C.'s, as it knocked out their two best men.

The championship for Windham and Tolland county has been held by Hinman for the past year, but his accident prevented him from entering this race.

After the bicycle races were finished trotting in the 2.27 class was announced. Five horses started. Three heats were trotted. Hugo won two heats, Rockwell Boy one. Time, 2.29¼, 2.27¼, 2.27¼. The race could not be finished, and it was postponed until 1 o'clock p. m. Thursday.

The second day's programme will be fully carried out today.

Every line of trade has felt the "hard-times" more or less, and today you can buy at almost actual cost. Especially is this noticeable in the Boot and Shoe trade. A STORY OF SUFFERING AT SEA.

British Schooner Windermere Capsized by a Squall.

CAPTAIN AND WIFE LOST.

Survivors Cling to the Keel—Rescued by Steamer Palentino.

BOSTON, Sept 21.—The British schooner Windermere of Port Medway, N. S., late Captain John Charlton, left Key West, September 4, bound to Mobile, to load lumber for Trinidad. On September 7, the vessel, when 180 miles off Mobile, was struck by a sudden squall and capsized and the captain and his wife, with two of the crew, were drowned. After nine days on the keel of the upturned boat the other three members of the crew were picked up by the steamer Palentino from Matanzas, arriving today. Charles L. Cole tells the following story of the disaster:

On Sept 7, while the captain was below working up his morning observations, a squall was seen coming down upon us from windward. The captain was called on deck and just as he came up the gang way the squall struck the vessel and she almost immediately went over. The last I saw of the captain he was calling to his wife in the cabin. It was abreast of the main hatch, when a quantity of loose spars caught me, and how I got over the rail and scrambled over the vessel bottom, I do not remember, for from the time the vessel started to go over, not more than one minute elapsed before she was bottom up. When I got to the keel, I looked aft and saw James Clark on the forward part of the keel and John Matson. Our cries for help were heard from the water, but we were unable to render assistance. Over the port quarter was Captain Charlton, struggling to get into one of the rail boxes, which he succeeded in doing. In the meantime, Mr. Holmes, the mate, and Seaman Audust sank within a few yards of each other. The captain clinging to the rail box was now floating away astern. He said something. It was either "God-bye, boys," or "Save my poor wife." We watched him drift away until he disappeared. Two days later we saved a little rain water by wringing it out of saturated clothing. On the next day we caught two small sea birds, which we were very glad to eat raw. The weather next day was cold and the seas were going right over us, making our suffering almost unendurable. No vessels were seen until the 13th inst., when three or four vessels passed at a considerable distance. On the 14th two vessels passed us, but we were unable to attract their attention. On Friday, the 15th, it was very hot and our lips and mouths were parched as if we had been eating glue. We could scarcely open our mouths, but none of us complained very much, further than to wish for a drink or something to eat. On Saturday morning at about 5 we discovered a steamer on our starboard quarter which, thank God, came to our assistance and took us on board." The steamer was the Palentino.

The managing owners of the Windermere [illegible] The vessel was valued at $12,000, and was uninsured.

IN CONGRESS.

The Senate.

WASHINGTON, Sept 21.—Mr. Peffer reintroduced in the senate today the bill to provide for a bureau of loans, and asked that it lie on the table for the present. It is, with some modifications, the same as he introduced in May, 1892.

Mr. Platt (rep., Conn.), offered the resolution for closure, of which he gave notice last Tuesday.

It went over till tomorrow, when Mr. Teller is to speak against it.

The repeal bill was then taken up and Mr. White of California addressed the senate, claiming that there were other causes for the financial panic besides the Sherman act.

The House.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 21.—There were many empty seats in the house at noon today. Indeed, there were not more than 100 members present when the speaker's gavel called the house to order.

After a short passage between Mr. Reed, (rep.), Maine, and the speaker, relative to the journal, the approval of the latter was deferred, and Mr. Catchings presented the report of the rules committee providing for taking up the elections law repeal bill on Sept. 26, and a final vote on Oct 10. The yeas and nays were called on ordering the previous question, and it was ordered—175 to 4.

After a brief and uninteresting discussion as to the propriety of the various decisions made by the speaker yesterday the house adopted the report of the committee on rules by a vote of yeas 179, nays 3.

After some further talk the house adjourned.

DUEL FOUGHT NEAR CHICAGO.

CHICAGO, Sept. 21.—The Evening Post states that a duel with swords was fought at Cheltenham beach, fifteen miles south of Chicago, last night, the combatants being William Fickien of this city and a Philadelphia man, whose name is withheld. The latter received an ugly wound in the left shoulder, while Fickien escaped unhurt.

The trouble was caused by Fickien's paying too much attention to an engaged young lady from Philadelphia, who is a cousin of the wounded man. The latter remonstrated with Fickien, and as this had no effect, challenged him to fight a duel. Fickien accepted the challenge and chose swords.

Situation at Buenos Ayres Still Critical.

BUENOS AYRES, Sept. 21.—The situation here remains critical. The president and his cabinet conferred all last night in the government house. Today 30 conspicuous radicals were arrested.

The charge against them is conspiracy to overthrow the government. All have been placed aboard warships. Dr. Alem, leader of the radicals, has fled to escape arrest.

BUENOS AYRES, Sept. 21.—The national troops in the province of Corrientes have gone over to the insurgents. The iron gunboats, Bermejo and Republica, stationed in the Parana river, have joined the anti government forces. The president has ordered that the whole national guard be mobilized throughout the country to stop the progress of the revolt.

RHODE ISLAND STATE FAIR.

Governor's Day—Large Attendance—Interesting Racing Events.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Sept. 21.—Today was governor's day at the state fair and 4,500 persons were on the grounds, and the financial success of the exhibition was assured. The racing was interesting, including a 2 20 trot for a $5,000 purse, and the free for all trot, in which Martha Wilkes could not do better than third place out of a field of six starters, Hazel Wilkes taking three heats, the last one in 2 14.

Fanny Wilcox won the $5,000 event in straight heats, best time 2 15. Foly won the 2 20 pace, making the fastest time of the day, 2 13¼.

Against time Director's Jug reduced his record from 2 30 to 2 29¾, and Autograph, by Alcantara, failed to cut his mark from 2.17, making it in 2 20.

QUIETLY ARRESTED.

A Free Baptist Pastor in Custody for Felonious Assault.

BROCKTON, Mass., Sept. 21.—The Rev. Delbert G. Donnaker, late pastor of the Free Baptist church in this city and a few days since appointed superintendent of schools in Sandwich, Mass., was arrested quietly here today for felonious assault and is now in custody in Portland, Me. Several months since, The Lewiston Journal gave publicity to serious charges made against the Rev. Mr. Donnaker by a young girl at Scarboro, Me. The Rev. Mr. Donnaker denied the stories and expressed willingness to face his accusers. His parishioners would not believe him guilty.

A short time since he resigned as pastor and accepted the superintendency of schools. Mrs. Donnaker is sick in bed, having given birth to a child.

AN EXPENSIVE DRUNK.

A Connecticut Man Sees New York at Heavy Cost.

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—Frank A. Post, an ex gold cure patient and a son of the late Lawyer Post of Canaan, Conn., was a prisoner at the Yorkville court today, accused of drunkenness. The prisoner was left a large fortune and was also the trustee of his father's estate. Post came to this city on Monday and put up at the Grand Union hotel. On the following day he went [illegible] of the Mercantile Safe Deposit company, where he has a box containing cash and bonds to the amount of $486,000. He cut off the coupons from $10,000 worth of United States bonds, and after getting them cashed returned to the hotel. Later he went out and that was the last seen of him until he was found drunk on Third avenue. In court he said he had been robbed in a saloon. He was discharged.

PARLIAMENT OF RELIGIONS.

Buddhism Further Explained—Other Foreign Creeds.

CHICAGO, Sept. 21.—Visitors from foreign parts pre-empted a goodly portion of today's programme in the World's Parliament of Religions.

In the scientific section, addresses upon the native religions of Souls and Australasia were made by Prince Momulu Massaquoi of Liberia, Africa, and the Rev. John P. Patton of New Hebrides, and after these Professor Jean Reville of Paris and the Rev. Merwin Marie Snell spoke upon the classification of religions.

In the hall of Washington another contribution to the voluminous information concerning Buddhism that has already been vouchsafed to the parliament was afforded by the Rev. Zitsuzen Ashitsbe of India. An interesting narration of the present condition of women in India and the influence of Christianity upon them was given by Miss Jeanne Sorabji of Bombay.

Other questions discussed were "Christ and the School Question," upon which a paper was read by Professor F. G. Peabody of Harvard university, and "Religion and Wealth," upon which the Rev. Washington Gladden spoke briefly.

The opening exercises of the Reformed Dutch church of the United States took place in the hall of Washington this morning, the opening hour being devoted to religious exercises.

BALTIMORE, Md., Sept. 21.—The Maryland Bicycle club closed its fall tournament today in the presence of 2,000 people. The sport was better than yesterday. Brandt of New York made the fastest mile of the meet, his time being 2 16 1 5. The quarter mile invitation brought Dirnberger, Taylor, Smith and Bald to the scratch. This was the prettiest race of the day. Dirnberger won, Smith protesting the decision. The protest was not sustained. In the half mile international race Dirnberger won easily.

CONNECTICUT GENERAL NEWS.

Elopement Sensation — Ten-Mile Handicap Bicycle Race.

AN ELOPEMENT.

Overseer William J. Holland and Rosie Wood Have Gone Away Together.

PUTNAM, Sept. 21.—The upper village has been in a whirl of excitement since it was announced that William J. Holland and Miss Rosie Wood had eloped. Mr. Holland had acted as overseer in the weave shop of the Putnam Manufacturing company until Thursday night, Sept. 14, when he was discharged for bad conduct.

Miss Wood, who is only seventeen years old, was employed by him as a weaver.

Holland is a married man and about a year ago he had trouble with his wife and they separated.

It will be remembered that Miss Wood caused a sensation in Putnam about a year ago, when she entered a suit against one of our young men, she alleging the young man assaulted her. The case was nolled and the young man left town.

Inquiry at the Putnam Manufacturing company's mill developed the following facts: Holland owes his help about $100. He borrowed money from them and before their money was due he would give them orders upon the office for their pay so he could borrow part of it. Investigation shows that he leaves many bills unpaid.

While in Putnam Holland lived with his mother in back of Elm street. His father was killed in the late war and his mother draws a pension. It is rumored that before leaving, Holland took her pension money, thus leaving his mother without money.

About six months ago the parents of Miss Wood turned her out of doors, and since then they have refused to recognize her as their child.

DROPPED DEAD.

Xavier Berard Expires of Heart Disease.

WILLIMANTIC, Conn., Sept. 21.—Xavier Berard, a French Canadian, 57 years old, dropped dead about 8 o'clock Thursday evening, while with a party of friends on Jackson street.

Medical Examiner Dr. C. J. Fox was summoned, and after consulting his physician and members of his family, decided that death was caused from heart disease, as the dead man had been troubled with it for some time.

Dr. Fox deemed an inquest unnecessary and delivered the body over to Undertaker Sellnes.

Berard leaves a wife and two children, and resided at No. [illegible] Adelbert street, near the fair grounds.

Connecticut Universalists.

DANBURY, Conn., Sept. 21.—The second day of the Universalist State convention opened with a long session that lasted till afternoon. The executive committee reported that in the last year two new churches have been built in the state, one in Danbury and one in Meriden, at a total cost of $140,000. A resolution recommending that Universalist parishes convey their church property to the convention of the State, and receive the same by reconveyance, was adopted. The matter will have to receive the sanction of the national convention. The following officers were elected: President, the Rev. W. S. Perkins, Meriden; vice president, C. G. Lincoln, Hartford; secretary, the Rev. E. M. Grant, Stamford; treasurer, M. M. Whittemore, Norwich. Meriden was named as the next place of meeting. The Rev. Charles A. Bidwell of New Haven preached the sermon at this afternoon's session, which closed the convention.

It had been left there August 6 by a man who gave his name as William Dailey of Saybrook. The police are at work on the case.

CAPTURED—HANGED—BURNED.

The Roanoke Mob Find the Negro Smith—Great Excitement.

ROANOKE, Sept. 21.—The negro Tom Smith was found where the authorities tried to secrete him early this morning.

A squad of twenty men took him from the officers and hanged him to a hickory limb on Ninth avenue, S. W., in the residence section of the city. They riddled his body with bullets and left a placard on his body, "This is Mayor Trout's friend."

A coroner's jury of business men was summoned and viewed the body of the negro and rendered a verdict of death at the hands of unknown men.

After the jury had completed their work, the body was conveyed to the bank of the Roanoke river, about a mile from the scene of the lynching and burned to a crisp on a pile of dry lumber. The cremation was witnessed by several thousand people.

Threats of vengeance have been openly made against the mayor and the militia for attempting to maintain the law. Captain Bird, commander of the militia, has left town and Mayor Trout has also disappeared. President Buckner of the city council is acting mayor.

The excitement is running high. Crowds throng the streets and all the public places. An immense crowd is in front of Oakey Woolwine's undertaking shop, where seven of the dead bodies of last night's shooting lie.

TRAIN ROBBERS CAPTURED.

Ropes in Readiness for Hanging the Thieves.

CENTRALIA, Ill., Sept. 21.—Martin Nichols and James Hardin were captured early this morning in a cornfield, not far from the scene of the "hold up." A great crowd of people gathered about the railroad station and as the prisoners were brought in the cry of "Lynch them," was raised. Ropes were in readiness and only the courage and coolness of the officers saved the robbers from death at the hands of the mob.

When safe in jail Jones, the wounded robber, talked freely and made full confession. He gave his name as L. B. Jones. Jones admitted he was the man who shot the engineer and fireman. He said that he and one Charles O'Dwyer of this city, with Nichols and Harlin, had planned and put into execution the hold-up. They held their meetings at the home of O'Dwyer's mother in the eastern part of Centralia.

The Breckenridge-Pollard Breach of Promise Case.

WASHINGTON, Sep., 21.—The demurrer filed by Colonel Breckenridge to the suit of Miss Madeline V. Pollard against him for $50,000 damages for breach of promise of marriage and seduction was argued in the district court today, before Judge Cox, by Enoch Totten in behalf of Congressman Breckinridge and Calderon Carlisle for Miss Pollard. Mr. Totten claimed that there could be but one contract of marriage and therefore one promise was all that was necessary to allege. Hence, in setting out more than one in the same declaration the plaintiff made it faulty and bad in substance. The court overruled the demurrer and directed the case to be set for trial on its merits. The condition of the docket is such that it is not expected the case will be reached for two years.

Skeletons of Felons Unearthed.

SING SING, N. Y., Sept. 21.—While some of the convicts at work straightening and improving Hunter street were digging alongside the roadway they unearthed about a dozen skeletons. It was at first supposed that evidence of some foul crime had been revealed, but the fact was soon made known that the spot disturbed used to be a part of the old prison cemetery about forty years ago. The bones were gathered in one big box for reburial in the new cemetery.

CHARLIE MITCHELL—JIM CORBETT

Matchmaker Judge Newton Meets the English Pugilist.

SITUATION TALKED OVER.

Mitchell Does Not Like the Idea of Being Dictated to.

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—A meeting took place tonight between Judge Newton, matchmaker of the Coney Island Athletic club, and Charlie Mitchell, the English heavyweight champion. The situation was thoroughly talked over. Mitchell said he did not like the idea of being dictated to by Corbett, but he had come here to fight.

Judge Newton made him the offer of a purse of $40,000, to which the stake money of $10,000 aside could be added, making the purse $60,000, the largest amount ever fought for in this country. Mitchell said that if there was no other place to pull this fight off than Coney Island, he would just as lief fight there, and the quicker the matter could be settled the better he would like it.

Judge Newton presented Mitchell with a copy of the articles which Corbett signed. Mitchell has from now until Saturday to consider the articles and modify them to suit him. Then the articles are to be presented to Corbett for his approval.

It is said that the offer of $50,000, made by the New Orleans people was reduced this evening to $30,000. The chances are that the fight will take place at Coney Island, as Mitchell said that from what Judge Newton had told him of the purpose of the articles he thought the necessary alterations would be all right.

The Haggie Schloss Murder Trial.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 21.—Dr. Lee, one of the physicians under arrest, was put upon the witness stand by the defence in the Schloss murder trial this morning. He testified that the girl would probably have died of blood poisoning in three days unless he had performed an operation on her, and explained that his reason for demanding such a large price for his services was that he was obliged to give up several other important cases to attend this. He then described in detail the operation performed.

Autumn Excursions to California.

With the growing popularity of California as a winter resort, comes a demand for early excursions to the Pacific coast, in order that the entire season may be spent in that favored region. Two trips for the accommodation of such people have been planned by Messrs. Raymond & Whitcomb, with Wednesday, October 18, as the date of departure from Boston. Both parties will pass a week at the Raymond & Whitcomb Grand Hotel in Chicago, for a visit to the exposition, and one will then go thence to Monterey by way of Colorado and Utah, and the other to San Diego via Las Vegas Hot Springs and Santa Fe. The tourists will have entire freedom of movement during the winter, the return tickets being good for several months and allowing a choice of routes. A book giving full information may be obtained free of Raymond & Whitcomb, 296 Washington street, Boston.

Price of Oysters Will Be the Same.

The indications now are that this year's Connecticut oyster crop will be about up to the average, and that the price will not be advanced. It would have taken three years for the settings to mature, so the full effect of the storms will not be felt for three years yet.

A YACHT CRAZE.

Thirty New Boats Built at Stonington Point—Their Speed to Be Tested.

During the past few weeks the yacht craze has seized upon the citizens of Stonington borough, and it has raged until but few are exempt from its influence. Nearly every person has a different idea with reference to what should be the characteristics of a yacht when speed is required. After exhausting all the arguments that could be conceived, without arriving at a definite conclusion, it was decided that each advocate of a specific idea construct a boat in conformity therewith and test the speed of the models thus constructed. The result has been the building of not less than thirty of these miniature yachts. Most of them have been tested by themselves, but as this is unsatisfactory in establishing the merits of the different boats, a regatta has been arranged, to take place Saturday afternoon in the harbor. Already fourteen boats have been entered for the contest, which promises to be an exciting and interesting one.

PRIZE WINNERS.

A Stonington Firm Who Keep Premium Stock.

Messrs. Williams & Lord of Stonington were awarded five first and three second prizes at the Rhode Island State fair, Wednesday, for the eight entries of Shropshire sheep made by them. Their flock of sheep of the above variety has been obtained regardless of expense, and they have, undoubtedly, the finest herd in New England. At the New England fair a few days since they were awarded a majority of the premiums for sheep of the above variety. Among their flock are some that were prize-winners in England before they were imported to this country. Messrs. Williams & Lord will make a large exhibit at the New London county fair next week.

STONINGTON POINT.

The Town Reports—The License Question—H. B. Palmer to Attend the World's Fair.

The republican caucus for the nomination of town officers, to be voted for at the approaching election, will be held in Borough hall on Tuesday afternoon, September 26. It is desired that as many as can do so will be present.

From the reports of our town officers, with reference to town affairs, the following interesting facts have been obtained: The total expenses of the town for the year ending September, 1892, were $30,069 49. The total expense for the year just passed was $33,891, an increase of expenses during the past year of $3,821.51. The outstanding war debt bonds of the town amount to $25,000.

The total indebtedness of the town amounts to $62,275 34. To reduce this there is a balance in the treasury of $6 808 93 and uncollected taxes amounting to $4,000, leaving a net debt of $51,466 41. The town debt has been reduced $3 747 45 during the year. The sum of $14 260 has been appropriated for the support of the common schools of the town for the ensuing year.

As the time for holding the town election approaches, the subject of voting on the license question comes prominently before our voters. In no town in this state is the subject more thoroughly canvassed or the result of the vote more uncertain. Last year a vote in favor of license prevailed by a majority of but eight. This year it is thought by a majority of our citizens that a no-license majority will be obtained. Both sides of the question will be thoroughly discussed during the next few days.

Mr. H. B. Palmer of the borough is to be one of the party that will go with Governor Brown of Rhode Island to the World's fair. He will represent The Providence Journal.

PRESTON.

Fruit Thieves—Cider Making—School Opening.

Garden thieves have struck on. A few farmers have suffered from their depredations.

Misses Hattie and Fannie Fanning, daughters of Judge Fanning of Ledyard, will start soon for Chicago to visit the World's fair, and from there journey to California.

Gallup Brothers' cider mill at Poquetanuck is kept busy most of the time pressing out "orchard tea," which is being made in large quantities from all sections of the town. A pressing about every hour is what does the business, and they are hustlers, too.

Mrs Edgar Clark of Glasgow paid a visit to relatives in Shewville recently.

The school in the Eleventh district will open the winter term on Monday next with Miss Hannah B. Witter as teacher. Miss Witter has taught before in the district and gives universal satisfaction.

The blacksmith department will occupy the first floor, the carriage department the second floor and basement on the third floor. While this is being built he will do repairs at Mr. Loosis's carriage shop.

John D Avery has purchased an ensilage cutter which is to be operated by steam power and will fill his silo this week.

Alexander C. Thompson has harvested from a bog in the eastern part of this town 75 barrels of cranberries. He has another tract of two acres that were set to vines the past season. The success already met with proves that it is a profitable investment.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Clark started Monday for the Adirondack mountains under advice from his physician that a change of air would restore him to health.

Tuesday, Miss Abbie L. Palmer, Miss Ella Wheeler and Richard Wheeler of this town, accompanied by Miss Jennie Miner and Mrs Charles Champlin of Westerly, started for the World's fair.

Miss Lina Partelo commenced her duties as teacher in the lower Pawcatuck district Monday, and Miss Emma Babcock in the Randall district, Stonington.

Union services are to be held in the Baptist church in this village Friday evening. Miss Alice Ford of Buffalo, will speak on the subject of missions.

Mrs. Julia R Purcival of Brooklyn, N. Y., is the guest of Mrs. F. Myra Brown.

The Rev. C. W. Ray, D. D. of Philadelphia, is visiting his former parishioners.

LISBON.

Burial of Mrs. Duane B. Read.

The burial of her who once was Elizabeth Stetson, but for thirty-eight years the wife of Duane B. Read in Niantic, in the "Read cemetery," was largely attended. She was the youngest of twelve children—six sons and six daughters—of Capt. James Stetson, most all of whom were born on "Bundy Hill" on the farm known as the "Ripley farm," and owned by Dwight R Ripley of Norwich. Only two of the twelve are now living—Dwight R. of Niantic and Horace of Hartford.

Mrs. Read had a very wide circle of warm friends and was a most estimable woman. The floral tributes were rare; many tears of sympathy were shed, and the words spoken testified of a loving remembrance of a kindly life.

HANOVER.

Personals—Mrs. Forbes of the W. C. T. U. to Make an Address.

Mrs. L. P. Rowland of Norwich is the guest of Miss Ruth E. Allen.

Mrs M. Pendleton of Suffield is at Mrs. Ethan Allen's.

ASHWILLETT.

New Ashwillett—A Democratic Method of Appointing a Postmaster—Meeting in the Chapel—Personals.

Mrs Ellian Woodmansee spoke at the Corner last Sunday evening before the Christian Endeavor society. Many attended the services.

Mr. Avery Miller and family of Norwich Town are visiting friends here.

George Miner of Putnam is visiting here. He is going to attend the World's fair after a two weeks' stay.

Miss Deborah Knox of Pawtucket, R. I., will speak in the Union chapel at Ashwillett Sunday, Sept. 24. A good sermon may be expected for she is one of the best lady speakers in New England.

Miss Mabel Blanchard who has been visiting relatives has returned to her home in Asaway.

George Swan of Norwich preached at Ashwillett chapel Sunday to a large audience. His hearers were deeply interested.

Charles P. Culver has taken the contract to repair the school house in New Ashwillett.

New Ashwillett contains now one store, a school house, four dwelling houses and the post office. It is estimated that the post office will pay the government $10 or $12 per year. Before the office was removed from this place it paid $80 to $100 per year, and every one of the patrons of the office wished to have it remain where it was and some 87 persons signed a petition to that effect. But there was no democrat in the place who would take the office, and to have a democrat postmaster the office had to be removed two and one-half miles from the center. The postmaster appointed did not receive his mail at the Ashwillett office. There is an old saying that "there is no great loss without some small gain" and I think the republican party will be the gainer in this case.

The Rev. Charles W Ray, D. D., of Philadelphia preached a very able sermon at the chapel Tuesday evening. The people were all glad to see him. Mrs. Ray was born and brought up at the old Sheffield homestead. They have scores of relatives and friends in this place.

Mrs. Lucy Rogers of Montville is the guest of Charles H. Culver.

DEEP LAID SCHEME.

Election Law Issue Forced to Prevent Repeal.

SILVER MEN ARE DISTRUSTFUL.

President Said to Be Ready to Sign a Bill Favorable to Silver.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—Senator Lindsay of Kentucky, who is an ardent supporter of the president and his silver policy, said today that he felt much discouraged with the situation in the senate since the occurrences of yesterday. He had previously entertained the belief that the opponents of repeal would, after a reasonable time had elapsed, allow a vote to be reached, but now he does not believe that the enemies of the administration will allow a vote to be taken. They have the power to prevent it and it is now evident that they have organized with that view. They are more bold and defiant than they have been at any time since the controversy opened. By assuming this attitude they hope to force the administration to come to their terms. The president will not consent to any condition being incorporated in this bill. He has informed several senators within the past 24 hours that he would after the present bill is out of the way. The visit of Secretary Carlisle to the capitol was for the purpose of conveying to Senators Voorhees, Gorman, Gray and other friends of the administration in that body the intelligence that the president would be entirely willing to approve of a measure which might be agreed upon by the rival interests in the senate and not hostile to silver.

This is no new attitude of the president, as there was an understanding in the beginning with Senator Voorhees and others in the senate that the repeal of the present bill should be followed by further legislation. The president now wishes that fact to be known. The great difficulty, however, which surrounds this question, and which is unfortunate for the administration, is that the free coinage members on both sides of the chamber are in the president's promises. They point to the fact that he has always been opposed to silver and has never shown any disposition to give it recognition, from his first steps in public life down to the present time. They therefore are not willing to take any chances. As long as the silverites occupy this position, progress in the settlement of this controversy is impossible.

A prominent New England senator said today that he had been advised of the true inwardness of the move in the house to repeal the federal election laws. The inception of the movement came from the silver advocates in the house, after a conference with a few of the silver Democrats in the senate. The federal election repeal bill was after this understanding prepared by the Democratic members of the committee on the election of president and vice president. It was their purpose to spring this measure upon the house and rush it through that body as speedily as possible, in order to get it before the senate while the silver discussion was pending. It was proposed, when the debate in the senate on the silver bill was nearly exhausted, to move that the election bill be taken up as A Substitute For the Silver Bill.

It was arranged that the motion to that effect should be made by an influential southern senator, who would be supported by all his colleagues in the south together with the silver senators on the Republican side. The administration senators in the south and north, they argued, would not dare to vote against the federal election repeal bill, as that was one of the cardinal planks of the Chicago platform. The Republican silver senators would support this motion in order to thwart the passage of the Voorhees bill. This measure once launched upon the senate, the projectors of the scheme declared, would side-track the silver question and open up an acrimonious political controversy from which the senate would not very readily rid itself. It would also have the effect of arraying the Republican senators against the Democrats by reviving all the old issues on Honest Elections and Shotgun Methods.

The only way to avert this deep laid scheme, the friends of the administration in the house have been advised, is to hold the federal election bill back until the silver question is disposed of in the senate. It appears that the president was informed some days ago of this shrewd piece of parliamentary tactics. It is understood that he called the attention of Speaker Crisp and a few other Democratic friends to the impropriety of pressing this federal election bill at this time. The speaker and those with whom the president talked did not know at that time that the prime movers in the election repeal bill intended to rush the question into the senate for parliamentary purposes. They informed the president that, inasmuch as the bill had been agreed to by the committee, it had better be reported and considered; otherwise their action might be attributed to cowardice.

The president is strongly in favor of the purpose of the bill, but as from the first regarded this as a very inopportune time to bring it forward. When it is ascertained that this move was instigated by the silverites in the two houses, and is intended to complicate the interests of silver repeal in the senate, the administration friends in the house are likely to call a halt for the present. Representative Reed of Maine has been informed of the purpose and designs of the men who are pressing the elections bill. He may take occasion to call the attention of the friends of the administration in the house to the matter, in order that the proposed scheme may be frustrated.

COUNTERFEITING LAW.

Likely to Be Amended Exempting Publications From Its Provision.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—A favorable report is likely to be made by the judiciary committee of both houses on the bill to amend the stringent law regarding counterfeiting which passed Mr. Reed's Congress. That law was so severe that any representation of the United States or foreign coin, whether in a cartoon, in a newspaper, or on coinage, made the dies and plates liable to seizure by the secret service officers of the government.

The plates of the New York Recorder actually were seized this summer for a cartoon relating to the silver question which could not by any possibility have deceived anybody into taking the rough sketch of a silver dollar on a paper for the coin. The New York Herald came near suffering a like fate, and both papers were ignorant of the severity of the law until after their cartoons had appeared. No seizures appear to have been made as yet of books devoted to foreign coins, but there are many on the market, and they are liable to seizure under the law.

One of the New York papers sent copies of the bill to Senator Lodge of Massachusetts and Representative Cummings of New York amending the law, and these bills are likely to be favorably reported. The amendment proposed exempts publishers of newspapers, magazines and other publications from the penalties of the law unless their dies or prints shall bear such likeness or resemblance to actual coins "as that the same would tend to create the belief that they, or some of them, were coins of the United States or some foreign government."

ROBBERS AFLOAT.

Desperate Fight With Them—Officers Obliged to Surrender Prisoners.

NEW YORK, Sept 21.—A special from St. Ignace, Mich., says: A desperate gang of thieves is operating from a swift sailboat along the shores of Lake Michigan and the straits of Mackinac. A tug with a detachment of regular soldiers from Fort Mackinac is in hot pursuit. The thieves are well armed, and a meeting is sure to result in bloodshed.

The postoffice on Mackinac island was looted Sunday night, and over $2000 worth of stamps and money was stolen. A few nights before the postoffice at Charlevoix was robbed.

On the night of the Mackinac island robbery, a strange looking craft made a landing and mysteriously disappeared in the morning. The island officers' suspicions were aroused, and they chartered a tug and gave chase. After running 48 miles along the north shore west, they came up to the sailboat, and recognizing the boat and three men, ordered the latter to surrender. The crooks at once opened fire. Officer James Murray was shot in the hand, another received a bullet in the breast and fell. The fusilade continued for some time, when two of the crooks surrendered. They were bound and secured in the hold of the tug.

An attempt was made to get the third one, who was hiding under a small deck in the bow of the sailboat. Officer Jaquett exhausted all of his ammunition, after which the robber came out with two revolvers and demanded the release of his two partners. The prisoners were released and the sailboat cut adrift.

The tug returned to Mackinac island for re-enforcements, and a detachment of soldiers from the fort with several officers, on board the steamer North Star, left Tuesday afternoon in pursuit of the sailboat.

A HERMIT'S LIFE.

Seventeen-Year-Old New York Boy Seeks to Become a Recluse.

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—August Doppermann, a boy 17 years, has a decided inclination toward the life of a hermit. He was arraigned in a police court today for the second time because of his waywardness. About two years ago his father had him committed to an institution for camping out at all seasons of the year. He was discharged on June 27 with a ticket-of-leave. Since July 15 he has been living in an excavation which he made on the bank of Newtown creek.

He was caught and held at the Lee avenue police court sentenced to be sent back to the House of Refuge. He asked for liberty for a few hours in order to dispose of the dog and the cat which had occupied the excavation with him. This was refused, however, as he was unwilling to take anyone to the cave with him, and it was thought that if he was allowed to go alone he might not return.

FIRE GAINING HEADWAY.

People of Dakota Fleeing From the Burning Settlements.

DEADWOOD, S. D., Sept. 21.—A fire is gaining great headway on top of the Black Tail divide, threatening Central City and the county poorhouse. One hundred men are engaged in fighting. At Bear Mountain a terrible state of affairs exists. The inhabitants of Terry, a mining camp of 500 persons, have left the town in flames. Everything there will be a total loss and the damage will amount to $60,000.

The Buxton mill and dwelling house, valued at $12,000, were destroyed. The fire is raging with great fury over an area of seven miles long and wide. The Uncle Sam stamp mill and the town of Perry, 10 miles distant, having been destroyed. A fire is burning at the fair grounds, two miles distant from here, and the stables, race track and other buildings will probably be destroyed.

VERMONT ROMANCE.

Young Couple From West Berlin Run Away and Get Married.

MONTPELIER, Vt., Sept. 21.—George F. Parsons and Delia J. Ayers eloped from West Berlin last evening, drove six miles to Montpelier, and were married by Rev. G. O. Webster, the Baptist pastor. By falsifying Parsons obtained his license from the town clerk of Barre. The girl is only 15 years old. Her irate father, who is grand juror of the town of Berlin, followed them this morning and had Parsons arrested and lodged in jail.

He was preparing to leave the state and owed his new found father-in-law a board bill of large dimensions. The girl was sent home to her mother, and Parsons will be given a hearing tomorrow. The man from whom they hired a team last evening, promising to return in two hours, came for it this morning and settled with Parsons for $5.

REBELS OBTAIN SUPPLIES.

England Will File a Claim Against Brazil For Cutting the Cable.

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—The Herald's Montevideo correspondent cables: In the capture of Nictheroy, Admiral Mello obtained a large supply of coal, provisions and ammunition. The government forces lost 60 killed and 130 wounded in the fight.

The rebel fleet now consists of six warships, three torpedo boats, many tugs, transports and launches. All of them are well provisioned. The British legation intends to file a claim against the Brazilian government for cutting off cable communication.

Mail advices received here state that President Peixoto knew 10 days ago that his defeat was inevitable. He defied the revolutionists only because the ministry so advised him. It is reported that the state of Sao Paulo has declared in favor of the rebels.

Dashed Through an Open Switch.

RAVENNA, O., Sept. 21.—A passenger train on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, with seven sleepers, dashed through an open switch this morning, killing Joe King instantly. E. Fryman, engineer of the passenger, jumped and is badly cut. The passengers escaped with a slight shaking up.

The Trefethen Trial.

BOSTON, Sept. 21.—The Trefethen trial was delayed some hours today by the sickness of Juror Flarity, but that worthy recovered under medical treatment and the case proceeded with the testimony of witnesses for the state. There is a report that Trefethen will testify in his own behalf, but it is not authoritative.

Shot Himself in the Head.

BOSTON, Sept. 21.—Horace E. Winn of 633 Shawmut avenue attempt suicide in his room at 6:30 o'clock this morning by shooting himself in the head with a revolver. Despondency due to domestic troubles is said to have been the cause. Winn is 46 years old, and it is said that he and his wife dissolved their partnership some time ago, owing to inability to agree. Doctors say he cannot live.

A BRIGAND LOVER.

Why do you look at me so, Germaine?
Why is that glare in your scornful eyes?
Troubles we must have, you know, Germaine;
Then you're a fool to let temper rise.
What though your hair be a crown of flame,
Need you enkindle my hate to fire?
I love her! Yes, and that's why she came,
So you may stifle your futile ire.

Deep are her eyes as the dusk, Germaine,
Deep as the dusk and of mournful brown,
Smiles like the faintness of musk, Germaine,
Brows like a queen's, but too soft to frown.
After your passionate love and hate,
Sweet, full sweet, will her mildness be,
Like cooling winds when the day dies late,
Like harbor after a stormy sea.

There, will you never be still, Germaine?
Strange that you're woman enough to cry.
What! you would strike me to kill, Germaine?
Taste my good blade for your pains—and die!
Here ye are, men, with the other one,
Yes, dead is Germaine, as ye see.
There wasn't room enough 'neath the sun
For the old love, the new love—and me!
—R. G. Welsh in Springfield Homestead.

TWO OF THEM.

Early in the winter of 1863 I was ordered to report at Benton barracks, St. Louis, to assist in organizing new regiments.

It looked like snow when I left Philadelphia, and it did snow worse and worse as we speeded farther west. By the time we reached Terre Haute, Ind., things looked very blue for getting on.

Anxious not to lose a chance to reach my station, I "held the fort" in the cars, the conductor assuring me that the engine and mail car would go ahead anyhow, and that I could be thus "put through."

I was awakened by the brakeman, who informed me that the conductor had gone to the hotel, leaving him to wake me and say that there was no hope for anything on wheels going out that night. My disappointment rendered me angry and unreasonable. I rose up in my wrath and anathematized the road and all connected with it, high and low. As he advised me to stay in the cars, I determined not to do so.

I had been for some eight months at my home, recovering from an ugly wound in the face received in our first advance against Richmond. This was not entirely healed, and my head was "in a bag"—a large covering inclosing my face and head, leaving only the left eye and mouth visible—and this, while it appealed to the patriotic, made me a queer looking figure.

In the baggage car, chained to my trunk, was Mac, my dog, a large English greyhound, a pet I had brought from home through a feeling of sentiment. Once determined to sally forth, I went to the baggage car, untied Mac, opened my trunk, exchanged my dress overcoat for one of rough blue, drew on long boots outside my trousers, and strapped on a belt with two six shooters in holsters. Receiving information as to the direction of the hotel from the brakeman and calling Mac, we plunged into the storm. On and on and on we blundered and stumbled, the poor dog keeping close to me and whining piteously.

Suddenly I heard a noise, and forcing my way against the wind and snow toward it came "bang up" against the side of a house. Under this partial protection I looked along and was cheered by the sight of a gleam of light which came from an open window. I quickly found the door of the house, and with Mac entered the dingy barroom of a third rate lager beer saloon. It was about 11 o'clock at night. The proprietor was a rough, surly German. He stared with astonishment as we burst in upon him.

"Can I stay here tonight?"

"Naw!"

"Why not? Look here, old man, I look pretty rough, but I've got money to pay for everything I want or order," and I showed him a large roll of greenbacks. "If you can't give me a bed, make up your fire here so it will keep all night, and I'll pay you well to let me sleep on chairs in this barroom."

"Vell," he replied, with hesitation, "I haf von room got, unt in't two bed is, bud der is von man dare already."

"I don't care if there's an elephant in the one bed, so I get the other," said I. "Let's have it right off."

"Der dog he will here shtay, eh?"

"No, sir-ee. That dog goes where I do. I'll pay for him like any other Christian. Put it in the bill."

With a grunt and a shrug the heavy old fellow lighted about half an inch of tallow candle, and telling me, "Come on, then," led the way out of a side door and up dirty, rickety stairs to what might be called the "front attic." As we passed a door on the second floor a woman's voice called to the man. I suppose she asked him what he was doing, as he answered that he was only going to show "dis feller to bet."

The room in which he placed me was mean in every way—one strip of rag carpet in the middle, a poor bed under each slope of the roof. He placed the candlestick on a rude shelf, and with a grunt took his departure.

I looked around—and did not like the appearance of things. I saw a lot of rough clothing piled on a broken chair by one bedside. I took the candle and went quietly over to survey my roommate. I was not prepossessed in his favor. He was a sallow looking chap, with a big black beard and tangled hair. The outlines of his figure, curled up under the blankets, seemed to indicate that he was about 7 feet high, and I could see that he was feigning sleep and watching me.

I determined to "bluff it through," if possible. Placing the candle again on the shelf, I unbuttoned the overcoat and drew forth my big [illegible]; putting them on half cock, I twirled the cylinder around and looked carefully into each chamber; then with a sigh of relief, and as if to say, "That's good for six shots anyhow." I laid them on the bed I was to occupy. Then I pulled the old slouch hat as far over my ears as possible, turned down the blankets, and with boots, overcoat and hat on, turned into the bed.

The pistols I placed one on each side of me; the knife I laid under my back. I wakened Mac, who, totally exhausted, was asleep on the floor, made him jump in and lie down close to me, and then pulled the blankets over us both. I quickly dropped into a half sleep. A movement from the other creaky bed awakened me. I opened my eyes, and by the dull snow light which struggled through the single window could see the outlines of the man in the other bed, and he was sitting up.

In an instant I was on the alert, but made no movement. He leaned forward and seemed to listen. Then he dropped down again. In about five minutes he once more raised himself and for a time was motionless. Then one leg was put outside the cover; then the other, and he stood erect. With the utmost caution he invested his long legs in their proper garments, and then gathering up his other clothing and boots in his arms he stole quietly as a robber out of the room.

I heard him descend the stairs and knock lightly on the door of the landlord's chamber. Several times he knocked. Then the doors opened, and I could hear the dull muttering of the big German, the shrill whispers of a woman, and earnest though low tones, which must be those of the stranger. Then the two men went down into the barroom, and I decided that I was "in for it." I crept out of bed and went to the door—no lock or catch was there. I looked for something to brace against it. Nothing could be found. One of the two chairs had only three legs, and neither had any back. I was caught in a trap.

I had fought my way through every grade from private to captain, in the field, and done every line of duty from picket to pitched battle, but I never had such trying hours as I passed in that bed. I could recognize the shuffling of stocking shod feet on the first floor and could hear a steady conversation for about 15 minutes. Then all was quiet for a time. Next I heard a heavy, but cautious tread, ascending to the landlord's room, and the woman's whispers were renewed.

The garret room door was opened just a crack. There I fastened my gaze. To that point I directed the barrels of my pistols. I heard the stairs creak and the wind howl.

I watched and waited and finally I fell asleep. When I awoke, Mac was licking my face and broad daylight was streaming through the window. My pistols lay where they had fallen from my hands. I felt in my pockets. There was my money all right. Quickly I made my way down stairs. In the barroom, which seemed rather cozy by morning view, was the host, who now looked an honest, sturdy fellow. "Can I have breakfast for myself and dog?"

"Well, I guess so; after a bit."

And all the time he was eying me most curiously. I took a seat by the hot stove. He came and rattled it a little with the poker, and at last said:

"Say, vat mit dat other feller you do lasht night dot you so moch him skeer?"

"Do!" said I. "I didn't do anything, and as to 'skeer' I'll bet a horse he wasn't half as much 'skeered' as I was—the thundering big border ruffian!"

"By shimmuny! dot a good one was. He comes down all mit der drimbile und vakes my wife, und she myself vakes, und he say to me, 'Wot for you sent to mine petroom op dot feller mit a vite mask his face on, unt two pishtols unt dot pig ploothoun dug? I shtay not der room in mit no such ploothoun unt murterin cudtrote.' I haf de chairs in de kitchen for him fix, unt he at de daylight leaf mitout his breakfast what for he der last night paid."

In spite of its very tame, though decidedly satisfactory ending, that was as trying a night as ever I passed in my life.—Romance.

Fanny Kemble and the Shopman.

I went out shopping with Fanny Kemble one spring morning when she thought her room would look the brighter for muslin curtains to admit the light. She carried a long purse full of sovereigns in her hand. We drove to Regent street to a shop where she told me her mother and her aunt used both to go. It may have been over that very counter that the classic "Will it wash?" was uttered.

The shopman, who had assuredly not served Mrs. Siddons, or he would have learned his lesson earlier in life, produced silken hangings and worsted and fabrics of various hues and textures, to Mrs. Kemble's great annoyance. I had gone to another counter and came back to find her surrounded by draperies, sitting on her chair and looking very serious. Distant thunder seemed in the air.

"Young man," she said to the shopman, "perhaps your time is of no value to you; to me my time is of great value. I shall thank you to show me the things I asked for instead of all these things for which I did not ask." And she flashed such a glance at him as must have surprised the youth. He looked perfectly scared, seemed to leap over the counter, and the muslin curtains appeared on the spot.—Mrs. Ritchie in Macmillan's Magazine.

A Ghost Story of the Victoria Disaster.

A ghost story is told which hinges upon the disaster to the British warship Victoria. It takes the familiar form of the ghost on the stairs and is as follows: At Lady Tryon's party, given on the evening of the fatal collision between the Victoria and the Camperdown, a well known lady saw the figure of Sir George Tryon on the stairs and watched it pass down into the refreshment room. Lady —— was surprised, and coming across a friend told her what she had seen, adding, "I must go and tell Lady Tryon what a pleasant surprise she has given us all, and I must find Sir George to speak to him." Upon this the second lady, who is also well known in society, said: "Do not say anything to Lady Tryon. I saw Sir George, too, and I spoke to her, and she seemed annoyed. She says that Sir George is not here. He is with his ship."—Exchange.

Peaches For the Complexion.

Peaches are good before breakfast and after dinner. They are good for the digestion, good for the blood and good for the complexion. Some people eat them without cream or sugar, and with good result. The fruit is so rich in sugar and acid that it preserves its flavor a long while, but to get the full benefit it should be eaten as soon as it is cut.

Redness of the nose, due to congestion, inflamed complexion, scrofulous and bilious tendencies, are said to be materially influenced by a liberal consumption of this luscious fruit. Mixed fruits are always advisable, but the peach in season, used as an alternate with plums, cherries, melons and berries, will vanquish the enemies of the complexion.—Chicago Post.

Encouraging.

"Will you be true to me at the seashore, Maud?"

"Yes, Charlie, dear. I won't get engaged to any other man without letting you know."—Harper's Bazar.

The Future of the West Indies.

As a field for colonization by Europeans and more particularly by British settlers the West Indies cannot be recommended. On the loftiest slopes of the Blue mountains of Jamaica a limited area may perhaps be found where a northern race might enjoy a suitable climate. In the lowlands near the sea the white man could not live and work. In the highlands of the interior, working in the morning and evening, he could easily accomplish seven hours a day of hard labor.

Jamaica is an island in which the experiment of colonization for our surplus population might safely be tried on a small scale. The promoters of the railway now being constructed, partially on the land grant scheme, would probably be glad to co-operate in carrying out a project of the nature indicated. In the Cayman islands, with 4,322 inhabitants, two populations are to be seen side by side. The white population numbers 1,602, the colored 1,736, and the black 993. The whites have been settled more than a century, and have been a thriving and vigorous people. It is an important fact to notice that a mixed or colored race cannot perpetuate itself. The children are wanting in stamina and constitution.

Taking a broad view, these lovely islands are only suited to a tropical race such as the negroes, and for these they may be made an earthly paradise. Left to themselves the people might rapidly degenerate. Under British rule we may, in a not distant future, confidently hope to see the black population of our West India islands living in prosperous circumstances, with all the markets of the world open to their useful products, good customers to the British manufacturer, bound to the British empire by the strongest ties of gratitude, and raised to a condition of enlightenment and civilization only as yet attained by a few men who have been greatly favored.—Lord Brassey in Fortnightly Review.

But Her Dream Was Realized.

Once upon a time a girl was seized with the bicycle mania. That was three years ago, when mammas were not quite so liberal minded as they are now. A rich aunt threatened to disown her, and the rest of the relatives raised a chorus of disapproval whenever she mentioned the subject. For the sake of peace and quiet the dear, self sacrificing girl gave up the bicycle idea, although every season she suffered terribly whenever she saw a girl on a wheel. About a week ago she asserted her rights and took her savings for three years and invested them in a bicycle. Every morning she disappeared for several hours and returned home with bandaged fingers, torn skirts, a banged in hat, a sour temper and a painful limp.

Yesterday she invited the family to assemble at a certain riding school to see her perform. She nimbly mounted, spun around the hall twice, jumped off and on with the agility of a young kitten and excited the admiration of the whole crowd.

Then some officious person said, "Go around the other way."

She had always practiced in the one direction, but such a trifle did not worry her, so she wheeled around and rode off like a runaway cable car. When she arrived at the first turn, there was a terrible crash, a shriek, a resounding crack made by her head coming in contact with the floor, and then all was still.

The family had her taken home in an ambulance, and she has already made arrangements to have the machine patched up and sold at half price.

It only cost her about $125 to have her dream realized.—Chicago Record.

Lucrative Honesty.

"Oh, Tom," said a young wife to her husband, "I found a truly honest man this morning."

"Indeed!" said he, laughing ironically.

"Yes, I did," she said. "He was a tramp—oh, so dirty and ragged and sick looking and miserable! He came around the back way and begged me in the touchingest tone of voice just to give him any old coat or trousers, so that he could throw away his rags and be a little cleaner—so I gave him that old black coat of yours."

"Hm-m-m-m!" said Tom, raising his brows critically.

"Now don't say 'Hm-m-m!' that way," pouted his wife, "for before he had been gone 10 minutes he came back all out of breath, and—what do you think?"

"Asked for a vest and hat to suit the coat," growled Tom.

"No, sir," proudly exclaimed Mrs. Tom. "No, sir—he came to bring back a $5 bill he found in the inside pocket, where you had forgotten it last summer. There, wasn't that honest?"

"Yes-s-s," said Tom slowly. "What did you give him for it?"

"I thought such unusual honesty was worth a dollar, so I give it to him. Such honesty deserves reward, I'm sure."

"I suppose it does," said Tom, with a lugubrious look, as he reached out his hand for the bill. "Only you see, wifey, I never carried money in my inside pocket in my life, and"——

She caught her breath.

——"this blanked bill is a rank counterfeit—that's all."—Cincinnati Commercial Gazette.

Subject Quite Exhausted.

They are two very clever newspaper women, and one leisure day they went together to buy a rubber mackintosh for one of them, which was necessitated by the exposure in rainy weather consequent upon her business.

Now, mackintoshes are rather high priced, and there was a good deal of hesitation over the purchase.

"Would it wear well?"

They were assured it would.

"Would it pull in the seams?"

"Never."

"Was it absolutely waterproof?"

"It would withstand a cloudburst of rain."

The subject seemed exhausted. Still they hesitated.

"Would it fade in the sun?"—Boston Herald.

THE PROCESSES OF COINING THE PRECIOUS METALS

"Making Money Is Just Like Making Cake," Says a Mint Officer—Mixed, Rolled Out and Cut—The Work Women Do in the Philadelphia Money Factory.

It is rather difficult to attempt a description of how money is made. Even encyclopedias, which are supposed to be equal to any and all emergencies, object to that. In a measure they are right. To get the best idea of the multiple and minute processes of minting one must be an eyewitness. It adds charm to the proceedings to stand by the dusty furnaces, arranged in sentinellike rows, to see them open their jaws and to look right down into the fiery cavern, where insatiable tongues of flame are licking up the molten masses of silver and gold.

A day or two ago Officer Brown, standing beside a visitor who had watched with all the fascination of a novice the great iron mouths opening and closing, betrayed himself into a neat little explanation of the process of minting money. Officer Brown has been many years at the mint, so the visitor listened with interest as to one who spoke with authority. Here is the process in a nutshell:

"Making money," said he, with one of those eloquent waves of the hands he keeps by him to use on explanatory occasions such as these, "is just like making cake. You mix the dough; we mix the metal. You roll out the dough into shape; we roll out the metal into bars. You cut the dough into cakes; we cut the metal into coins. Then we stamp them. The metal left over is melted up and used again, just as the cook gathers up the left overs, rolls them again and cuts more cakes."

In other words, an amount of metal, say the equivalent of $90,000 in gold, which chemically is made up of 90 per cent gold and 10 per cent copper, is put into a black lead crucible about the size of a peck measure. It is kept in the furnace 1 hour and 15 minutes. The workman watches his gold as sacredly as the cook her cakes, and when the molten liquid is brought to the proper consistency he takes a three cornered black lead cup, about the size that would fit a monkey's head, and dips up $3,000 worth of the metal at a time, pouring it out again with that marvelous dexterity, which only comes from practice, into molds holding $1,000 each. Nothing can be more beautiful than the fiery stream of young and pure gold as it glides into the locked arms of the iron mold. When the liquid solidifies it forms a bar, or, to be technically correct, an ingot about 12 inches long and about half an inch thick.

These ingots are subjected to a process of rolling out which lengthens them without increasing the width. The bars are then ready to be cut. One machine cuts the coin; another stamps them after the process of milling has been performed. Milling, in mint parlance, has somewhat of a different signification than in ordinary vernacular. It signifies the rolling over of the edge of the coin preparatory to stamping it with the minute denticulations which are commonly known as the milling. The latter is part of the process of stamping and is done at the time that the signet is put on the coin.

Speaking of stamping introduces the large corps of women who form a considerable part of the working force of the mint. About 100 of them are employed, and they attend entirely to the adjusting and stamping. It may be said in explanation of the process of the term "adjusting" that every coin before it is shaped is carefully weighed. If too heavy, the edge is delicately filed until the coin is of lawful weight; if too light, the piece is sent to be remelted. This process of weighing and adjusting is an employment to which women, with their delicacy of touch, are well suited. They are also in charge of the stamping. Incidentally it may be said that most presses stamp from 80 to 110 coins every minute. In one short hour $45,000 in $10 gold pieces can be stamped around the edge and on both sides.

There is another part of the work which comes under the charge of the women employed at the mint. They do the sewing. At first thought it seems a trifle incongruous to associate sewing with minting money, but all the bags used by the mint are sewed in the building. The bags are made of white duck and run up by machine, being sewed twice for security. The bagmaking is no small thing when you come to consider the number it takes to pack up the newly coined wealth of the country each year. The 5 cent pieces are packed in $50 bags and the pennies in $10 bags, small silver in $1,000 and the gold in $5,000 pouches. Roughly speaking, last year fully 3,000 bags were made up for gold alone, 15,000 for silver, 3,000 for half dollars, besides many thousands for the smaller coins.—Philadelphia Times.

Cost of Superstition.

"Don't you know this haunted house idea has a tremendous hold on people's minds?" said a dealer in residence property. "I have several houses on my hands for either rent or sale that somehow seem slow to take, and I now know at least one of the reasons. There was a murder committed in one, and several suicides have occurred in another, and when a buyer or renter goes to look at these houses some galoot of a neighbor will stick his head into other people's business and squeal about the happenings in those houses, and no matter what the prospective customer thought of the property that settles it. People don't want houses where murders and suicides have been committed."—Cincinnati Times-Star.

Routed the Dog Catchers.

Dog catchers on Tuesday attempted to capture a canine belonging to a certain butcher. The butcher and a crowd of bystanders gave chase after the wagon, and overtaking it stopped the vehicle, cut the harness, set the horse loose, released all the imprisoned dogs and gave the dog catcher and his assistants a severe mauling.—New York News.

THE CRIMINAL EYE.

Frequently an Aid to the Detective In Following Cases.

Eyes are the most certain revealers of the criminal nature. Many an expert detective tells a criminal by just one glance—not at him, but from him. The criminal eye varies greatly in setting, but not so much in color. Sometimes it is deeply placed in the head, as if it tried to hide, fearing the result of its own involuntary revelations. Sometimes it is bulgy, protrusive like a frog's and heavy lidded. Such eyes, taken in connection with some other signs, denote treachery, lechery, loquacity, mendacity and general cruelty, with just enough cowardice to prevent the criminal from doing murder except insidiously or through others.

Of the criminal eye there are many remarkable anecdotes. The murderer Franceesconi had little about him to indicate the ferocity that ambushed in his breast. His forehead was high and smooth; his beard was plentiful. To most people he rendered himself rather companionable by a certain cheap facetiousness that often masquerades as wit, and on account of this social quality Franceesconi's conceit was tolerated, and his huge egotism did not have its full chance to repel people.

But years before his crime a young girl—afterward the Countess della Rocca—who had never left home and who lacked experience of life, recoiled from him violently when introduced and refused to endure his presence. When questioned why she behaved thus toward one who stood so high socially, she answered, "If that man has not already murdered people, he will do so." This girlish prophecy very soon came true, and when Lombroso inquired by what sign she had foretold she replied: "The eyes. I saw him in his eyes."—Henry Austin in Donahoe's Magazine.

The Farmer's Mission.

A plaster image which commands an extraordinary sale in the country districts of Germany represents society thus:

On the steps of a sort of stairway which ascends to a little level landing and then comes down again are seven human figures. One represents the emperor, with scepter and crown; another, a nobleman bearing a sword; another, a priest in his cassock; another, a helmeted and armed soldier; another, a beggar with staff and pouch, and last of all, at the foot of the ladder, a farmer or peasant carrying a heavy sack of grain.

Upon each of these figures there is a little legend which represents what each character is supposed to be saying.

The emperor—who, by the way, is not the highest placed figure in the group, that honor having been reserved for the Jew—says, "I govern you all."

The nobleman says, "I lord it over you all."

The priest says, "I pray for you all."

The Jew from his commanding position at the "top of the heap" says, "I make money out of you all."

The soldier says, "I protect you all."

The mendicant says, "I beg from you all."

The farmer, sweating under his burden at the foot of everything, murmurs "God's will be done, but I feed all six of you!"—Youth's Companion.

The Desire For Happiness.

There are some stars that we cannot see at all when we look straight at them, but which become visible when we look to one side. So there are things that we cannot get when we try directly for them, but which presently fall into our laps if only we try hard enough for something else. Everybody knows it is that way with happiness. Make it a primary object, and it leads you a doubtful chase, but ignore it in the rational pursuit of something else, and presently you may find it perched unnoticed on your shoulder like a bird whose tail has felt the traditional influence of salt.

So, of course, the very first essential to the achievement of happiness of any durable sort is to rise above the necessity of being happy at all. It may be conducive to this sort of achievement to remember that great spirits in all times have found in their own involuntary discontent a spur to exalted endeavor. Neither Lincoln nor Balzac nor Carlyle was a happy man, but they put the saddle and bridle on their own depression and rode it under whip and spur into immortality. Columbus himself had low spirits, and Socrates and the judicious Hooker both had Xantippes.—Exchange.

WHAT IT COSTS LABOR.

The recent announcement that fifteen thousand loaves of bread were distributed free to the idle hungry workmen of Philadelphia in a day, and that the idle workmen in the little town of Ware, Mass., had lost so far $84,000 in wages, and that thirty-eight families are being helped by the town, calls to mind the condition of the laboring classes in all parts of this country on account of the threats of the democratic platform to unsettle the business and economic policy of the government.

There was estimated to be, at the height of the panic, nine hundred thousand men idle in America, who must have represented from three to four millions of people who had no source of income, or support except savings or assistance from the community in which they lived. This great army of enforced idlers was losing at the least calculation $900,000 a day, or nearly five and a half millions of dollars a week; and in six weeks must have lost nearly thirty-three millions of dollars.

They have not all returned to work yet, and the fact cannot be disguised that the prospect of mills and workshops running full time the coming winter does not at present look encouraging. There is little doubt that this stress of business will cost the working classes in idleness and reduced wages over a hundred millions of dollars before the plane of business prosperity is reached which prevailed when the democratic party began its free trade campaign.

It is a hard experience for the masses, and as an "object lesson" has made an impression which cannot soon be eradicated from the minds of the business men or the working classes.

A NEW AND TIMELY OPPORTUNITY.

There is a prospect of increased trade between the United States and Germany this year on account of the shortness of the crops, the scarcity of fodder, the increased duty of fifty per cent. upon all goods exported from Russia and the recent tariff wrangle between the two countries.

Americans can hardly realize the great scarcity of fodder which in Germany has taken the form of a national calamity. The farmers have been obliged to sell from 10 to 20 per cent. of their stock because they could not get fodder to feed them, beef has fallen to six and eight cents a pound, and it is asserted that the influence of the crop failure will be felt for a long time in all the meat markets and exchanges of the empire.

The American consul general at Frankfort writes: "How seriously the present advance in the grain tariffs will affect Russian exports to Germany will be evident when it is considered that the ordinary German import duty on rye and wheat is five marks for 100 kilograms, equal to 33 cents a bushel. Add to this the present retaliatory increase of 50 per cent., and we have a duty of 48 cents a bushel, or a difference of 15 cents a bushel in favor of the United States. Here, then, is a new and timely opportunity which American producers and exporters will assuredly not fail to study and to improve."

MR. AMES' MILLIONS.

The death of New England's greatest millionaire, Fred L. Ames of Boston, Mass., has called out comment from the press because he did not leave any public bequests, but bequeathed his great estate to his family. The Springfield Union referring to the matter says: "Perhaps it is nobody's business when a man worth thirty-five millions dies and leaves all his wealth to his family, but the public feels that one who has piled up such a fortune is under some obligations to the community which has furnished the conditions under which he has done it. It is probably true that Mr. Ames devoted a portion of his income to public and charitable objects, but he was not conspicuously a public-spirited man. His property may have been invested for the public benefit in a general way. He did not squander his money nor set an offensive example of plutocracy. But he was careful that the usufruct of his millions should return to himself, and he has left his property in such a way that the benefit will still be personal rather than public. Such examples give force to socialistic demands for the more equitable division of property. In some states the law recognizes the fact that a man may leave more than enough for the benefit of his heirs and imposes a tax upon succession for the benefit of the public. In many cases the millions of the rich escape taxation during their life, and it is only just that when death discloses the amount of wealth that has been untaxed the state should take what belongs to it."

WHAT TO EXPECT.

The hearings of the ways and means committee, closed on Wednesday, and although the republican minority tried to have them continued their pleas were disregarded.

Commenting upon the limited time allowed for their hearings The New York Press says: "Without going into details it may safely be stated that considering the short notice and the limited time allowed those representatives of the $5,000,000,000 of capital invested in manufacturing, and the millions of artisans employed, have made the strongest and most dramatic presentation of the case ever laid before a government. In no instance has it been a mere case of profit to manufacturers, but the far more important question of the continuance of the industry. With the wage earner—and his side has been ably laid before the committee—the issue has practically been employment or no employment."

The democratic members of the committee by absenting themselves from the hearings, attempting to discredit honest statements and showing an aversion to consulting the opinion of the people most interested in the proposed changes in the tariff, have confirmed what already has been said about their free trade proclivities and their determination to live up to the Chicago platform which calls a protective tariff "a robber tariff."

The New York Tribune says: "The work of fixing up a tariff bill will be rushed through, and it is expected that it will be reported within a month or five weeks. Its chief features, according to a democrat on the inside, will be the placing of raw materials on the free list and the adoption of ad valorem duties as far as possible."

VOICE OF THE PRESS.

Crisp!

"There is no other side," angrily shouted Speaker Crisp Wednesday, when he strangled the republican minority in the house. Southern election counting has at last gained a foothold in the American congress.—[N. Y. Press.

Estopped!

Ordinarily it is the men who do not attend the caucuses who complain most of what goes wrong in them. Voters who prefer their slippered ease to an evening at the caucus should feel themselves estopped from fault-finding afterward.—[Boston Journal.

No Dinner to Put in It.

Apprehensions of free trade have in reality produced no trade, and no trade in reality produced no work, no work produces no dinner pail—no free trade for us, we prefer the dinner pail well filled, with its big tax, to no dinner pail at all and no dinner to put in it.—[Workingman in Boston Journal.

Discouraging.

The auction sale for less than $1,500,000 of a lot of Amoskeag goods that at current prices were worth over $3,000,000 has given the consumers of the country a good opportunity to secure some cotton goods at low prices, but it is not much of an encouragement to manufacturing.—[Lowell Mail.

Two Hundred!

Connecticut women do not seem anxious to avail themselves of their privilege of voting for school officers. The school election at New Haven on Monday was a very exciting one and the total vote polled was about twice the average, but out of 7,553 votes cast only 200 were thrown by women.—[Boston Journal.

Unhappy!

A gentleman who recently saw Congressman Stevens of the Fifth district says he was far from happy. That seems strange. Stevens is a democratic manufacturer who has made liberal contributions to the democratic campaign fund. He celebrated the coming of democratic prosperity by shutting up his mill. He is now a member of the ways and means committee, and still he isn't happy.—[Worcester Telegram.

Both Cost the Same.

William M. Evarts, the famous lawyer, who has just celebrated his golden wedding on his farm, realized at one time an income of over $50,000 yearly for his practice. His fancy farm at Windsor, Vt., absorbed most of it. It is related of the distinguished lawyer that while entertaining a number of friends at his home one evening he produced several bottles of champagne and a quantity of milk. Turning to his guests he said, without a semblance of humor, "Gentlemen, here is some milk from my farm and here is some wine. You can take your choice—they both cost the same."—[Boston Herald.

"Czarism" Out-Czared.

The extraordinary action of Speaker Crisp Wednesday in forcing on the house, in defiance of the rules and precedent, the report of the committee on rules shows the desperate tactics to which the democratic majority is ready to resort to gain partisan ends. The object of the report is to hasten the repeal of the federal elections law by preventing any motions, no matter how proper or parliamentary, from being entertained pending a call for reports from committees. In carrying out this programme Speaker Crisp not only deliberately ignored republican leaders like Reed and Burrows, but arbitrarily and repeatedly refused to entertain motions and appeals that chanced to stand in the way of his immediate purpose. This high handed abuse of power is without parallel in the records of congress.—[N. Y. Press.

Of Connecticut Stock, Anyhow.

The father of the new associate justice of the United States supreme court was the Rev. Dr. William H. Hornblower, for twenty-seven years pastor of a Presbyterian church in Patterson, N. J. His mother, as Mr. H. E. Mather informs "The Courant," was, before her marriage, Miss Matilda Butler of Suffield, this state. Her parents were Asa and Ann Butler, at one time Hartford people and members of our Center church, which they joined in 1808. They removed to Suffield in 1821, and Asa died there in 1849, aged 64 years. The old Butler house in [illegible] is now the residence of Mr. L. P. Bissell. The new associate justice is a grandson, on the father's side, of the late Chief Justice Joseph C. Hornblower of New Jersey. MYSTERIES!

The Nervous System the Seat of Life and Mind. Recent Wonderful Discoveries.

No mystery has ever compared with that of human life. It has been the leading subject of professional research and study in all ages. But notwithstanding this fact it is not generally known that the seat of life is located in the upper part of the spinal cord, near the base of the brain, and so sensitive is this portion of the nervous system that even the prick of a needle will cause instant death.

Recent discoveries have demonstrated that all the organs of the body are under the control of the nerve centers, located in or near the base of the brain, and that when these are deranged the organs which they supply with nerve fluid are also deranged. When it is remembered that a serious injury to the spinal cord will cause paralysis of the body below the injured point, because the nerve force is prevented by the injury from reaching the paralyzed portion, it will be understood how the derangement of the nerve centers will cause the derangement of the various organs which they supply with nerve force.

Two-thirds of chronic diseases are due to the imperfect action of the nerve centers at the base of the brain, not from a derangement primarily originating in the organ itself. The great mistake of physicians in treating these diseases is that they treat the organ rather than the nerve centers which are the cause of the trouble.

DR. FRANKLIN MILES, the celebrated specialist, has profoundly studied this subject for over 20 years, and has made many important discoveries in connection with it, chief among them being the facts contained in the above statement, and that ordinary methods of treatment are wrong. All headache, dizziness, dullness, confusion, pressure, blues, mania, melancholy, insanity, epilepsy, St. Vitus dance, etc., are nervous diseases no matter how caused. The wonderful success of Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is due to the fact that it is based on the foregoing principal.

DR. MILES' RESTORATIVE NERVINE is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent direct by Dr. Miles' Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid. It contains neither opiates nor dangerous drugs.

POTTER A FREE MAN.

Judge Putnam Ordered a Verdict in His Favor.

ALL OF HIS CASES DISPOSED OF.

Acts Could Not Be Connected With Potter Under Court's Ruling.

BOSTON, Sept. 21.—"Court" came in today in the Potter case at 10:30 o'clock, although adjournment was to 10 o'clock. There was talk about the corridors before court was opened that something was to drop, and that the government was feeling shaky, but nothing out of the ordinary transpired when Judge Putnam had taken his seat, and Mr. Hoar was told to go on with his case. There was a noticeable absence of the huge pile of law books on both the desks of the counsel for the prosecution and the defense, and everything bore the appearance of an intention to settle down to an examination of witnesses.

Lyman C. Little, a tall, slim young man, in light suit and red necktie, formerly with the note teller at the Maverick National bank, was the first witness, and he testified as to the manner of counting up cash at the Maverick bank. Cross-examined, he said that the counting was done by the note teller and his assistant. Mr. Potter was never seen about that part of the bank.

Mr. Work's Testimony.

Joseph W. Work was then recalled and testified: "I will modify my statement made the other day about the way to make the reserve 'look better,' by saying that in that it can also be done by borrowing money, selling securities or holding out New York checks. In May, 1894, I showed Mr. Potter a slip showing state of the reserve." The witness was then questioned at great length, his examination and the sparring of counsel occupying all the time up to the recess at 1:15 o'clock.

When the jury in the Potter case came in this afternoon Judge Putnam said that he had excluded the evidence offered by the government because the proof thus far did not connect the orders of the cashier to the note teller with the defendant and because the government did not offer to introduce any more evidence to connect them.

District Attorney Gives Up.

Mr. Hoar said that when the United States began the case it was supposed that the connection of Potter with the particular acts alleged could be made, but in the judgment of the United States it would be impossible to show that connection within the limits laid down by the court. The government therefore would submit to any verdict the court would render.

Judge Putnam then complimented the district attorney and said that he had conducted the case ably, but that he could not supply evidence or make law. He then ordered a verdict for the defendant and the jury so returned it. Mr. Potter walked out a free man. This disposes of all the cases against Asa P. Potter.

CAUTIOUS SPAIN.

Declares a Quarantine Against Hamburg and Jersey City.

MADRID, Sept. 21.—The Spanish government has declared a quarantine against the port of Hamburg, Germany, and Hull, Eng., in consequence of the prevalence of cholera at those places. It has also declared Jersey City, U. S., to be infected, and all vessels that left that city subsequent to Aug. 31 for Spanish ports will be quarantined upon arrival.

The action of the government in respect to Jersey City is due to the information furnished by the Spanish consul at New York of the existence of a choleraic disorder in Jersey City. Official information also having reached the government of the existence of yellow fever at Tampa, Fla., all vessels that have left the port since Aug. 20 bound for Spanish ports have been quarantined.

WILL CLOSE OCT. 31.

End of the Great Chicago Exposition Fixed by the Directory.

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—A special from Chicago says: The executive committee of the World's fair directory met last night and decided to promptly close Oct. 31. This practically settles all talk of extension.

Another 20 per cent was ordered paid on the bonded debt, making a total of 20 per cent of the $4,500,000 now ordered paid. The committee estimates that it will have $800,000 surplus Nov. 1, after payment of the bonded and floating debt. This will be applied on the $11,000,000 stock and bonds of the city of Chicago.

WILL RESUME WORK.

Whittenton Mills Will Start Up but With Reduced Wages.

TAUNTON, Mass., Sept. 21.—Notices have been posted in Whittenton, ward 8 of this city, that the Whittenton Manufacturing company will resume work Monday morning, Sept. 25, after a shutdown of five weeks. The carding, spinning and dyeing departments will start Monday, and the other departments Tuesday, Sept. 26. Appended to this notice is the statement that there will be a reduction of wages in all departments, the exact extent of which is not at present known, but which will probably amount to about 8 per cent.

This concern gave employment to about 1200 persons, and the hands constitute a great part of the population in the Eighth ward. The reduction will be accepted gladly by the operatives, who have been bearing all manner of rumors since the establishment shut down and who are glad to get work on any terms. The cut of wages was deemed by the management preferable to discharging a portion of the help.

SOME STATE PLACES.

Governor Russell Sends in a Large Batch of Nominations.

BOSTON, Sept. 21.—At a meeting of the governor and council the governor sent in the following nominations:

Henry Stone of South Boston, trustee of the Massachusetts School and Perkins Institution for the Blind, vice John S. Dwight, deceased.

Arthur M. Alger of Taunton, to be register of probate for Bristol county, vice Galligan deceased.

Freeman H. Butler of Lowell, to the board of registration in pharmacy (re-appointment).

Charles P. Lyman of Boston, to be cattle commissioner (re-appointment.)

William Mosley Fitch of Charleston, S. C., and George H. Corey of New York, to be commissioners of deeds for Massachusetts. Five justices of the peace were nominated.

CHOLERA AT HAMBURG.

People Still Drinking Contaminated Water—Recent Deaths Reported.

LONDON, Sept. 21.—The Hamburg correspondent of the Times comments severely upon the laxity shown by the officials of that city in hiding for four days the fact that the water there was contaminated. Even now, he says, nothing is being done to prevent the use of the water. Scores of people were served yesterday afternoon in the largest cafe in the city with glasses of contaminated water.

During the last two weeks 102 new cases of cholera and 41 deaths from the disease have been reported in Bilbao, says a dispatch from Madrid. The cabinet has ordered that the most stringent measures be taken for the sanitation of goods and passengers arriving at or leaving the city.

BEFORE GRAND JURY.

Failure of Manchester Bank Being Investigated—Sensations Expected.

NASHUA, N. H., Sept. 21.—Receiver W. A. Heard of the Bank of the Commonwealth, Manchester, was summoned before the grand jury of the supreme court here this morning in relation to the alleged embezzlements. It is stated that there will be several indictments found, including more than the missing Charles F. Morrill.

Attorney-general E. G. Eastman came here this morning to press the cases before the jury. Sensational developments are expected when the indictments are read next Monday. The committee of the People's Fire Insurance company to secure Morrill's arrest is to obtain an indictment against him.

THE OLIVE BRANCH.

Emperor William Offers Bismarck an Imperial Castle.

BERLIN, Sept. 21.—It is stated Emperor William, upon hearing of Prince Bismarck's illness, sent a dispatch to the ex-chancellor from Guens, expressing his sympathy and offering him one of the imperial castles for a residence in view of the unfavorable climatic conditions in Friedrichsruh.

Prince Bismarck it is said, sent a long telegram in response in which he cordially thanked the emperor for his offer, but said he was obliged to decline it, as his physician was opposed to his changing his residence.

UNHAPPY ARGENTINA.

Alarming Reports Concerning the Political Situation There.

BUENOS AYRES, Sept. 21.—Alarming reports are being received regarding the political situation. The cabinet held a protracted sitting yesterday, at which the existing state of affairs was earnestly discussed, but it is not known whether any new measures were decided upon. The state of siege is being vigorously enforced.

PLUCKY TRAINMEN

Defeat Robbers Who Attack Their Express Car.

DESPERATE BATTLE ON THE RAIL.

Centralia, Ill., the Scene of Latest Attempt.

[illegible] Orleans limited train on the Illinois Central road was held up shortly after 11 o'clock last evening, just outside this city, and in the battle which followed between the three robbers and the train hands, one of the robbers was mortally wounded, and three of the train crew were badly hurt. The thieves got nothing in the way of booty, and the inhabitants of this place are on the hunt for the two daring thieves who got away.

The train held up left Chicago late in the afternoon and reached this city at 11:05 o'clock last night. Its stop was very short, but in that time three men, very heavily armed, and carrying tools, which later came into play, boarded the front end of the express car. The lights of Centralia's streets had hardly disappeared from view and engineer Young had hardly pulled open wide the throttle, when both fireman McDowell and the engineer heard a noise.

On the Tender Behind Them.

Both turned in alarm. Their fears were realized, for staring them in the face were two big revolvers. "Keep your mouths shut and stop the machine or we'll shoot," they cried. The engineer and firemen were not made of the stuff that flinches at train robbers, and were not even daunted by the recollection of the affair on the Lake Shore only a short time ago. Both sprang at the robbers. There was a clear track ahead.

The two railroad men had reached the foot of the coal heap when two sheets of fire flashed in their faces and both fell wounded on the platform connecting cab and tender. One of the masked robbers sprang over the forms of the bleeding men, and, putting his hand on the lever, slowed up the train. In a moment it stopped. Around the cars were the shadows of a farming country hedged by a few tall trees. In the coaches the passengers were all asleep, oblivious of

The Plight of Their Train.

When the train had been stopped one of the robbers ran back to the coaches and, revolver in hand, stood guard over baggage master Armstrong and brakeman Stacey. The two other thieves climbed to the top of the express car, in which were the messenger of the American Express company and conductor Coats. They were just beginning to get curious as to the stopping of the train, when they heard a furious pounding on the express car door. "Open the door, or we'll blow you up," they heard a man say.

Their reply was a shot from a revolver. This was followed by another and another. The men outside the car took part in the fusilade. The attack took a new turn. The men in the car had emptied their revolvers, and were reloading them. In this lull the robbers tried a novel plan, for which they had been prepared.

They had grappling hooks. These they fastened on the top of the express car, and, with ropes, lowered themselves to the top of the door. This was done to avoid being a target for the bullets that soon commenced to pour through the sides of the coach from the inside.

The Railroad Men Were Aiming Low

while serenely above them, the two robbers were wielding a heavy sledge. The door did not withstand the assault, and soon an opening large enough for the robbers to enter showed itself. Through this they leaped, and, revolvers in hand, faced the conductor and messenger both similarly equipped.

The messenger and conductor were plucky, and, partly barricaded by boxes and packages, fired at the robbers as fast as they could shoot. The thieves fired too, but they were at a disadvantage. During the shooting the conductor received a slight pistol wound in the hand. Neither side seemed to be able to conquer, when help came to the railroad employes. The promiscuous shooting had aroused the passengers, and they, terrified, had been busy concealing their valuables.

On the train was one P. J. Sanders, who came to the rescue of the conductor and messenger.

Armed With a Shotgun.

He attacked the robbers from the rear, and, though in turn attacked by the third robber, managed to fatally shoot one of them in the express car through the body. The others seeing their companion fall bleeding, took to their heels and got away through the trees and fields.

One of the train hands hurried back to Centralia with the news of the robbery, and the town was aroused. In half an hour posses of men were beating the country near the place where the train was held up in a hunt for the fugitives. The trail was hot and they had good hope and splendid prospect of catching the men this morning. It is not known how much money was in the express messenger's care, but it is said that the amount would exceed $50,000.

THE JESTER.

That Bread Rimmed Hat.

The autumn days are here again.
From stately trees and small
The faded leaves drop one by one.
The nuts begin to fall.
The summer girl will call a halt
To trysting in the shade,
And roasted chestnuts soothe the taste
For limes and lemonade.
The man behind the office desk
Will sigh untold relief,
His shiny pate will have respite
From flies a season brief.
Yet, though the fleecy clouds adorn
A cool September sky,
We'll drop a tear to summer in
Her green robe going by.
For she's taking them away with her,
That treasured baseball bat,
Lawn tennis, racket, sunset skies
And That Bread
Rimmed
Hat.

THE STOCK MARKET.

Dealings in Leading Securities in Boston and New York.

BOSTON, Sept. 21.—In the outside market call money is quoted at 5 to 15 per cent, and time money is nominally 6 per cent.

London this morning came just about as our close, except for Louisville and Nashville, which was ½ down. Its purchases were light, however, so that it had little influence on the market here. The "Washington special" has now become as much of a necessity to every broker's office as it is to the up-to-date newspaper establishment. Indeed, it is the principal instrument at the moment with which to manipulate prices. Speculation, however, has settled into an effort to keep quotations just about where they are until something happens. In doing this one faction will push them up a peg or two in the afternoon and the other will as promptly depress them in the morning.

This fact appeared in the generally weak opening today. Sugar Refining continued the basis of operations, opening ½ down at 83¾ for the common and ½ down for the preferred at 83¾. Atchison, too, showed considerable early activity. The opening at 20 was ¼ off, but, with the announcement of the decrease of $170,000 in earnings for the second week of the month, another ¼ was dropped.

New England is still being picked up on the probable entrance of the company into New York city. Starting off a fraction lower at 26¼, it rallied to 26¾, declining subsequently to 25¾. New York, New Haven and Hartford dropped a couple of points to 185, while Burlington and Quincy and Union Pacific were both fractionally [illegible]

A Hartford boot-black who polished shoes at the military encampment in Niantic, taking his pay in empty bottles, obtained 2,000 which he sold for half a cent each. Last year he carried away 1,200, selling them for a cent apiece.

The New London Telegraph says: Forty-eight hundred tons of coal were towed up the river Wednesday. The Emily A. Birdsall with 200 tons was towed to Allyn's Point, and barges aggregating 4,600 tons were towed to Norwich.

A Green Hill correspondent of the Westerly Sun says: Mr. Amos Browning of Norwich, Conn., is stopping a few days with Mr. Robert Browning. He is getting information concerning the Browning family, of which he is writing a history.

A Voluntown correspondent hears that the mail route from Glasgo to Ashwillet will be discontinued, and that the mail will be driven from Ashwillet to Preston City. It is said to be a shorter route and a much better road. The road from Glasgo to Ashwillet is not very thickly settled.

Three Barrels of Suckers.

Suckers have struck on in the Shetucket river, and their number almost covers the surface of the stream. Thursday George Kingsley, the veteran fisherman, dragged three barrels of the fish ashore in his seine. They find a ready market among the Hebrew inhabitants, who prize their flesh.

Why Incarcerated in Norwich.

Edgar Gardner of North Stonington, who unmercifully beat a child belonging in that place, and was sentenced to thirty days in jail, was taken to the Norwich jail Thursday morning by Sheriff Hawkins.

The sheriff stated that it has been the custom ever since his incumbency of the office to put the prisoners arrested in the county in the jail nearest the town where they resided when arrested.

Mr. Burnett's Body Arrives.

Mr. M. A. Barber arrived in Norwich on the 6 o'clock train last evening with the remains of W. H. Burnett in a sealed casket, which was placed in Undertaker Allen's rooms.

Five affidavits have been secured by M. A. Barber, testifying to the witnessing of the boat and its occupants in the sound during the storm, one being from a captain who was staying at the North Dumpling lighthouse. The affidavits were necessary in order to secure the insurance which Mr. Burnett carried.

The body was in such bad condition that identification was possible only by means of the articles on it. The insurance policy was in the pocket.

Watch Hill Thief Captured.

The oxidized silver clock that was stolen from James Emott's cottage, Watch Hill, has been recovered, and it is in the custody of the Westerly police. B. W. Coon has been working on the case, and arrested Howard Potter, alias "Chicken," a colored resident of Westerly. The man was locked upon his arrest, and Wednesday morning was arraigned before Judge Whipple in the district court. He pleaded not guilty, and the hearing in the case was continued to Sept. 29. Pending the trial, he has been committed to the Kingston jail.

Fatal to the Hen Tribe.

A mysterious disease has made its appearance among domestic fowls in the western part of the state and from all accounts has worked disastrous results. A singular circumstance in connection with the outbreak of the disease is that a similar malady worked havoc among poultry just ten years ago.

At that time the ailment wiped out thousands of fine chickens and geese in Connecticut. No explanation of the cause which produced the disease has ever been given. It made its reappearance a little over two weeks ago and in that comparatively short period has produced extensive mortality among the feathered tribe

Novel Theatrical Features.

"One of the most enjoyable performances imaginable is to be seen this week at the Standard Theater. The features introduced by Manager Speck on behalf of the house are unique, while the name of the play, "A Society Tramp," gives no inkling of the feast of good things which is provided. Rarely is a more clever or musically accomplished company seen than this one.

Its members are all artists, and cannot only sing, but act too. Their songs are introduced during the play without breaking the thread which binds the whole, and the singers are to be commended for the good natured way in which they respond to encores."—[Philadelphia Daily Item.

The Golden Wedding.

The second scene of the second act in "The Golden Wedding" is devoted to a burlesque called "The Gorillas" and supposed to have been written by Mrs. Comstock, the widow of the play. ALLEGED FEMALE FIREBUG.

Miss Jenner of Scotland Bound Over to the Superior Court.

Miss Mary Jenner of Scotland was yesterday bound over to the superior court in Willimantic under bonds of $1,000 charged with burglary and arson. The arrest of Miss Jenner was an accident Wednesday afternoon Deputy Sheriff Clark went to Scotland to search for liquor which he thought was being sold illegally. At Miss Jenner's house he found a large number of articles which had been stolen a few days ago from the house of Miss Mary E. Beers. While Miss Beers was absent from home some one broke in, and, after ransacking it thoroughly, set the house on fire in several places. The fire did damage estimated at about $200 and then burned out. Miss Jenner denies her guilt, and says the goods were placed in her house by an enemy.

The bride received a large number of magnificent gifts that evidenced her popularity. Mr Frank Farrel presided at the organ.

Second Day of the Fair—Interesting Races—1,600 Blue Ribboners Enlist with Murphy—Blue Wheelmen.

Thursday was the second day of the fair, and a crowd larger than that of Wednesday was in attendance.

The exhibition of colts in the morning was a fine one and is rarely excelled.

Soon after the dinner hour the unfinished race in the 2 27 class was trotted, and decided in the fifth heat, as Rockwell Boy, owned by Samuel Rockwell of Stafford Springs, took the heat in 2 37¾.

A little difficulty was had in scoring, but both races were full of interest and trotted squarely. The principal interest for today's races are centered in the free-for-all class

Over 1,600 persons had taken the blue ribbon at the Murphy meetings up to Thursday night. The Opera house is crowded nightly and Mr. Murphy never fails to keep the close attention of his hearers by his wit and good natured way.

Some of the events in the bicycle races Wednesday might have seemed slow to some, but with Hinman and Newton, the two best riders in the T. C. C. both injured and out of the race, the boys felt rather blue and discouraged.

It certainly looks as though the clouds which have hung over this city for the past five weeks would rapidly pass away. FEARFUL ACCIDENT ON THE WABASH

A West-Bound Vestibule Express Train Wrecked.

ELEVEN LIVES LOST.

Accident Due to a Mistake Made by a Freight Brakeman.

KINGSBURY, Ind., Sept. 22.—Eleven persons lost their lives in a collision between a freight train and the Toronto and Montreal express on the Wabash railroad at this station at 5 30 o'clock this morning.

A score of others are injured, many of whom will die.

The freight was on a siding west of the depot and was bound east.

The first section of the express train passed by on the main track at 5 25 a. m. It is said that the brakeman, supposing that the freight train would not move, ran back to open the switch.

Before the cars had begun to move, the second section of the fast express came west at the rate of 55 miles an hour, and before the switchman could turn the switch back, dashed into the side track and collided with the freight train.

News of the accident was received at the headquarters of this division of the road at 6 o'clock and Division Superintendent Gould and Trainmaster C. A. Timewell were brought to the scene with a wrecking crew. When they arrived, however, the citizens of Kingsbury had carried away the dead and injured who could be reached. The Masonic hall was turned into a morgue and drays and farming wagons were kept busy for two hours hauling the dead and wounded to the village, a mile distant from the depot, where medical help and nurses were summoned.

There were two sleepers on the train, the Marion and the Kansas City. The former escaped injury, but the front half of the Kansas City was converted into kindling wood by the day coach, which smashed into it. Two bodies were taken from the sleeper, those of Harry French of London, Eng., and Charles Birbes of San Francisco. The smoking car was twisted into a heap of splinters, and few of the passengers escaped death or injury. The day coach which followed was also entirely wrecked by being hurled against the [illegible] Kansas City.

Division Superintendent Gould admitted that the freight brakeman, Herbert Thompson, was to blame for the accident. He turned the switch in the face of the express and let it go on the side track, where the freight train was standing.

"How he could make such a mistake," said Mr. Gould, "I cannot understand. The first section had gotten by all right. Then he ran back to the switch, and, in spite of the fact that the other section was in sight he opened the switch, for the purpose, I suppose, of letting his own train out. The express then ran on to the side track, and as the freight engine was but a short distance from the switch rails, there was no time to stop. The sections were twelve miles apart. Brakeman Thompson was a trusted man and possessed of more than the average intelligence. He is not in custody, but will be on hand at the inquest."

John Bowie Sentenced for Assaulting the Salvation Army.

PROVIDENCE, Sept. 22.—John Bowie, a few nights ago, made an attack upon Walter McKenzie, the drummer boy of the Salvation Army of Christian hill. The army was marching down High street at the time, and a crowd of hoodlums was in the streets ready for a hostile encounter with the procession.

Annie Belcher, a tambourine player, was hit on the back with a brickbat, and Bowie jumped on McKenzie and hit him under the chin. His drum was kicked into the gutter and blood flowed from the drummer boy's jaw.

Bowie had no defence when arrested by the police, and he pleaded guilty today to an assault and was sent down to Cranston for two months.

The Worcester Races.

WORCESTER, Mass., Sept. 22.—Four races were settled in straight heats at the fair grounds this afternoon, and in all but one of them the favorite won. The exception was the 2 30 pace, in which Rhea was picked to win, but she was not in it with Prince Alcyon. The feature of the day was the work of Sylvester K, who won the unfinished 2 24 trot in two heats, and then came out an hour later and won the 2.21 trot from a field of fresh horses.

The characteristic of the Cyclopean style was in its massiveness. The walls were composed of enormous blocks without cement.

Children's Day at Rhode Island State Fair—The Races.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Sept. 22.—This was children's day at the state fair, and was marked by a large attendance. It was a big day from the horsemen's point of view, some fast time being made. In the 2.40 trot, Belihal, belonging to J. E. Turner, of Ambler, Pa., won in straight heats—first in 2 15¼. This was remarkably fast for the class, but the entry list closed last spring and most of the horses have been campaigning all summer. Tom Judge was second and Dolly O third.

In the 2 20 trot Edith H. took the two heats with ease in 2 15¾ and 2 16. Thetis second, Jessie Shire's dam third.

W. A. Bemm's Nedwic, of Springfield, won the 2.15 stake, pace, in 2.12 and 2.14¾. Locmis' Merry Legs of Boston second, Hadley's Lady Wilkis of Somerville third.

In the 2 18 trot Mutual Wilkes won in straight heats, making the fastest mile of the week, 2.12. Thrush was second, Lightning third.

Tom Jacobs was first in the 2 16 trot, special.

The Consolidated Road Sued.

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 22.—Two suits for damages, aggregating $20,000, were brought against the New York, New Haven & Hartford road today by Attorney H G Newton in behalf of Miss Rose E. Bailey and the heirs of the late James G. Bailey. James G. Bailey was killed while crossing the Consolidated track at East Wallingford, March 6, and his daughter, Miss Rose E Bailey, was severely injured. The first suit is in behalf of Miss Rose E. Bailey, and $15,000 is asked; in the other $5,000 damage is claimed. The papers were served on Secretary W. D. Bishop by Sheriff Tomlinson.

The sheriff also served the papers in the suit brought by L Candee & Co., claim $10,000, for goods lost by the big fire in the freight yards, making suits in which $30,000 is claimed.

The Gold Bullion Thief Arraigned.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 22.—Henry S. Cochran, the gold bullion embezzler, was again arraigned before United States Commissioner Bell Thursday morning. The prisoner's counsel, ex-Assistant District Attorney James M. Beck, waived a hearing, and Cochran was held in $27,500 bail for appearance at the United States district court on November 20. In default of bail he was taken to Moyamensing prison. Attorney Beck said he would have a defense, and perhaps a vindication for his client, but that it would be impossible to have an impartial hearing at this time.

Mayor Sargent, of New Haven, Has All the Money Needed.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 22.—Mayor Sargent has closed his municipal bank. For the past week there has not been any additional money deposited by citizens, but he has already received about $85,000.

He thinks this will be ample, in view of the fact that the taxes are now nearly due. Originally he asked for $100,000, thinking that he would be able to get what he needed if he asked for a big sum. He is thoroughly satisfied.

[illegible]

HARTFORD, Sept. 22.—Fred Porch and Sidney E. Wandle, who are in jail charged with the murder of John Crowley at Bristol refused to talk today.

They will be taken to Bristol tomorrow morning for a hearing before a justice unless they are held for murder in the first degree. The men take the matter very coolly.

Choked to Death by a Peach Pit.

TRENTON, N. J., Sept. 22.—Mrs. Sarah Gasmigne, wife of a carpenter, died in a drug store Thursday, suffocated by a peach pit that lodged in her throat. She was on her way to a physician to have the stone removed when she had a choking spell on a street car. She stepped from the car to go into the drug store, but fainted on the pavement and died three minutes later. She swallowed the stone last night, but she suffered no inconvenience during the night.

Hoboken Man Bitten by a Mosquito with Serious Results.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—Adolph Dehmke, who lives in Hoboken and is about 50 years of age, was bitten by a mosquito recently. The bite proved irritating at the time, and it bothered him all night.

A day or two after Dehmke began to feel sharp pains shooting through his leg. The trouble grew worse, and soon symptoms of blood poisoning were developed.

It is now a question of whether his life can be saved, and the doctors advise the amputation of the man's leg.

From Rio Janeiro.

PARIS, Sept. 22.—The Brazilian minister in this city has received the following dispatch from Rio Janeiro timed 5 p. m. yesterday: "Sedition confined to part of squadron. All the states without exception agree with President Peixoto regarding the necessity of repressing the sedition. The seditious vessels are in the bay and are deprived of power of movement. They can neither effect a landing of their men nor leave the bay owing to the fire from the fortresses. The cruiser Republica, manned by rebels, succeeded in escaping, but has been repulsed at Santos."

New Principal for Hartford High School.

HARTFORD, Conn., Sept. 22.—It is stated this afternoon that the high school committee have decided to appoint Prof. Luther of Trinity college as principal of the high school, in place of Joseph Hall, who is expected to resign in a short time. Mr. Hall has been principal many years, but his advanced age and failing health have caused the committee to seek a younger man.

The purchases thus far this month aggregate 1,510,000 ounces.

THE RESPONSIBILITY FIXED.

Railway Commissioners Attach the Blame for Chester Accident.

DANIEL BELLVILLE,

Foreman of the Workmen in Charge, Guilty of Carelessness.

BOSTON, Sept. 22.—The railway commissioners this afternoon brought in their finding, in attaching the blame for the Chester accident on the B. & A. road. They find that the responsibility for the disaster rests upon Daniel Bellville, the foreman who had the charge and direction of the work and this day allowed the work to be done poorly and the bridge to be left in an utterly unsafe condition, neglecting to warn the coming train; that no blame attaches to the conductor, engineer or other trainmen of the wrecked train; that the speed of the train was not the cause or contributed to the collapse of the bridge; that the contract made by the president of the railway company with the proprietor of the R. F. Hawkins Iron works, under which the work on this and other bridges was done, was for the best of workmen and best of work. The original responsibility for the accident must rest upon the railway company for not having a competent supervisor to see that there was no chance of carelessness on the part of workmen or foremen.

THE WILLIMANTIC FAIR.

The Closing Day [illegible]—Murphy Speaks.

WILLIMANTIC, Sept. 22.—The Willimantic fair closed today. The races were the best of the week. "Head of Warenoke," owned by G. W. Rich of Manchester, and driven by Allen Rich of Willimantic taking first money in the 2.28 class and Gossip, Jr., owned by E. Bodewin of Hartford, first money in the free for all class.

Following are the summaries:

Time, 2.25¼, 2.25½, 2.[illegible], 2.25¼, 2.26¼.

FREE-FOR-ALL CLASS.

Gossip, Jr., b. g., E. Bodewin, Hartford	1	1	1
Rockwell [illegible], b. g., E. Rockwell, Stafford Springs	2	2	2

During the afternoon the usual exhibitions by trained steers, ponies and trotting dogs, slack wire and trapeze artists were given.

At 3 30 Mr. G. Dimock introduced Thomas E. Murphy, who talked about ten minutes. Mr. Murphy said he liked to attend fairs and see fairs, especially this one, as it gave the people a chance to see what could be raised and grown. He said that this vicinity was noted for its large growth of potatoes, and that he being a Murphy, made it synonymous. His story about the parson who asked all of the people who wanted to go to heaven to stand up brought out the cold fact that there was one person in the audience who did not arise, and upon being asked why he did not stand up with the rest replied that he was a little particular as to the kind of a crowd he stood up with. He looked the crowd over and said it was an evenly balanced crowd, and that they could judge a good horse race, as he thought those being trotted were very good.

His allusion to drinking was well pointed when he said a man could not be under the influence of liquor and be a good judge of a horse race.

One thing noticeable at the fair this year was the scarcity of fakirs. Captain Hillhouse was on hand all the while with an efficient police force and good order was maintained throughout.

Mascot Lowers a Record.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 22.—The event of the day at Homewood park was the free-for-all class pacing. Mascot appeared, this being the first time he has figured in a race since he was foundered in the West. He not only won the event with surprising ease, but lowered the track record, which he made last July, from 2 08¾ to 2.08½. This performance was accomplished in the first heat, in which he made three bad breaks. The mile by quarters was 32, 1 03¼, 1 36¾ and 2 08½. The champion was not in the least fatigued after his work.

Mark Sirus won the 2 14 class trotting, after Idolf had taken the first heat, with little trouble. Curry claimed he would have taken second money in the free-for-all race had not Manley deliberately fouled him at the first turn in the last heat, but the judges would not consider his claims.

Limited Express Wrecked on the Queen & Crescent.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Sept. 22.—At 1 o'clock this morning, 19 miles north of Birmingham, the limited express train No. 1 on the Queen & Crescent route was wrecked by unknown persons removing a rail from the track. The engine, baggage car and mail cars were demolished.

Engineer Frawley, Fireman Walts, Postal Clerk Stockton, Flagman Bailey and Porter Howell were all badly hurt. Two hundred passengers were aboard but none were hurt, as the cars did not turn over. There is no clue to the wreckers, but bloodhounds have been put on the trail.

IN CONGRESS.

The Senate.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—Mr. Allen, (Pop. Neb.) introduced a bill for the coinage of silver money, and it was, at his request, laid on the table for the present. It provides that the unit of value shall be the dollar of 412½ grains of silver, or 25 8.10 parts of gold; and such dollars shall be legal tender for all debts, public and private. Any owner of silver bullion may deposit in any mint and have it coined into standard silver dollars for his benefit, less 20 per cent. seigniorage, which is to be coined and covered into the treasury. It also repeals the Sherman act.

The cloture resolution offered yesterday by Mr. Platt (rep.), of Connecticut, was laid before the senate.

Mr. Wolcott and Mr Teller both spoke upon the resolution, after which it went over till tomorrow.

The repeal bill was taken up, and Mr. George (dem.) of Mississippi, continued the speech against it which he began on Wednesday.

Still No News of the Alvo.

PANAMA, via GALVESTON, Sept. 22.—There is no news at any Colombian port concerning the missing steamer Alvo of the Atlas line. The rumors as to her fate are based on pure surmise. Many persons here are exceedingly anxious to learn what has become of friends who sailed on the Alvo, and are looking eagerly to New York as the only source of news.

Lynched for Killing a Soldier.

HENNESSEY, O. T., Sept. 22.—The body of a young man was found hanging to a tree on Skeleton river yesterday afternoon. A placard on his breast read: "Death to the man who cuts this body down." Inquiry made among the settlers in the vicinity shows that the young man had a fight with a soldier, whom he killed, and that the soldiers lynched him.

Suicide or Murder?

BRIDGETON, N. J., Sept. 22.—There is considerable excitement here over the discovery today of the dead body of Mrs. Bailey in the woods at Baileytown. The woman's throat was cut from ear to ear. It is either a case of suicide or murder. Mrs Bailey was a widow and well known in Baileytown, the latter place being named after her family.

The Alert Encounters a Typhoon.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 22.—The United States ship Alert, which has arrived from Yokohama, reports encountering a typhoon when two days out. She was obliged to jettison fifty tons of coal which was on her deck. Subsequently she ran short of fuel and sailed into port. The Alert brings the news that Admiral Irwin is the most popular of American admirals ever on the Asiatic station.

Burglars at Thompsonville.

THOMPSONVILLE, Sept. 22.—Burglars last night broke into Maddock's fish market, Beahler's saloon and Hildrich's store. Not much cash was secured, but they helped themselves to eatables, cigars and drinks. They made their escape. No arrests have been made, but local parties are suspected.

PUTNAM.

Superior Court—The Elopement Case—Various Matters.

Before Judge Wheeler in the superior court, Friday morning, after being in session two hours, the jury rendered a verdict in the Canterbury-Waldo suit, that the defendant pay the town of Canterbury $250 damages and costs. The case has been on trial since Tuesday morning.

About two years ago Charles E. Waldo and John H. Peck contracted with the town of Canterbury to keep the roads in good condition. They were to receive $1,000 a year. Upon investigation the town refused to pay the money, claiming that the work was not done as agreed. A suit was then brought against the town, and at the trial in Norwich before Judge Crump a verdict was rendered against the town on the ground that the contractors had done the work satisfactory to the selectmen. The town then brought a suit against Elderkin Waldo, one of the selectmen. Evidence was produced by the town to show that the contractors were sons of the two selectmen. Attorneys Searles and Hunter appeared for the plaintiff and Jennings, of Norwich, for the defendant.

After this case had been disposed of, the case of Evans & Company, of Worcester, against Mrs Juliet Wade, of East Killingly, was called. The plaintiffs sue for breach of contract. The jury disagreed, after being out nearly an hour. Potter for the plaintiff, Shumway for the defendant.

Court was then adjourned till Monday morning.

More facts have been learned in the Holland-Wood elopement case. It was stated Friday that about two weeks ago Holland suggested to one of his female operatives that she might go with him to Florida. The girl refused, and he then asked Miss Wood, who entertained the proposal.

Miss Bertha Hammond is the guest of friends in Brooklyn, N. Y.

Mrs. T. P. Botham is visiting her daughter, Miss Anna Wade, Newton Center, Mass.

The new Boston store is open. It is a model of elegance and convenience.

CLAIM OF ABATEMENT OF TAXES

To Be Forwarded to Washington, Says Collector Hutchinson.

COMPTROLLER ECKLES' RULING.

No Trouble Expected Over the Checks Issued for Pay Rolls.

HARTFORD, Conn., Sept. 22.—Collector Hutchinson says today that he anticipates no trouble between the pay roll check signers and the government.

A claim of abatement of the tax, he said, would be forwarded to Washington, on the ground that the checks were issued with the supposition that they were not taxable. This supposition was based on the ruling of Comptroller Eckles, whose opinion was that they would not be taxable.

To Hold Every Inch of Ground at Any Cost.

BUENOS AYRES, Sept. 22.—The Tucuman insurgents in Santiago del Estero are attacking the government troops where opportunity offers. The president has ordered the governors of Santiago del Estero and Tucuman to fight for every inch of ground and to hold out at any cost till the arrival of Gen. Pellegrini.

New Haven's Board of Education in a Quandary.

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 22.—The new board of education is in a quandary. At the annual school district election Tuesday the town voted to employ only union laborers on the new normal school building and to accept only bids from New Haven contractors.

This was so much like socialism that Mrs. Lucy Boardman, who gave $65,000 toward the building, refused to allow her donation to be used for that purpose. Tonight the board voted to consult ex-Gov. Ingersoll as to the legality of the two radical votes.

NORWICH AND VICINITY.

He Spent Sunday at Polo.

There came near being a sensation at the Connecticut state building Monday morning. A well known Connecticut clergyman, a doctor of divinity at that, and standing at the head of his denomination, remarked to a party of friends that he "spent yesterday at polo." We knew that many Chicago theaters were open Sunday, and that the race tracks made good records of time—if not for eternity—on that day, and almost reached the conclusion that the strain of sight-seeing at the fair had unsettled the good doctor's mind, as well as his morals, when it dawned upon us that he had been to Polo, Ill.

The Late Thomas S. Collier.

Thomas S. Collier, seaman and man of letters, died suddenly at his home in New London, Conn., Thursday of a hemorrhage from the lungs. Mr. Collier retired as boatswain from the United States navy several years ago, and has since given his spare time to writing stories, sketches of history, and verse, with marked success. He was known as a contributor to literary journals of the first order and to magazines; many of his tales of history, travel and adventure, and many of his poems have been contributed to The Sunday Republican, and have met with appreciation from our readers. He published, about two years ago, a volume of verse, which was well received. In New London he held a high place in the esteem of his fellow citizens; for the past ten years he had been secretary of the county historical society, and he was a prominent member of the local chapter of Sons of the Revolution.—[Springfield Republican.

May Remove to New London.

In regard to the reported removal of the Bath Iron works to New London, Edward W. Hyde, treasurer of the company, says: "To induce the company to go to New London will require large sums, besides a tract of land to build on and exemption from taxation for a term of years. Should it be decided to leave Bath the buildings owned by the company will be taken down and the lumber sold, leaving nothing but the wharves. Taxation is quite an object, and the valuation upon which we are assessed is rather high. We are holding back in laying the keel of the Slater yacht, and should we go to New London we will build that vessel there."

Death Benefit Paid.

Gen. Burnside Council, No. 88, O. U. A. M., has paid to the widow of the late E. L. Chappell, who was drowned off Fishers island, the sum of $100, which is the death benefit that this council pays.

THE NEW SCHOOL LAWS.

What They Provide for Working Children.

By the new laws affecting schools any child of thirteen may work, provided he has attended school twenty-four weeks in the year. Children between thirteen and fourteen must have been present sixty days in the year, and of these thirty must have been continuous. Over fourteen, children may work at will; although a child of this age limit or above it, if found idle, comes under the control of the truant officer. The law cannot compel school attendance of a child under eight years of age. In this city children are held to be of school age at four, which is a year younger than in most cities.

The new laws, besides enjoining the display of the flag upon school buildings during pleasant weather, and its conspicuous display in the school room at other times, prescribes a suitable commemoration of flag day, June 14th.

HORACE JOHNSON.

The Hartford Weather Seer's New Predictions.

Says Horace Johnson of Hartford: From the 22d to the 28th of the present month a disturbance will take place in the atmosphere that should be termed as intermediate. Such disturbances are of not long duration, often furious and doing great damage in a short space of time.

From the 7th to the 13th of October there will be a great general disturbance which will move in an extended circuit. Indications of a tidal wave, after which look for cool, settled weather.

One Bowlder Held on Another's Side by a Wedge.

A Quiambaug (Stonington) correspondent of The New London Day says there is a wonder in that place which discounts the rocking stones already described. In the opinion of those who have seen it, no similar curiosity can be found in the United States.

In the northern part of Stonington Henry Aiken owns a dense woodland. Near the center of the wooded tract is a small clearing. In this clearing an immense bowlder rises to a height of about ten feet. The visible part of the bowlder weighs about 100 tons. Its sides slope at a sharp angle, and are quite smooth.

To one of the slippery sides of this big bowlder, and about seven feet from the ground, another bowlder, weighing about five tons, is held by a stone wedge, or chock, which fits perfectly into its place.

This sight is one which fills the mind of the observer with amazement. It is evident that no human agency could be utilized in a forest to raise the five-ton rock to its position on the big bowlder's side, and hold it there simply by a stone wedge.

HORSE THIEF APPREHENDED.

A Westerly Scamp Bound Over to the Superior Court.

The horse that was stolen from the barn of Mr. J. H. Blackler of Westerly early in the week and for which the local police have been searching, has been recovered and the supposed thief arrested. When it was found that the horse had been stolen, telegrams were sent in all directions, in order to recover the animal and apprehend the thief.

Constable H. P. Brown of Niantic at last heard of the case, and soon had the man under arrest.

He is an Italian, and for a time has resided on Pierce street, Westerly. He gives an unpronounceable name, "Nicholo Gioalpado."

Constable Brown brought his man to Westerly, where he was arraigned before Judge Whipple in the district court. He pleaded not guilty and was bound over to the common pleas division of the supreme court under a bond of $1,000. Being unable to furnish the security, he was taken to Kingston jail to await trial.

LETTER TO SANTA CLAUS.

It is Held at the New London Post Office.

In the rack at the post office where misdirected letters are held, is a letter properly sealed, with postage prepaid.

It was posted in this city on September 13, and is addressed apparently in a child's hand, to "Santa Claus, Somewhere Near the North Pole, I guess." What its contents are no one but the little writer knows.

Some little tot has probably made known some childish want to good old Saint Nicholas and is waiting with feverish anxiety for the fulfillment of his desires.

The letter, in the regular course of post office business, will go to the dead letter office.—[New London Day.

REBELS DEFEATED.

Naval Attack on Forts of Santos Unsuccessful.

FIGHTING LASTED TWO HOURS.

Rio Janeiro Expected to Surrender to Admiral Mello.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—The Herald's Montevideo correspondent cables: News which was received here today (Thursday) is not as favorable to the cause of the revolutionists as heretofore. The rebel squadron, of which the republic is the flagship, which sailed for the south, intending to bombard Santos, Porto Alegre and Rio Grande do Sul, has been defeated.

When they arrived off Santos, the guns of the Republica and Pallas were trained on the city. The land forces were awaiting the attack, and the shore artillery replied with vigor. The fight was kept up for two hours, when the rebel fleet hoisted anchor and sailed to the southward. Deserters from the ranks of the revolutionists are daily reported.

The government is strengthening its forces, hoping to soon dominate the situation. The federal troops in Rio Grande do Sul have abandoned the which they found was too strongly defended to attack with any hope of success. There was considerable skirmishing, but no decisive results.

Two thousand federals, under the command of General Pena, were encamped near Baptista, intending to attack San Eugenio, which was defended by 600 Castilhistas, commanded by General Tigre.

Advices received from Rio are more favorable to the rebels than those from the south. It is reported that the citizens of the Brazilian capital expect that the city will in a few days be surrendered to Admiral Mello.

It is reported here that foreign vessels may enter all Brazilian ports freely under the responsibility of their own flag, but the truth of this is doubted.

CRITICAL SITUATION.

National Guard of Argentine to Be Mobilized to Put Down Revolt.

BUENOS AYRES, Sept. 22.—The situation here remains critical. The president and his ministers conferred all last night in the government house. Today 30 conspicuous Radicals were arrested. The charge against them is conspiracy to overthrow the government. All have been placed aboard warships. Dr. Alem, leader of the Radicals, has fled to escape arrest.

The national troops in the long disturbed province of Corrientes have gone over to the insurgents. The iron gunboats Bermejo and Republica, stationed in the Parana river, have joined the anti-government forces. The president has ordered that the whole national guard be mobilized throughout the country to stop the progress of the revolt.

MANEUVERS CLOSED.

Playing War in Hungary Resulted in Loss of Several Lives.

GUENS, Hungary, Sept. 22.—The army maneuvers closed today, and the palm of victory was awarded to the army of the north. The men and horses are suffering exhaustion. Numerous accidents occurred during the fighting. Two officers and several privates were killed.

The Eleventh Hussars received an order to advance upon the enemy. The Hussars moved forward at a gallop. Suddenly horses and men were seen toppling over. They had come unawares upon a wide and deep ditch, and the Hussars went down as though their ranks were being swept with grape and canister. Only 20 men and horses emerged from the ditch in condition to resume the charge.

Missing Boy's Body Found.

WORCESTER, Mass., Sept. 22.—The body of Herbert Merrill, 17 years old, who mysteriously disappeared from his father's home in Sterling on the evening of Sept. 14, was found in the Stillwater river this morning. How the accident occurred no one can conjecture. He was with his folks in the evening and went out to get some water. Continued search failed to discover him until today.

Unknown Schooner Sunk.

CHATHAM, Mass., Sept. 22.—Another unknown two-masted schooner sunk off here last night. She had probably been run into by some steamer, as her sails were badly torn and the rigging was damaged. The mastheads are out of water and the wreck is a very dangerous obstruction to navigation in the night. The fate of the crew is unknown.

Played Highwayman.

TAUNTON, Mass., Sept. 22.—Frank Corbett played policeman and highwayman at one and the same time in Whittenden the other night, by dragging Miss Fanny Barney from a carriage in which she was riding, and taking two rings from her fingers. This morning he was before Judge Fox, and was fined $50.

No One to Lose a Cent.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Sept. 22.—The Frankfort National bank yesterday went into liquidation. It was organized in August, 1886, with a capital stock of $100,000. An officer of the bank says that neither the depositors nor the stockholders will lose a cent. The total indebtedness is $120,000.

Church at Franklin Burned.

FRANKLIN, Mass., Sept. 22.—The Congregational church was burned, and the Crescent House and several dwellings were damaged by fire and water this morning. Loss on church and contents, $40,000.

Rolling Mill Resumes.

BELLEFONT, Pa., Sept. 22.—After two months of idleness the rolling mill of the Valentine Iron company has again been put in operation. The mill will run as long as the company can sell their iron.

Full Time After Oct. 2.

AMESBURY, Mass., Sept. 22.—The Hamilton Woolen company posted notices through its mills today that it would run on full time after Oct. 2 under a reduction of about 10 per cent in wages.

Jurors All Right Now.

BOSTON, Sept. 22.—The taking of testimony in the Trefethen case was continued today and considerable progress made. The jurors all reported in good health.

Only Then.

"When may I sleep again?" he cried
As the baby began to squall,
And a saucy echo answered back,
"After the bawl."
—Detroit Tribune.

Prepared For All Emergencies.

"How old do you think I am, Mr. Parker?" asked Miss Binks.

"I don't dare guess," said Parker, "but whatever it is you don't look it."—Harper's Bazar.

Horrible Thought!

If in one big straw hat were wove
The hats of ninety-three,
How great a hat, my countrymen,
That one straw hat would be!

ALGER'S OPINION.

Times Better In the West, but Sherman Law Should Be Repealed.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—General Russell A. Alger who is in this city attending a meeting of the Logan monument fund committee to a reporter said of the situation in the west that times were much better in his state and the west. He did not care to discuss the affairs of the railroad in which he is interested and which recently went into the hands of a receiver beyond saying that he thought it would come out all right in the end.

"If the senate would only repeal the Sherman act," he continued, "I think confidence would, in a measure, be restored. The people believe that the trouble lies in that direction, and the only way to do is to repeal the Sherman act. Whether that is the real cause of the great depression is another question. We want confidence restored. I must say that the people out west have stood together admirably in all the trouble. The debtor class, I find, instead of showing a disposition not to try to pay have worked manfully and are now doing all they can to pay. And the creditor class have acted well and not lost faith entirely in the outcome. Just as soon as the Sherman act is repealed business will look up and times will be easier."

SCENE OF DEVASTATION.

Prairie Fires Leave Country For Miles a Stretch of Black Waste.

GUTHRIE, Ok., Sept. 22.—The scene of the recent terrible prairie fires on the Pawnee reservation is one of devastation. Scattered all over the prairie are partly burned wagons, wrecked camp outfits and household goods.

For miles, as far as the eye can reach, it is a black waste, and, to add to the horror of it all, in a number of places are found blackened and burned human trunks. Nearly a dozen of these bodies have been found.

The dust storm continued all day yesterday with unabated fury, and hundreds are leaving every town of the strip, unable to stand the hardships any longer. At Perry the dust is thickest, and all business is suspended. Yesterday the suffering inhabitants sought refuge from the blowing, sifting sand, in tents and under wagons.

SCHOOL OF DOG FISH.

Frighten Other Fish and Actually Paralyze the Fishing Industry.

HALIFAX, Sept. 22.—Cape Breton fishermen, as well as their brethren in Nova Scotia, find the prosecution of the fisheries difficult this fall, owing to the immense school of dog fish on the coast. These fish frighten from shore other fish, destroy nets and trawls, and actually paralyze the fishing generally.

Forty years ago dog fish were plentiful on this coast, and were then of considerable commercial value. The fishermen, with a suitable kind of hook not available today, captured immense quantities of these fish and the oil taken from them was worth 60 cents a gallon, being mainly used for illuminating purposes. Today it is not worth more than 20 cents per gallon and therefore the fish are not sought after.

JUDGE BROOKS DEAD.

End of a Busy and Honorable Career in Professional Life.

CONCORD, Mass., Sept. 22.—Judge George M. Brooks died at his house at 8.30 o'clock this morning after a sickness of a week. He has been in failing health for a long time, never having fully recovered from a long illness seven years ago. His death was caused by Bright's disease.

Hon. George M. Brooks was born in Concord in 1824, and was the son of Nathan and Mary Brooks, of that town. He entered Harvard college, from which he was graduated in 1844, and afterward was admitted to the bar. Judge Brooks served in both the state and national house of representatives, and in 1872 was appointed judge of probate for the county of Middlesex.

AN OPEN LETTER.

Thurston of Hawaiian Government Talks Sharply to Claus Spreckels.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—In an open letter to Claus Spreckels, just made public, L. A. Thurston, representing the Provisional government of Hawaii, says in part:

When, in spite of all that you and the remainder of the Royalist faction could do, the provisional government has maintained peace, accumulated a surplus in the treasury, established a home market for its bonds at par to the full amount that it desires to borrow, for the first time in three years changed the postal bank deficit into a surplus, and in the face of continued and vituperative misrepresentation and detraction, continued to administer the government firmly, economically and equitably, I think that I am justified in claiming that it possesses the confidence of the people.

The issue between you and the provisional government is one of dollars and cents against flesh and blood. The flesh and blood are from the same stock that successfully established liberty in America and it will establish it in Hawaii.

UGLY GASH IN HIS HEAD.

Body of John Ahern Found in the Provincetown Dock.

PROVINCETOWN, Mass., Sept. 22.—John Ahern, a deck hand on the steamer Longfellow, mysteriously disappeared last night. This morning after the steamer had sailed for Boston, his body was found floating in the dock, with an ugly gash on his head.

It is supposed that he fell from the wharf some time last night, while attempting to go on board, and struck her guard, splitting his head open, which accounts for no outcry being heard. Ahearn was about 30 years of age, a native of Arichat, N. S., and lived in Winthrop.

Another Life Saved that Physicians Pronounced Hopeless.

VERONA, N. Y.—With no motive other than to do good, I write this letter with the hope that it may reach the eye of the sick and suffering one.

As my friends know, I was taken very sick about two years ago, our family physician said I was suffering from overflow of gall, another physician declared that I was suffering from ulcers of the liver. Their prescriptions failed to benefit me, for I gradually grew worse until finally after consultation I was told that I could not live.

At this critical period my mother persuaded me to try Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, which I did and I began to improve steadily, the physicians were dismissed, and I continued the use of Favorite Remedy until I was completely cured.

Today I weigh 140 pounds, and never enjoyed such good health as at present. I prize Favorite remedy higher than gold. Mother is 83 years old and has been kept alive for years by the use of this great medicine.

MRS. JENNIE REEVES.

In speaking of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, one of our local physicians said. "It's undoubtedly the best medicine we have for renovating the entire system; it eliminates all poisons from the blood, whether of scrofulous or malarial origin: for chronic dyspepsia, rheumatism, nervousness, or any urinary trouble, all of which arise from an excess of uric acid in the blood, it never fails to cure when a cure is possible. sep23waS

BALLAD OF THE SCHOOLBOY SQUIRE.

At school no rival he admits,
His greatness none deny;
A king whom epoch making hits
To leg have lifted high.
Yet here at home in late July
By one of beauty's queens
Behold him smitten, hip and thigh,
This gallant in his teens.

[illegible]
One whom the sirens ply,
And where his fair Althea sits
He humbly hovers nigh.
Alert, attentive, awkward, shy,
Beside her chair he leans,
Prepared for her to live and die,
This gallant in his teens.

But, August fled, the path he quits
Where primroses garlands lie,
And gathers up his fifth form wits
So sadly knocked awry.
More than [illegible], he knows not why
He finds [illegible]
The cricket more than usual dry,
This gallant in his teens.

ENVOI.

Lady, he'll fathom by and by
What this strange fever means—
Spare him the tribute of a sigh,
This gallant in his teens.
—Alfred Cochrane in Temple Bar.

BOUND SADLY HOME.

It was all a fraud. The forage cap on one side of his narrow head, the worn-out livery coat with epaulets, even the leathern strap, suspending from his shoulder his box of knavish wares, affected a military air and countenanced his lies and deceptions.

The face was not repulsive even now. Some distinction appertained to the heavy mustache, and the hollow beneath the high cheek bone, the crow's feet around the eyes, the tanned, weather beaten ruddiness of his complexion, might have betokened honorable service in poisonous swamps or under burning skies, instead of shifty, listless wanderings with alternate hours of want and wickedness.

He dragged himself to the dusty grass beneath the "Five Ashes" at the four crossroads. He was faint, for the hill had tried him, and sat panting with his back against a tree. Then he opened his box and began rolling infallible pills between his filthy finger and thumb. Their composition was a secret, but doubtless they did some people a lot of good.

For 20 years his heart had never softened with a sentiment, his soul never quickened with an aspiration, and now his wandering eye, resting on a finger post across the road, mechanically read: "Upton. Leigh. Sutton-Darcy."

All so familiar once, and the last his birthplace!

A strange impulse, absolutely unreasonable, for recognition might still be dangerous, took possession of him. An irresistible desire to see the place again, even though it were by stealth at night. From the boughs above his head came the "pink! pink!" of a chaffinch, and through the filth and fog of a quarter of a century of evil, indistinct in the fumes of drink and smothered in its own futility, gleamed a reminiscence clear and sharp as the bird's note:

An old farmhouse thatched and stone built, with mullioned windows. In the garden a tall pear tree, with yellow buds glistening in the early spring, and beneath a youth with a gun peeping to get a shot. Then a man in breeches and boots, elderly, but hale, drawling half humorously: "Why, Jack, my bwoy! Thy shots do hot off more buds than all the chaffingers."

The old people must be gone now. For Jack was the youngest and the favorite five and thirty years ago.

Muttering against his own folly he slung on his box and limped alongside the Sutton road.

At evening he entered "The Cups," an inn on the outskirts of Sutton. Everything was as formerly—the same bench and stools, the same oak settle by the hearth. Two laborers playing at shovel board called each other familiar names, and the singsong of their voices brought back the past.

"What parish may this be, please?" he asked.

"Sutton," replied both Abe and Abe.

"A large village?"

"Tidden so tarr'ble large."

"Small?"

"Tidden so wonderful small."

Satisfied with the subterfuge of these questions, he sat down and continued eagerly:

"Any o' the name of Craddock live here now?"

"Craddock, eh?" grinned Abe. "What dost say, Abe?"

"Noo fear!" said Abe.

He hesitated. But the longing to know overcame his judgment like the craving of a vice.

"And the farm at the foot of the hill. Who lives there?"

"Mr. Craddock, be sure. Varmer William."

"When I came this way before, somebody—people called Sandford"——

"Ha! ha!" laughed Abe. "Then you be a wettish bird, not hatched last summer. Why, the old man have a-bin dead these 20 year. An the maid married Varmer William, an he took on the farm. But years avore she thought to a-married one Jack. But he took to ho'se racen, so 'tes said, an signed somebody's name an bolted. Never didden hear no more o' he. But you be a old file. What dost say, Abe?"

"Noo fear!" said Abe.

John Craddock nervously rose, straightened his back and fell into his familiar patter.

"Yes. I'm an old soldier, wounded in the trenches before Sevastopol and starved at Cawnpore, and when I'd spilt my blood and ruined a fine constitution in the service of my native land they gave me my discharge and threw me upon the world without a penny. But, happily, among the prisoners taken by the British forces in that memorable war was the private physician to the Rance of Jhansi. Seeing me writhing with rheumatism—to which, gentlemen, I was then a martyr—his feeling heart confided to me, under an oath of secrecy, the inestimable blessing of a never failing remedy. These pills, gentlemen, taken in time are a reliable cure. If you have ever seen crooked legs, stiff arms or a back as bowed as a reaping hook, take a couple of these pills—four and twenty in each box. The price is twopence, and I guarantee, if kept dry, the contents will never deteriorate. Thank you, gentlemen. I wish you good evening."

His glibness had been successful; but, ill at ease, he shuffled on to the old house with the pear tree. A silver maned colt was reaching over the paddock rail, the image of the roan mare they used to call Rube. All was quiet and prosperous, and in the garden path stood the familiar figure. He slunk into the shadow of the churchyard wall. Yet it was only Dick, grown into the substantial stiffness of his father's place.

He went to the low thatched house standing all askew, with the stalls and the wagon shed where he and Dorothy used to meet. He would sleep that night in one of the wagons. It was scarcely dusk, but the life came back quite clearly. Work was over, and nobody would come, so he went in and climbed up out of sight.

He heard a light step and peeped over the tailboard. There stood the Doll Sanford of years ago, with budding womanhood beneath the open neck of her print frock. She had run out in haste. Her lips were parted. He could see her face looking toward the gate into the orchard. Then came a firmer step—just as when they said he was too wild for their Dorothy.

"I mustn't stay tonight, Jack."

"A few minutes, Doll."

"The maid's out. Mother'll miss me."

"Doll!" "Jack!"

They kissed close to the wagon wheel and were gone.

He could not help it. Come what would, he must go to the house, and presently he crossed the yard, entered the porch and knocked.

"Nothing today, thank you," said a sharp voice through the partly opened door.

He remembered the Craddock rule—never to give money nor refuse bread. "Will you give me a bit to eat?" he begged.

Without a word she disappeared, but came back, bringing also a cup of cider.

"Isn't this Mr. Craddock's?"

"It is."

"I knew one of that name once—Jack Craddock. We were chums. I was by when he was killed. I've got something of his now."

"Killed?" she echoed, trembling.

"Yes. It was in the trenches before Sevastopol"——

She gave a sharp cry and sank into the stone seat in the porch.

A burly figure came from the house. "What's this? What's this?" he blustered and seized the tramp by the collar and shook him.

"Don't, William," pleaded the woman. "It's nothing. He has done nothing."

He shuffled nervously into the high road and stood there in the twilight beneath the pale summer stars. Had she recognized him? He could tramp no farther that day, and again he slunk across the yard and climbed into the wagon. At dawn he would trudge on—far from the village—out of the district.

At daybreak came the horses, but they did not wake him.

"Here's thik tramp feller. Gull! He's dead! What dost say, Abe?"

Abe solemnly said, "Noo fear!"—Walter Raymond in London Illustrated News.

He Washed the Tiger.

When Pezon, the lion tamer, was at Moscow with his menagerie, he hired a Cossack to clean out the cages of the wild beasts. The Cossack did not understand a word of French. Pezon tried to show him about his work by motions with a pail and sponge. The moujik watched him closely and seemed to understand. Next morning, armed with a broom, a bucket and a sponge, he opened the first cage he came to and quietly stepped in. He had seen his master step into two cages of harmless brutes, but this one happened to belong to a splendid tiger that lay on the floor fast asleep.

At the noise made by opening the door the creature raised its head and turned its eyes full on the man, who stood in a corner dipping his big sponge into the bucket. At that moment Pezon came out, and was struck dumb with the sight. What could he do to warn the man? A sound might enrage the great beast. So Pezon stood still. The moujik, sponge in hand, coolly approached the tiger and made ready to rub him down.

The cold water on its hide pleased the tiger, for it began to purr, stretched out its paws, rolled over on its back and offered every part of its body to the treatment of the moujik, who went on scrubbing with might and main. All the while Pezon stood there with his eyes wide open as if nailed to the spot. When he had finished his job, the Cossack left the cage as quietly as he entered it. But he never did it again.—London Million.

The Farmer and [illegible].

The saleable value of farm lands is greatly enhanced by the facility with which the mill, store and factory privileges are made available. Manufactories are established in localities where communication is readily had with the farm and market, and any factory established in a farming locality furnishes an additional market for farm produce, and a market that is constant in its demands and sure in its receipts.

Thus the farmer is the one directly interested, for it means to him economical transportation in competition, a market when prices are best, the introduction of factories and increased value of farm lands. Besides this it means a better attendance at schools, more benefit from the towns libraries and lectures, and with the greater diffusion of knowledge less desire to leave the farm for privileges and information that will be more available at home.—New York Tribune.

He Was Bashful.

Mistress—How is it one never hears a sound in the kitchen when your sweetheart is with you of an evening?

Servant Girl—Please, ma'am, the poor fellow is so bashful yet. For the present he does nothing but eat.—Lustige Blatter.

Simple Words the Best.

The following little story is told of a citizen of Port Chester, N. Y., whose education was somewhat superior to his wife's, a fact regarding which she was very sensitive.

On one occasion the man drove over to White Plains to inquire regarding the health of his sister-in-law, who was dangerously ill. Upon returning he was met by his wife, who asked of her sister's condition.

"She is convalescent," replied the man.

Immediately and in the most emphatic manner the woman cried out: "I want none of your soothing words. I want facts. You tell me this minute. Is my sister dead or alive?"—New York Herald.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Sept. 24. Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

TOPIC.—Testimony meeting. How Christ has helped me. I Pet. iii, 15, 16; Ps. xxiv, 17-19.

The subject of Christian testimony has been brought forth and emphasized as one of the beneficial results of the Christian Endeavor movement. It is eminently practicable, therefore, that a testimony meeting should be a topic of our prayer meeting that we may see what the Bible has to say upon this important subject. It is also well that it forms our subject again because there is so much timidity on the part of Christians in this respect. So many have a reluctance and sometimes an absolute horror of recounting how the Lord has helped them and what he has done for them. Note:

1. The reasonableness of Christian testimony (I Pet. iii, 15, 16). In the passage the Apostle Peter says, "Be ready always to give an answer to every man a reason of the hope that is in you with meekness and fear." If men could not reasonably expect an answer to such questions, Peter would not have advised us to be ready to give such an answer. It is reasonable that men may expect us to give a reason for our hopes in Christ. Any one has a right to ask us why we believe in Christ. This does not imply, however, that we are expected to explain everything in connection with our beliefs. We should be able to tell why we believe in the Trinity, but this does not necessitate ability to explain the Trinity. By faith and experience we believe what we cannot explain.

2. The character of Christian testimony (Ps. xciv, 17-19). "Unless the Lord had been my help my soul had almost been in silence. When I said, My foot slippeth, Thy mercy, O Lord, held me up. In the multitude of my thoughts within me Thy comforts delight my soul." This is the testimony or personal experience of the psalmist, and it is one of the model testimonies of this book. In these words the psalmist speaks of the fact that the Lord had been his help and acknowledges his utter helplessness had he not been divinely helped. He speaks of answer to his prayer and of the delight that the comfort of the Lord is to him. This is a model testimony. It tells from the heart something that the Lord has done for one of His. The Lord holds all His children—some in one way, some in another. Therefore let us neither be ashamed nor too timid to testify of His goodness. Let us praise Him in our hearts, and with our voices let us make known His wonderful goodness to the children of men.

Bible Readings—Job vi, 15; Ps. xxi, 1; lvi, 9; xcii, 1, 2; cii, 1, 5; Hosea xiii, 9; Acts xxvi, 22; Rom. i, 8-12; I Cor. i, 4; II Cor. ix, 15; I Thess. ii, 5; Phil. iv; II Tim. i, 3; Heb. iv, 16; Rev. i, 1, 2.

Good Work of the Reading Room.

"Going over to the hotel tonight, Jim?"

"What's going on? Anything new? Generally it's the same old story—pool and drinks and talk and late hours. I'm sick of it."

"That's what I've been thinking myself," said Dick Roberts. "A fellow doesn't know what to do with himself—this old town's so dull."

"Say, did Harry Bell ever ask you to come into the Christian Endeavor reading room?"

"Ask me? Well, I should say he had. That society is trying its level best to knock out the saloon at the hotel, and I guess I know now why I've lost some interest in the old place. As many as five of our fellows go to the reading room now and are full fledged Christian Endeavorers. Let's go down and see how they do it."

"I'm with you. Anything for a change."

Six weeks later they were talking over the reading room and other things connected with the Y. P. S. C. E., and—but we will let Jim Bates tell the story as he told it to me:

"I think they mean business down there. They don't simply want to see a fellow come in in order to get his money. That May Spencer's a good one. She's the chairman of the social committee, you know, and they tell me she got her father to let her have the vacant building on Middle street for the reading room, and she has set that committee on good literature to work, and they supply all the reading matter, and the missionary committee—Harry Bell, he's chairman, and that's why he got after us—and another committee they call the relief are all working like beavers just because of something or other she says she learned at a convention of the society last fall. Going to join? Well, I guess! We're going to be proposed as associates next Tuesday."—Golden Rule.

Christian Endeavor Notes.

The First Christian society of San Francisco contributes a stated sum monthly for prison work.

The St. Andrew's Endeavorers of Liverpool have raised $600 to send one of their number as a missionary to China.

The largest floating society on shipboard is on the steamship Massachusetts, in New York. There are 24 members, who are all bravely striving to be "light in the darkness" for the Master's sake.

There is now a Chinese United Society of Christian Endeavor! This advance step was taken in May during a meeting at Shanghai of the American Presbyterian synod. Many prominent missionaries were brought together at that conference, and the result was the organization of the Chinese United society.

Evening Hymn.

Abide with us, Lord Jesus, through ev'ry changing ill!
Now that the day is dying,
And darker shades are lying
Along the western hill,
Abide with us, Lord Jesus! Be Thou our helper still!

Abide with us, Lord Jesus! Abide with us, we pray!
We bow the knee in meekness,
And own to Thee our weakness!
Be Thou our strength and stay!
Abide with us, Lord Jesus, and guide us lest we stray!

Abide with us, Lord Jesus, now that the sun has set!
Be Thou our shepherd tender!
Shine o'er us in Thy splendor
And all our sins forget!
Abide with us, Lord Jesus! Be Thou our Olivet!

Abide with us, Lord Jesus, till morning light breaks clear—
Till through the night of sorrow
We hail the glad tomorrow
And the safe harbor near!
Abide with us, Lord Jesus, till heaven's lamps appear!

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON XIII, THIRD QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, SEPT. 24.

A Comprehensive Review of the Lessons of the Third Quarter—Golden Text, Rom. x, 11—Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

LESSON I.—Paul Called to Europe (Acts xvi, 6-15). Golden Text (Math. xxviii, 19), "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." This quarter's studies might be summed up in the phrase, "God glorified in Paul" (Gal. i, 24), for wherever he went and whatever he did his ambition was that Christ should be magnified in his body (Phil. i, 20). This particular lesson illustrates the words, "Led by the spirit of God," "Do as occasion serve thee, for God is with thee," "My word shall not return unto me void" (Rom. viii, 14; I Sam. x, 7; Isa. lv, 11).

LESSON II.—Paul at Philippi (Acts xvi, 19-34). Golden Text (Acts xvi, 31), "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved." As we follow Paul from place to place, let us remember his words, "Not I, but Christ." "The life of Jesus manifest in our mortal flesh" (Gal. ii, 20; II Cor. iv, 11). He has grace to praise God, even though his back is scourged, his feet in the stocks and he cast into prison. He takes pleasure in reproaches and persecutions (II Cor. xii, 10) for Christ's sake. He has no influence with the magistrates, but he has power with God, and a household [illegible].

LESSON III.—Paul at Athens (Acts xvii, 22-31). Golden Text (John iv, 24), "God is a Spirit, and they that worship Him must worship Him in spirit and in truth." Journeying through the centers of earth's wisdom and culture and seeing the blindness of people to the realities of time and eternity, he is constrained to tell them of the true God, who is not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance (II Pet. iii, 9), and of Him who is to be the judge of all, even He who was delivered for our offenses and rose again for our justification (Rom. iv, 23-25).

LESSON IV.—Paul at Corinth (Acts xviii, 1-11). Golden Text (I Cor. i, 18), "The preaching of the cross is to them that perish foolishness, but unto us which are saved it is the power of God." See the hand of the Lord in bringing Aquila and Priscilla to Corinth about this time. Thus Paul is provided with a home and employment so that he may freely preach the gospel, and they become qualified to teach others of Christ (verse 26). Note the Lord's care of his servant and His kind words to him in verses 9, 10. Make much of the promise "I am with thee," and compare Ex. iii, 12; iv, 12; Josh. i, 5, 9; Judg. vi, 16; Jer. i, 8, 19; Hag. i, 13; ii, 4; Math. xxviii, 20.

LESSON V.—Paul at Ephesus (Acts xix, 1-12). Golden Text (John xvi, 13), "When He, the Spirit of Truth, is come, He will guide you into all truth." Now we have two years at Ephesus resulting in all in the province of Asia hearing the gospel (verse 10) and so left without excuse. It seems to me that the Lord would be glorified and His coming greatly hastened if the church would neglect some other things and arise to give every soul on earth a chance to hear the gospel once at least.

LESSON VI.—Paul at Miletus (Acts xxviii, 28-38). Golden Text (Heb. xiii, 7), "Remember them which have the rule over you, who have spoken unto you the word of God." He is now on his way to Jerusalem, returning from his third missionary tour. He knows that more suffering awaits him, but he gives that no thought. He only desires to testify of Christ and finish his ministry (verse 24).

LESSON VII.—Paul at Jerusalem (Acts xxi, 27-39). Golden Text (Phil. i, 29), "For unto you it is given in the behalf of Christ not only to believe on Him, but also to suffer for His sake." Paul has now fallen into the hands of religious zealots who knew not the Lord Jesus, and gladly would they kill him as they did his Master, but Paul is safe till his work is done, though he may be called upon to endure much suffering.

LESSON VIII.—Paul Before Felix (Acts xxiv, 10-25). Golden Text (I Cor. xvi, 13), "Watch ye, stand fast in the faith, quit you like men, be strong." Paul is now a prisoner at Cæsarea, in the hands of the Romans, and this lesson is his testimony before the governor, Felix, and in answer to his accusers, the high priest and elders from Jerusalem. He confesses to his firm faith in all the things written in the law and in the prophets, in the resurrection of the dead and in the necessity of having a conscience void of offense toward God and man. Later in the lesson he preaches Christ before Felix and Drusilla, and reasons of righteousness, temperance and judgment to come.

LESSON IX.—Paul Before Agrippa (Acts xxvi, 19-32). Golden Text (I Cor. i, 24), "Christ the power of God and the wisdom of God." After two years Paul is still a prisoner at Cæsarea (chapter xxiv, 27), and having appealed unto Cæsar, Festus, the new governor, desires him to testify before King Agrippa, that he may have some definite accusation to send with him to Cæsar.

LESSON X.—Paul Shipwrecked (Acts xxvii, 30-44). Golden Text (Ps. xlvi, 1), "God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble." The close of last lesson made us feel sorry that Paul ever appealed to Cæsar, but God's ways are higher than ours, and we learn in verse 24 of this chapter that it was God's purpose to bring Paul before Cæsar. Nothing can [illegible] God's purposes (Ps. xxxiii, 11; Isa. xiv, 24), while man's vain imaginings will always come to naught. Satan had many times sought to kill Paul, and this storm is probably another attempt of his, but the Lord delivers, and satan is confounded. What Jesus said concerning His church is true also of every member of it (Math. xvi, 18; John x, 28).

LESSON XI.—Paul at Rome (Acts xxviii, 20-31). Golden Text (Rom. i, 16), "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ." The purpose of God has thus far been accomplished, and Paul is at last in Rome, still a prisoner, it is true, but free to receive all who come to him and to preach to them the kingdom of God and the things concerning the Lord Jesus Christ (verses 30, 31). This is almost the last we hear of Paul, and we find him still expounding Scripture, and from Moses and the prophets preaching Jesus (verse 23). May the last heard of us be on the same line.

LESSON XII.—Personal Responsibility (Rom. xiv, 12-23). (A Temperance lesson.) Golden Text (Rom. xiv, 21), "It is good neither to eat flesh, nor to drink wine, nor anything whereby thy brother stumbleth." I would emphasize in this lesson just the thought of the whole quarter that these bodies of ours are for Christ, not for ourselves; that as "even Christ pleased not Himself" (Rom. xv, 3), so we are to live, not unto ourselves, but unto Him who died for us and rose again (II Cor. v, 15), the kingdom of God and His righteousness being always first with us (verse 17 and Math. vi, 33) and everything tested by "How will it appear" at the judgment seat of Christ (verse 10; II Cor. v, 10)?

The Victorian and Tasmanian Wesleyan societies have raised the entire sum needed for the construction and outfit of The Endeavorer, the Australian Wesleyan missionary whaleboat. The Lydiard Street society of Ballarat gave £34.

Utah, the hardest mission field in the world, formed last year 25 new societies, a gain of 80 per cent.

A Story of a Russian Novelist.

Turgenieff once asked the famous critic, Belinsky, and five others to dine with him at his home in the country, where he kept a famous chef.

"I will prepare such a banquet for you as you have never imagined," he declared, and he not only fixed the day, but insisted upon each person's giving his word of honor that he would be present.

"Don't fear for us," said Belinsky. "We shall be there, but you must not repeat the trick you played us last winter, when you asked us to dine and were not at home when we arrived. In order to remind you I will write to you the day before."

On the appointed day—a very hot day—the party set out for the country house in the morning and arrived thoroughly fatigued by heat and dust. But no host appeared to welcome them. The house was deserted. Repeated knocking at the door was answered by silence.

"Can Turgenieff have repeated last winter's trick?" exclaimed Belinsky. His friends tried to persuade him that they had arrived earlier than they were expected.

"But I wrote him that we would be here at 1 o'clock," said Belinsky. "What can it mean? If they would only admit us, we could wait, but here we are scorched!"

At length a boy appeared who confessed that his master was away and that the chef was at an inn in the neighborhood. He was dispatched for the chef, and the party waited, hungry and cross, until he made his appearance.

"Where is your master?" cried Belinsky.

The cook did not know.

"Did he not order a dinner for us today?"

"He did nothing of the kind," was the answer.

"Well," said Belinsky when he was composed enough to express an opinion, "he has indeed given us an unusual sort of banquet!"—"Russian Characteristics."

Tooth of the Beaver.

The beaver is armed with two long chisellike teeth in each jaw. These teeth are exceedingly powerful and are to a beaver what an ax is to a woodsman. One such tooth taken from the lower jaw of a medium sized skull (they can be removed without difficulty, unlike the most of ours) is bent into nearly a semicircle and measures 5 inches along its outer curve. Only one inch of this length projects from the skull. The corresponding one from the upper jaw is bent into more than a complete half circle and measures upon its outer face 4 inches, of which less than an inch protrudes from its bone casing. In width each tooth is five-eighths of an inch. Examination of one of them reveals the secret of how a beaver can perform such feats as chopping down a birch tree 16 inches in diameter, not to speak of softer woods, like the basswood, of much greater size.

The tooth is composed of two materials. Along the outer face or front of the tooth is a thin plate of exceedingly hard enamel. On the inner, forming the body of the tooth, is a substance called dentine. The dentine, being softer, wears away with use. The thin enamel remains comparatively unworn, so that the tooth assumes the shape of a keen chisel that never grows dull. The tooth is hollow at the base for half its length and is filled with a nourishing substance which keeps it constantly growing.—St. Nicholas.

Why Artificial Ice Is So Pure.

That artificial ice is pure ice cannot be gainsaid. The very nature and manner of manufacture necessarily makes it so. The water used is carefully distilled, which renders it impossible that any impurities shall remain, and even after it is distilled extra precautions are taken to keep it pure until it is safely congealed into the crystal blocks, which are almost transparent and show not the slightest foreign substance. Take a piece of purest lake ice and carefully compare it with the manufactured article, and the difference will readily be seen. Melt them in different glasses, and in the bottom of that containing the natural ice will be found a sediment, the other will contain pure water, while under the microscope a vast difference will be disclosed.—Exchange.

WHY THRIFTY PEOPLE DO NOT SETTLE SOUTH.

The struggle made in Roanoke, Va., [illegible] down mob rule and to have the [illegible] a case of crime, shows how [illegible] the lynching spirit rules there, and [illegible] its supporters are greater in numbers [illegible] strength than the civil authorities. [illegible] of decency and valor in [illegible] of law and good order shown [illegible] Mayor Trout and the militia is creditable to the [illegible] and the [illegible] and somewhat [illegible] it is so unusual in those [illegible] spirit, which not only prompts [illegible], but white-cap [illegible] and [illegible] politics, is what prevents a [illegible] class of settlers from making their [illegible] in that section of the country.

[illegible] crime committed by Robert Smith [illegible] offence, and one that should [illegible] be promptly punished; but there should [illegible] confidence enough in the integrity of [illegible] public officials and the majesty of the [illegible] to let such crimes take their legal [illegible], as they do in the most intelligent [illegible] thirty states in the union. If these [illegible] and savage performances are [illegible] by [illegible] prejudice, these southern [illegible] will do well to cast their [illegible] [illegible] days when the [illegible] of the [illegible] can hardly condemn now. [illegible] as the south insists upon "sowing [illegible] the wind," she may rest assured [illegible] "she will reap the whirlwind."

MANUAL TRAINING A GREAT SUCCESS.

[illegible] Haven at its recent school election [illegible] a victory in favor of making manual [illegible] a part of its public school system. [illegible] time that all cities of any size gave attention to this modern method of preparing children to do work with their hands as [illegible] as to solve problems with their [illegible].

President Samuel B. Capen of the Boston school board, in a recent farewell address said: "All through the country [illegible] teaching of manual training in our [illegible] schools is being introduced, [illegible] it has already been demonstrated that [illegible] it is a great success. In multitudes of cases it is found that the brain can be reached and developed through the hands better than in any other way. [illegible] need now a supplement to all this in [illegible] great cities. . . In brief, we need [illegible] . . . The establishment of [illegible] schools, following the example of [illegible] Pratt in Brooklyn, Drexel in Philadelphia, Armour in Chicago and [illegible] wealthy men all over the country, [illegible] very much toward bridging over the gulf between the rich and the poor, giving new illustrations that all wealth is not selfish and that it does believe in the brotherhood of man. A Cooper Institute is a far grander monument to leave a city when one is gone than a Cooper building would be filled with offices. One serves humanity, the other one's family pride."

ANOTHER WORLD'S FAIR DECEPTION.

There are undoubtedly many deceptions at the World's fair to meet the demands of the curious who would not regard it as a big exhibition at all unless everything "quaint, queer and quizzical" on earth was there to astonish them. There is little harm done by the introduction of counterfeit "blarney stones" and curios, but when an exhibit is made for the purpose of bolstering up or perpetuating a corrupt system, it is necessary that it should be exposed.

This is what Miss Emma C. Sickles claims that the announced Indian congress to be held there is, a scheme which grossly misrepresents the Indians, in that it gives an exhibition the savagest adults and a few of the children, instead of giving the most progressive and best types of adult Indians a chance to be heard in their own behalf. The whole plan, she claims, tends to keep up the old prejudice expressed in the sentiment that "the only good Indian is a dead Indian," and to promote the spoils system by which people draw large salaries from the government by false pretenses.

She condemns the entire system of educating (?) the Indians as now conducted, and says, at the Pine Ridge agency a superintendent was employed at a salary of $1,500, an assistant at $1,000, the superintendent's wife at $750 and her assistant at $480 a year, none of them performing active work in the school room.

She writes convincingly and from knowledge gained by work among the Indians, and there is no doubt her claim that there is a necessity for a thorough reform of the shameful system of robbing the Indians and deceiving the people, which has obtained in the present century and is a disgrace to the nation should be abolished, is worthy of immediate and sincere investigation.

A FORTUNATE PARTY.

The republican party is fortunate in having two such men as McKinley of Ohio, who is leading his party upon the horizontal issues of protection and a safe and sound currency, and Tom Reed of Maine, whose manliness and tact won from the democrats when he was speaker of the house the title of "the czar!"

They are men of principle and of power, and both have won national repute by their scholarship, good sense and masterly leadership. And they are showing the people the expensiveness of this administration's mode of bringing about democratic results by "object lessons."

Tom Reed thinks the people must have been seriously impressed by the spectacle of shut-down mills, reduced wages and short time, and remarks: "We are just now paying pretty heavy wages to our new teacher, and the result ought to be exceedingly beneficial to the country if the price of the wages is taken into account."

IT SHOULD BE SETTLED RIGHT.

This little matter must be finally settled, though all the powers of evil that lurk in typography be against us. We beg to assure The Waterbury Republican that its apology was clearly before us and that we had it, The Republican, and all its virtues and graces and heresies in our minds, when we wrote two days ago under the little paragraph, so unfortunately credited to THE BULLETIN. There was no design. THE BULLETIN had done nothing to apologize to us for. Its apologies should be addressed to the American boy whom it is placing in jails so numerously.—[New Haven Register.

If The Register had shown its accustomed astuteness in interpreting THE BULLETIN's sentiments upon the American boy the closing sentence of the above paragraph would not have been written. The officers of the law have put so many American boys in jail for committing crimes (mark you, THE BULLETIN did not do it), that THE BULLETIN's whole effort is for the education of the American boy so that he will keep out of jail! The figures showing the lamentable facts The Register confessed its inability to confute. THE BULLETIN owes no apology, even to the American boy!

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

When a United States senator makes up his mind to be garrulous "Betsy Bobbitt" is not in it.

Down in Roanoke they have no regard for a man who suspects a negro or who respects the law!

Charley Mitchell, the Nancy Hanks of the prize ring, is looking for Corbett. Mitchell won't be looking when he goes down on the home stretch.

The democratic press claims that Tom Reed doesn't like to take his own medicine. What is that but a confession that the democrats have been forced to doctor in the republican way!

An eminent English authority claims that the precociously economical child who rather put its money in a "safe-box" than invest it in candy is troubled with plouto-mania. This is a disease which stands over against kleptomania—it doesn't take, but it keeps.

The clergy of a hundred years ago used to be quite sensational when they announced their themes: "A Spiritual Mustard Pot to Make the Soul Sneeze with Devotion," and "Crumbs of Comfort for Chickens of Grace." By the way, these chickens are somewhat scarce now.

Geary is coming to his senses. He has presented a bill suspending the immigration of all aliens to the United States for five years. Uncle Sam has been taking a million a year of Europe's poor long enough. Had not his resources more than equalled his bounty he would have had a larger army of tramps on his hands than he has now!

The Boston Post demands that "the duty be taken off of crockery. Massachusetts does not make crockery and why should its citizens be taxed to protect New Jersey's industries?" New Jersey is not a great shoe manufacturing state and why should her citizens be taxed to protect Massachusetts' industries? The Post is capable of taking a broader view of protection, editorially, we hope, than that.

Lasting Disgrace.

Judge Lynch's victory means lasting disgrace for the city of Roanoke.—[Boston Globe.

When Democrats Respond.

To insure honest money the responsible party in power cannot find a majority. But to insure dishonest elections they rise up as one man.—[N. Y. Tribune.

What They Mean.

Lower wages for the workingman means lower rents, lower prices for agricultural produce, the scaling down, in fact, of everything to European semi-slavery conditions.—[New York Recorder.

"Public Office is a Public Trust."

There is very little trust about a public office which is conditioned on the payment of $40,000 to $50,000 cash to the democratic campaign fund.—[New York Press.

One at a Time!

Let the democrats do what they will with the federal elections laws. The country cares very little about them just now, but does demand the repeal of the Sherman law at the earliest possible moment.—[Springfield Union.

Kill Them Both.

Tie the two democratic repeal bills together—the repeal of the law protecting the ballot box and the repeal of the only law that now protects our silver currency—and kill them both.—[New York Recorder.

The Time Has Come.

The time has come to deal summarily with the coterie of obstructionists headed by Senators Teller, Dubois, Stewart, Jones and Wolcott; to assert the power of the majority, maintain the dignity of the senate and enforce the popular will.—[N. Y. Herald.

The Cause of Stagnation.

The present widespread stagnation of industries and suspension of enterprise which have reduced or stopped entirely the wages of more than 1,000,000 men, were caused solely and directly by the prospect of the destruction of the tariff in accordance with the declarations of the democratic platform at Chicago.—[New York Press.

In Fighting Trim.

Dr. Parkhurst has returned from Europe in fighting trim, and means to engage more earnestly than ever in his warfare against protected crime in this city. He has not lost his power of vigorous speech. He now describes Tammany as a "superbly organized band of brigands," and against it he means to wage a hot fight.—[N. Y. Tribune.

Beware of the Soup.

It is a sort of relief to hear of a new variety of horror. William Perron tried to kiss Mrs. Coggswell of Boston, Ind., while she was at the stove preparing dinner, and she threw a dish full of boiling soup in his face, destroying one of his eyes and perhaps both. In kissing the cook, beware of the soup.—[Springfield Union.

"Truly Rural."

New Jersey turned out 893,890 gallons of native "feu de joie" last year, and the product will naturally be much greater this year. After coming from the stills it is kept in bond long enough to permit the snakes to evaporate, and when it has acquired sufficient edge so that a standard Jerseyman can say "truly rural" six times in succession after drinking a pint of it, it is ready for the market.—[Boston Globe

While taking two bottles the inflammation gradually disappeared, his eyes grew stronger so that he could bear the light. He was soon

VALKYRIE IS HERE.

Long Looked For Yacht Arrives in New York.

REPORTS A STORMY PASSAGE.

She is Not at All Damaged by the Hard Voyage.

QUARANTINE, Sept. 22.—The long-looked-for British cut yacht Valkyrie has at last reached port. Shortly after 7 o'clock she dropped anchor in the New York yacht club's anchorage, off Bay Ridge, where she will await repairs for her big race, Oct. 5, with the America's cup defender Vigilant.

Like the plucky, staunch built craft she is, the Valkyrie had not a mark upon her to speak of. Her 24 sturdy British tars are all well to a man, and their daring craft was not a bit damaged by her long and perilous voyage. This seems almost incredible in the face of the terrible storms that have raged on the Atlantic during the last few weeks, but this is explained by the fact that the yacht took a northerly course.

The Valkyrie fooled all the weather-wise and sea-learned sharps hereabouts in much the same style as did the Thistle when she came over to contest the last big race some years ago. This morning marked her 30th day out, and in all that time she was and not even sighted, except by the National liner Spain.

The report made here last Monday by Captain Griffiths of the big cattle ship, that he had seen the Dunraven cutter 660 miles off Sandy Hook last Saturday, and stood along with her for over 70 miles was confirmed by Captain Cranfield, Valkyrie's commander, this morning to a reporter, who was among the first to board her at quarantine.

While the gallant skipper could not make out the ship's name, he saw that she had four masts and two white and black pipes, thus showing her to be a national liner, and the only one that passed on the way last Saturday.

It was just 6:05 o'clock this morning when the operator at Sandy Hook, after many weary nights of peering out into the darkness, discerned dimly through the haze that covered the hook the outlines of a single-sticked craft in tow of a tugboat. The tugboat was an ordinary enough looking craft of its kind, and the operator finally made her out to be the Charm, a well-known tug in these waters. But her tow was what interested him the most.

She had a long, low, black hull, cut clear away in front and carried a single sail, much begrimed and sea worn.

It Was Not a Scow, Sure.

Her trim built lines showed that beyond any doubt only one such craft would be off that spot at such an hour, and after two or three more peers through his powerful glass the operator clicked to quarantine this message: "At 6:05 o'clock the British yacht Valkyrie, in tow, was passing Sandy Hook, bound in."

The message created the biggest kind of excitement at quarantine, where the officials were just about boarding the big ocean craft that had come up the bay during the night. It extended even to health officer Jenkins, who did not wait even for breakfast, but put on his official cap and coat, and with his deputy, Dr. Talmadge, and the veteran ship newsgatherer Richard Lee, at once boarded the quarantine tug and went out into the stream to await and welcome the new-comer, who might or might not carry laurels away from America's [illegible].

Almost the first thing Dr. Jenkins did after giving Captain Cranfield a hearty handshake was to hand him a letter from H. Maitland Kersey, the personal representative of Lord Dunraven in America. The latter contained orders for Captain Cranfield to proceed immediately to Bay Ridge, whence the yacht would be taken to Erie basin for Such Repairs as She Might Need.

In consequence the health officers' examination was made brief. Captain Cranfield reported himself and crew all perfectly sound and well, and he did not think the yacht would need much overhauling to place her in readiness for the struggle with her Herreshoff rival.

This morning, he said, marked the 30th day out, and the Valkyrie was as stanch as the day she left Southampton. "Coming down the English channel," said the captain to the reporter, "we had westerly winds. Before leaving the Scilly Islands we had three days of light winds and calms. After that we had five days of light easterly winds, then the wind shifted around to north and northwest.

"From that it blew sou'-sou'west nearly all the time, giving us strong head winds and Heavy Seas All the Way Over.

It would blow heavy, then light, then die out entirely, and then spring up again. We took a northerly course all the passage, and that accounts for our missing the big cyclones others fell in with.

"The Valkyrie behaved splendidly all the way across. We did not have a man hurt, let alone being lost, and every soul on board is hale and hearty. We had several pretty stiff gales, and one of them blew away our storm jib and burst our trysail, so we had to set a storm trysail. Otherwise we did not get a scratch, and you can see for yourself that you could not taste salt water on one of our biscuits.

"On the 18th we saw a four-masted, two-piped steamship which pilot J. Riardon, here, who picked us up outside early this morning, tells me must have been the Spain, although we did not speak to her. On the 18th, too, at 5:20 p. m. in latitude 41 deg. 22m. north, longitude 64 deg. 10m. we passed a derelict bark. She was bottom up, but so far away and the sea was so heavy that we were unable to learn anything more about her than she had a copper bottom."

Neither Mr. Kersey, nor any other interested parties in the race of local yachtsmen were at quarantine or down the bay this morning to meet the Valkyrie.

HOLMAN'S LATEST.

Introduces a Comprehensive Bill to Punish Bribery at Elections.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—Mr. Holman of Indiana has introduced into the house a comprehensive anti-corruption bill. It not only aims to punish bribery at elections, but also to prevent promises of appointment to office to be used as factors in election campaigns. The bill makes it unlawful for any person to "give, advance, or permit any of his or her personal property to be used directly or indirectly to aid, assist or influence any person or persons to vote or procure the appointment of any person to any office under the government."

Hereafter persons elected or appointed to fill any office are to make oath that they "have not, directly or indirectly, given, promised, advanced or paid any personal property or article of value to aid in procuring the election or appointment." This, of course, is to apply to presidential elections as well as to other elections. Any person violating the provisions of this act may be indicted and fined any sum not exceeding $500 and imprisoned for not more than one year. The measure was referred to the committee on election of the president, vice president and representatives in congress.

REDUCTION REFUSED.

Union Pacific Railway Employes Will Not Accept Cutdown.

OMAHA, Sept. 22.—Since Aug. 6 the forces of organized labor on the Union Pacific railway have been voting on this proposition, viz., whether to accept 10 per cent. cut in wages ordered by the railway, or to offer to the company a loan of 10 per cent of their wages until January, 1894.

The answers are practically all in from the 15,000 men, and are unanimous, not to accept the reduction. The Nebraska members have substantially agreed on the loan proposition.

A great scheme of federation is also to be unfolded. If this succeeds, the employes will be able to resist lower wages indefinitely. The protection board meets here next Thursday to arrange the details of the federation plan, and present the result of the vote to the general manager of the Union Pacific. If their demands are not acceded to, a strike will certainly follow.

FORTUNE'S FAVORITE.

Resident of Webster Inherits the Snug Sum of $35,000

WORCESTER, Mass., Sept. 22.—Joseph Therique, for some time a resident of Webster, and now living on the Stone farm, near the lake, made claim 10 years ago as a legal heir of his grandfather, who was an officer at the military headquarters at Quebec. The amount left was $60,000.

His lawyer died soon after and the case has hung fire until this week, when a Canadian government agent came on, and the lucky man again made the deposition to sustain his right as one of the two lawful heirs. His brother and himself will inherit this snug sum, each $35,000.

BOYCOTT AT AUBURN.

People Who Are Connected With Scabs Let Severely Alone.

AUBURN, Me., Sept. 22.—The striking shoemakers have begun boycotting people who are taking the place of the strikers or any one connected with them.

A grocer, whose customers are principally shoemakers, was threatened with a boycott for buying cream from a man whose wife is employed in a stitching room where a strike is on.

OUTLOOK OBSCURE.

Repealers Think it is Darkness Before the Dawn.

CLOTURE RESOLUTION IS USELESS

Such a Measure Looked Upon With Suspicion.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—Those who look for an outcome of the senate silver debate within the near future console themselves with the reflection that it's darkest before dawn. They have need of such slender consolation as can be derived from this adage, for the outlook seems to grow more obscure with each day's prolongation of the struggle.

The introduction of a cloture resolution has not simplified matters to any great extent, for cloture can only be adopted by cloture—by the vice president putting the question point blank to the senate, and calling the roll and refusing to recognize senators who arise to address the chair, either for the purpose of speaking on the subject or of making dilatory motions. This being the case, the vice president might as well be asked to adopt this course on the repeal bill at first hand, instead of applying it to a measure designed to reach the repeal bill by a "circuitous treatment."

The Suggestion Is Obvious

Aside from this objection to the cloture plan there is a well defined suspicion that the broaching of the subject at this time and in this manner is not entirely disingenuous, although Mr. Platt's statement of the case yesterday was apparently candor and fairness personified. It is shrewdly suspected that if Republican senators, with a house bill repealing the federal election laws in prospect in the near future, were brought face to face with the question of adopting cloture as one of the rules of the senate, they would not be as ready to vote for it as they now are to advocate it when there is No Prospect of Its Passage.

This is certainly the inference from Mr. Frye's remark yesterday that the senate would have to sit up all night before the election laws could be repealed, and the evident favor with which this implied threat was received on the Republican side of the senate.

Mr. Voorhees maintains his belief in a favorable outcome of the struggle, notwithstanding the unpromising appearance, and it was noticed yesterday as a hopeful indication of success for the administration forces that Mr. Gorman was sitting alongside of Mr. Voorhees, and was giving him the advantage of his parliamentary shrewdness of management.

The committee on ways and means, having closed its hearings and its doors, is now discussing the question of raising the revenue. The large reduction which it is intended to make in the tariff rates and which will cause a large falling off of revenue before it goes into operation, renders it necessary to substitute some method of meeting this deficit. The Democratic members of the ways and means are not in complete accord at present as to how the revenue shall be raised. Several members of the committee, including McMillan, Turner and and Bryan, are in favor of increasing from 90 cents to $1.25 a gallon. They assume that this will increase the revenue on this article from $94,000,000, estimated for the next fiscal year, to $125,000,000.

They do not look favorably upon the proposition of David A. Wells, submitted to Secretary Carlisle, to double the tax on tobacco and malt liquors. His plan is to raise $64,000,000, annually from each of these items. The present tax realizes $32,000,000 on each article. These Democratic members hold that these articles are the poor man's luxuries, and therefore should be taxed at a minimum rate. Whisky they claim is not a luxury, and that the producer can readily stand the increase without raising the price to the consumer. In addition, they claim that it can be collected without any increased expense.

For an additional revenue which may be required from the falling off of customs the Democratic members, with one or two exceptions, regard a graduated income tax as the most equitable method of raising revenue which could be applied. The class of the population who have incomes upwards of $5000 a year they claim can well afford to contribute to the support of the government. While they admit that there are some features which are inquisitorial and offensive, the system would readily yield the revenue required, and out of a class of people

Who Could Well Afford to Pay.

This proposition will have ardent supporters among Democrats of the committee and in the house. It will be antagonized by many of the northern and eastern Democrats in co-operation with the Republican minority in the committee and house.

As the revenue to be raised will come almost wholly from those sections of the country and the south and southwest will be relieved in a great measure from this iniquitous income tax, the representatives from that section will largely give it their support. The Democratic members of the committee on ways and means already discover that they have a difficult problem to solve in framing a tariff reform bill which will produce the revenue required and satisfy the conflicting interests.

Highwaymen at Large.

HAVERHILL, Mass., Sept. 22.—The police have failed as yet to capture four highwaymen who held up hackman Edward M. Bickford near Dustin square last evening. Mr. Bickford is comfortable today. He does not think the men belong in this city, and states that he never saw them before. One of them he judged from his talk was a German.

Railroad Station Robbed.

HANOVER, N. H., Sept. 22.—The Boston and Maine station at Norwich, Vt., was entered by burglars early this morning. The money drawer was opened, but was found empty. It is thought that some tickets were taken. An unsuccessful attempt was made to enter the freight depot. There is no clue to the robbers.

Until ——!

Maud was the sweetest and the best;
Maud gave my heart the most unrest;
Of all maids Maud was loveliest—
Until I met Nan!

Then was sweet Nan the fairest maid,
Beauty was hers that ne'er could fade;
Girl of the experiment trade—
Until I met Fan!

Then—I'll confess it bold and free—
Fan was the maid of maids to me,
Down by the restless surging sea—
Until I met you!

Now I would swear that you are best;
You give my heart the most unrest;
You are by far the loveliest;
I swear I'll be true—
Until ——!

Something like 1,550,000 square miles of looking glass are manufactured annually in Europe.

It is said that the wife of a New York millionaire has for the last three years been traveling all over Europe trying to match a pearl.

Since the beginning of the century France has fallen from the second to the fourth place in point of population among European countries.

Butter oil is made by pressing the oil from American cotton seed. It is pure, nutritious vegetable oil, which is used in small quantities to soften the texture of oleomargarine.

In Austrian society it is the custom to take a partner for only one round of a dance. By this means ladies and gentlemen change partners five or six times in a single dance.

Though it is 14 years off, it has already been suggested that a celebration be made in 1907 of the three hundredth anniversary of the first English settlement in America, which was at Jamestown, Va., in 1607.

The Saxon days of the week were Saturn's day, presided over by Saturn; Sun's day, by the sun; Moon's day, by the moon; Tiu's day, by Mars; Woden's day, by Mercury; Thor's day, by Jupiter; and Friya's day, by Venus.

In noble Roman houses a slave was kept to read to the family while at their meals. Sometimes this office was performed by a member of the family. The Emperor Severus often read aloud while his wife and friends ate.

MAN'S INCONSISTENCIES.

A man can smile grimly under the tortures of the rack, but he cannot tread on a tin tack with his bare foot without a bitter howl.

A man can suffer death at the stake with the dignity of a martyr, but he cannot chase after his hat in a public road without looking ridiculous.

A man can suffer the amputation of a limb in heroic silence, but he cannot endure a mustard plaster on his chest without shrieking aloud for mercy.

A man can calculate to the uttermost farthing the cost of a Suez canal, but he cannot estimate the price of a woman's bonnet without egregious errors.

THE STOCK MARKET.

Dealings In Leading Securities In Boston and New York.

BOSTON, Sept. 22.—In the outside market call money is quoted at 8 to 10 per cent, and time money is nominally 6 per cent.

London came from ¼ to ½ higher this morning for all except Louisville and Nashville, which was 1 per cent lower. But as during the past week, the selling orders just about balanced the purchasing ones, so that the market here was dependent for movement upon itself. Here the conditions are a scarcity of floating stock, a gradual reduction of the short interest, easier money and strengthening banks, hardening exchange rates, a declining treasury balance and doubt and discouragement as to the situation in the senate. And the resultant is stagnation, so far as speculation goes.

The industrials were about the only shares in which anything was done on the local exchange during the morning. Lead was the feature, from its weakness, gossip having it that the next dividend on the common, due Nov. 1, would have to be passed. Opening here at 28, 1 below last sale in Boston and ½ below the close in New York, it dropped sharply to 25¾. Sugar held a secondary place. Its quotations were a trifle stronger for the common, the opening being ¼ above the final sale at 87. Distilling and Cattle Feeding opened at 23¾ as against the closing at 23½, and was in demand on western orders. General Electric started ¼ up at 47¼, but weakened to 47¼, while United States rubber was stronger at 33½. In railroad shares Atchison during the morning rose ¼ to 21¾. Chicago, Burlington and Quincy ¾ to 84¼. Union Pacific ¼ to 22 and New York and New England ¼ to 30¼.

INVALIDS!

Relieved of Their Wretchedness

By Paine's Celery Compound.

It Out-Ranks all Other Remedies.

An Ideal Food for the Tired and Worn Out.

Grateful to the Most Delicate Stomach.

Early Fall a Season to Get Strength.

Flabby Flesh and Weak Nerves Need Food.

The Sallow, Lean, and Weak Should Secure

Vigorous Body and Joyous Spirits Before Winter.

Sunshine and bright weather are the heritage from August to September; but this is a month of dangerous weakness to hundreds of people.

The first tendencies toward consumption, Bright's disease, and rheumatism are developed in these early fall days.

Nature is off her guard.

Rheumatism and neuralgia are notoriously diseases that begin in September and October.

The little signs of nervousness, of kidney trouble, and heart weakness should not be overlooked. Small ailments now become deep seated diseases in winter. Winter is for every one more or less of a battle for health and existence.

The stock of health laid up against winter emergencies must be secured now.

Headaches and loss of appetite are as easy to read as sign posts. Their invariable direction is that one is approaching nearer and nearer to breakdown and serious illness.

Following the modern medical knowledge that disease is due to poor nutrition of some organ, Paine's celery compound was first prescribed by Dartmouth's great professor, Dr. Phelps.

Results that have repeatedly astonished many for whom skilful physicians could do no more, confirm the wisdom of trusting all to nutrition—the complete and speedy nourishment of tissues, nerves, and nerve centres. Paine's celery compound supplies the material which the nervous system craves.

Pure blood and healthy nerve action is health.

Paine's celery compound is food for the nerves and nourishment for the blood.

Health, strength, and happiness have never had such an ally before as is offered by this great compound. It makes people well. sep23d

BOMB THROWN FROM THE CROWD.

An Attempt to Kill General Martinez de Campos.

AT BARCELONA.

During a Review of the Troops—Fatal Results Follow.

BARCELONA, Sept. 24.—Yesterday afternoon a review of the troops was arranged before General Martinez de Campos and the streets were crowded with people. The head of the parade had hardly passed the general when a bomb was thrown from the crowd. It struck near the man and exploded with tremendous force. A soldier of the civic guard was killed instantly and several were injured so badly that they will die. Martinez de Campos was thrown to the ground by the shock. He was picked up by officers of the staff and carried to his house. Aside from a wound in his arm and a few bruises, however, he was found to be uninjured.

The man who threw the bomb was caught by the crowd and was delivered to the police. He is said to have confessed during the night. He belongs to the gang of anarchists who have caused many explosions here recently.

The beginning of the parade was witnessed by many persons in carriages. The explosion of the bomb frightened the horses and they dashed through the crowds. Several staff officers were thrown and their horses also ran loose among the spectators. Twenty persons were hurt quite severely by the runaways and many more slightly. The name of the anarchist who threw the bomb is Pall. He says he glories in his deed. He says he intended to kill Martinez de Campos and his whole staff. In his house the police found last night a great quantity of most violent revolutionary literature. Two men who had lived with him have been arrested. It was learned this evening that Gen. Castos and Gen. Molina, who were with the captain's staff, received serious injuries.

MADRID, Sept. 24.—News of the attempt to kill Martinez de Campos and his staff was received from Barcelona last night. The order for a grand review of troops here today was revoked. The people are greatly excited. Crowds are waiting in the streets the arrival of the latest news. A strict watch is kept by the police on all Madrid anarchists.

NEW YORK ANARCHISTS

Get Into a Row—The Police Take a Hand.

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—Another furious row took place Saturday evening at the headquarters of the "Gruppe Proletariat," 11 Pike street, between the anarchists and the police and the enraged populace, who have been harassed past endurance by the anarchists.

The trouble had been going on all day, the anarchists being pelted with stones by small boys, and about 7.30 o'clock the anarchists got into a fierce fight among themselves, and the crowd outside their headquarters threw stones through the windows at them and a regular siege of the place followed.

The police entered the hall and arrested two men, and order was finally restored. No. 11 Pike street, after the battle looked as if it had gone through a siege. Several people were cut by the flying stones but no one was seriously hurt.

The Cholera Scourge.

HAMBURG, Sept. 24.—Several cases of cholera, two of them fatal, have been reported since yesterday morning. Several cholera patients previously reported have died in the last twenty-four hours. Five of the seven fresh cases appeared yesterday in the dock districts. The official list up to Friday evening were fifty cases and fifteen deaths.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 24.—There were 60 fresh cases of cholera here yesterday and 27 deaths. The cholera hospitals are treating 268 patients.

PARIS, Sept. 24.—Five persons died of cholera today in Brest department of Finistere.

MADRID, Sept. 24.—Eleven fresh cases of cholera and eight deaths were reported in Bilboa at noon today. Eleven deaths and 29 cases were reported from the other town in Biscay.

India Could Not Afford to Wait for Repeal of Sherman Act.

LONDON, Sept. 24.—The Marquis of Lansdowne, who is about to retire from the governor-generalship of India, speaking at a banquet in Simla, said that far from repenting the passage of the India silver currency act, he believed that the action taken was certain to succeed, and that it would prove the turning point in the commercial and financial history of India. The evils existing in the country, he said, were trifling as compared with those that would have been encountered if India had waited for the repeal of the Sherman act before taking the course pursued.

Arrested for Connection with a Murder.

BOSTON, Sept. 24.—The police have arrested Charles Duddy of Cambridgeport and Harry Angus for being connected with the murder of Daniel Cronin in a West End bar room last night. It is stated that Cronin was struck several times, but the last blow felled him to the floor, which was struck by Angus. He is a stone mason belonging in St. Louis and has been east but a short time. The exact nature of the charge against the prisoners will not be known until after an autopsy has been held.

Seven New Cases of Smallpox Sunday at New York.

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—Seven new cases of smallpox were reported by the board of health today. All the parties were removed to North Brothers island.

Mr. Carroll Accepts the Challenge.

LONDON, Sept. 24.—It is rumored that Royal Phelps Carroll, owner of the Navahoe, has accepted a challenge from the Earl of Dunraven, owner of the Valkyrie, to sail a race for the Brenton's reef cup in American waters next month.

Miners to Quit Work Today.

BRUSSELS, Sept. 24.—The delegates of the miners of the Borinage district, have resolved to proclaim a strike, and the men will be ordered to quit work tomorrow.

Gloucester Seamen Lost.

HAWKESBURY, N. S. Sept. 24.—The schooner Fernwood of Gloucester, Mass., from Bank Bradley with a cargo of codfish reports having lost two seamen named Nickerson and Norton of Gloucester, Mass., while preparing the vessel for sailing.

Noted English Civil Engineer Dead.

LONDON, Sept. 24.—Thomas Hawksley, F. R. S. of the R. G. S., one of the best civil engineers in the United Kingdom, died here to-day.

CHARGED WITH A KILLING.

Porch and Wendle Held for Causing the Death of John Crowley.

HARTFORD, Conn., Sept. 24.—Fred Porch and Sydney G. Wendle, charged with the murder of John Crowley, were tried before Justice Barnes in Bristol this morning. J. J. Jennings appeared for the state, and Senator Pierce and M. H. Holcomb for the prisoners.

Porch was charged with murder in the second degree.

Morris McCee testified that Crowley threw a beer mug in Porch's face on Monday night, and Porch hit him in the head four times with his fist. Wendle assisted in carrying the unconscious man out of the barroom.

Porch was held in $5,000 bonds, and Wendle as an accessory, in $500, for the December term of the superior court. Bonds were furnished, and the men were released.

The lawyers had an altercation at the hearing, and Porch's mother fainted.

Insane Prisoners.

HARTFORD, Conn., Sept. 24.—Drs. H. G. Howe and Joseph E. Root of this city, who were appointed by Governor Morris to examine nine inmates of the state prison, reported to be insane, submitted their findings to the governor Saturday afternoon. Five of the men were found by the commissioners to be insane, but the remaining four were not and will be continued in the prison. It is expected that the governor will soon issue an order for the removal of the insane convicts to Middletown.

Williams College Centennial.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Sept. 24.—President Cleveland will not be able to attend the Williams college centennial, which is to be celebrated at Williamstown October 8, 9 and 10. The situation in Washington is such that he cannot leave. President Carter has received a letter expressing the reluctancy of Mr. Cleveland to abandon the trip. But there will be no lack of distinguished men at the centennial. Presidents Dwight of Yale, Elliot of Harvard, Andrews of Brown, Tucker of Dartmouth, Smith of Trinity, Low of Columbia, Gilman of John Hopkins, Hall of Clark university, Pepper of the University of Pennsylvania.

The State Fair Deficit.

MERIDEN, Sept. 24.—The State Fair association officers estimate that the deficit from this year's fair will be less than that of 1892 and will not exceed $600. The total receipts for the four days from attendance were $5,542.60 as against $7,754 last year. The saving in expenses has been large this year. It is shown, also, that Meriden practically supports the fair, as the railroad coupons number only 3,500, and the remainder of the receipts must necessarily have come from the city.

The Ocean Flyers.

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—The American liner Paris arrived here Saturday morning from Southampton after a voyage of 6 days, 10 hours and 20 minutes. Her daily runs were: 4[illegible], 457, 46[illegible], 4[illegible], 477, 480 and 254.

The Campania, which came from Queenstown, made the trip in 5 days, 15 hours and 9 minutes. Her runs were: 461, 4[illegible], 501, 497, 507 and 30[illegible].

Mill Work This Week.

NEW [illegible], Sept. 24.—For the first time since the depression in business set in there is an excellent prospect for the mill operatives. This week the factories, with but a very few exceptions, will be run on full time.

Since the dull times began the mills have been run only enough to fill the few orders on hand, but beginning tomorrow operations will be conducted the same as before the depression.

The First Oleomargarine Case.

BIRMINGHAM, Conn., Sept. 24.—John Berry, grocer, who is the only man in Connecticut holding a license to sell oleomargarine under the new law, was arrested and brought before Judge Gager in the town court Saturday morning, charged with five violations of the law.

Commissioner Winslow and Assistant Commissioner Eaton were present. The case was postponed until next Wednesday at 10.30 a. m.

SMALL DUTY TO BE PUT ON SUGAR.

Beginning the Work of Putting the Tariff Bill Into Shape.

COMMITTEE MEMBERS TALK.

Declarations of National Democratic Platform to Be Fulfilled.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—This week will see the beginning of the work of putting into shape the tariff bill to be reported by the house committee on ways and means. Reports of the hearings held by the committee have not all been printed, and the committee is still receiving written arguments from persons who failed to appear in person.

It is admitted that in some way at least $60,000,000 of additional annual revenue must be provided to meet the expenses of the government, and unless the sinking fund law is suspended, or repealed, the deficit will amount to over $100,000,000. How this is to be done is the question the committee must answer by its work.

One of the leading members of the committee, while questioned, said that the argument of the committee of manufacturers and producers for the retention of the present duty upon certain articles would not influence the committee's action. He believed the bill would embrace a general scheme of reduced duties, the change to be made with no reference to the persons or industries affected.

When asked if the committee would adopt the suggestion of David A. Wells, to increase the internal revenue taxes, he replied: "We must have more money from some source, and I do not know any other way to reach it than by that scheme."

The speaker represents a district in which the internal revenue laws are generally supposed to be regarded as oppressive and unjust.

Chairman Wilson has been quoted as saying: "The tariff bill which the committee will report will fulfil in every respect the declarations of the national democratic platform" on the subject.

A prominent member said he believed a small duty would be laid on sugar.

Representative Wilson declined to set a date for the introduction of the bill, but intimated that it would not be ready by November 1. A month later is believed to be nearer the time when it may be expected. An impression prevails that the first of January, 1895, will be agreed upon by the committee as the date for putting the law into effect.

PLUNGED INTO THE LAKE.

Narrow Escape of a Ballooning Party from Death at Chicago.

CHICAGO, Ill., Sept. 24.—Prof. King and Mrs. Morris, who made a balloon ascension from the fair grounds Friday, had a terrible experience, and narrowly escaped death from drowning, as the balloon descended into the lake soon after the start.

There was great excitement among the people on shore, and the internal revenue cutter Andy Johnson started after the balloon. Commander Davis was one of those who saw the balloon drop from the clouds into the lake, and he did not take much urging to give orders to get up [illegible] commands.

The Andy Johnson was lying near the battleship Illinois, the government naval exhibit at the lake front, was up and the prow of the cutter was soon plowing its way through the seething waters of the lake. But the Andy Johnson is a slow boat at best. She can only go about ten miles an hour at a pinch, and that would not be fast enough to let her catch up with the balloon. It was 6.20 when she started from her moorings. The balloon was then twenty or twenty-five miles from the World's fair grounds. Darkness was gathering over the waters of the lake. There was little hope of rescuing the two occupants of the frail basket, which was bobbing up and down between sky and water, urged along by the gale.

At midnight the revenue cutter returned to its moorings, having on board Prof. King and Miss Morris. The revenue cutter caught up with the air ship fifteen miles northeast of the mouth of the Chicago river off Grosse Point lighthouse. The balloon was still intact and bounding along on the top of the waves, sometimes rising 100 feet into the air, but more often dragging the car along through the breakers.

A boat put off from the Andy Johnson and rescued the aeronaut and his companion from the basket. The balloon rose in the air and was lost sight of. Prof. King and Miss Morris were more dead than alive from fright and exposure. They were drenched through with water from the lake and that which fell from the sky. Their sufferings were intense.

George Dixon and Solly Smith.

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—Many sporting men were attracted to the island today by the arrival at their headquarters here, of George Dixon and Solly Smith, the principals in tomorrow night's great fight. Dixon came from Haggett's Pond, Mass., where he has been training. He has devoted his time assiduously to getting in shape for this fight, and he is in fine condition. Dixon was accompanied by Tom O'Rourke, his manager, Johnny Havlin, his trainer, Sun Ashe, his sparring partner, and a host of Boston sporting men, among whom were Dan Saunders, Joe Lewis, Jimmy Colville, Mike Bradley of Lawrence, Doc Ordway, Howie Hodgkins, Ben Benton, Handsome Dan Murphy, Captain Cook, Jake Morse and Joe Tuttle. The Boston sports said that they were prepared to go to the limit in backing Dixon and the local judges of pugilistic form were unanimous in the opinion that even the odds about his chances was not much of a risk.

Russian Naval Vessel Believed to Be Lost.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 24.—The iron monitor Rousalka of the Russian navy is believed to have gone down in a storm in the Gulf of Finland while on her way from Reval to Helsingfors. Much wreckage, apparently from her, has been washed ashore, and the body of a Russian marine was picked up today on the coast, almost opposite the point where she must have been during the gale several days ago. The Rousalka put to sea with 12 officers and 166 men, all of whom are believed to have been lost. She was built 26 years ago and was counted among Russia's coast defense armored ships.

BISMARCK AND THE EMPEROR.

Trying to Affect a Reconciliation Between The Two.

BISMARCK SUSPICIOUS.

Regards the Attentions Now Bestowed as Too Ostentatious.

[Copyright by U. P. A.]

BERLIN, Sept. 24.—The arrival of Count Herbert Bismarck and Count Rantzau, his brother-in-law, in Kissengen yesterday is not expected to help much in bringing the emperor and Prince Bismarck together. Many hope, however, that stronger influences will prevail, and that the reconciliation will soon be accomplished.

Emperor Franz Joseph and the king of Saxony have sent to Kissengen sympathetic enquiries after the ex chancellor's health, and have suggested the desirability that Prince Bismarck make the next advances. The grand duke of Baden and the king of Wurtemburg are working with energy to the same end. Still Bismarck holds back, seemingly reluctant to answer the emperor's advances before extorting such homage as no sovereign has ever paid a subject. The Germans from Kissengen report him as irritated and suspicious. He is said to regard the attention now bestowed on him by crowned heads as too ostentatious. They are suggestive, he thinks, of a plan to extinguish him entirely as a political factor. He is recovering his strength quite rapidly now, and is sensitive about being treated as an honored memory. He means to re-assert himself as a powerful element in German politics. This is the sentiment on which his son and son-in-law with others of the circle, rely to keep him on the old line of opposition to the government. It would bitterly disappoint the whole country if they succeed, and the emperor's overtures be rejected. The newspapers of all political tendencies, praise the emperor for having taken the initiative and agree in hoping that the prince will not deny the nation the pleasure of witnessing the end of the feud between Berlin and Friedrichsruhe.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

Nothing Can Be Substituted for the Royal Baking Powder and Give as Good Results.

No other leavening agent will make such light, sweet, delicious, wholesome food.

If some grocer urge another baking powder upon you, it is because of the greater profit upon it. This of itself is evidence of the superiority of the "Royal." To give greater profit the other must be a lower cost powder, and to cost less it must be made with cheaper and inferior materials, and thus, though selling for the same, give less value to the consumer.

To insure the finest cake, the most wholesome food, be sure that no substitute for Royal Baking Powder is accepted by you.

NEED NOT TAKE OUT PAPERS.

If Married to Naturalized Husbands That is Enough.

In Hartford the opinion of Attorney J. H. Brocklesby has been obtained by Town Clerk Higgins in regard to the registration of foreign born women. The election is to occur in that place today. The opinion rendered is substantially as follows:

Any foreign born woman who comes here under eighteen years of age must go through the same course as a man under like circumstances—that is, she must take out only one, the last naturalization paper.

If she is over eighteen and unmarried it will be necessary for her to take out both papers, the same as a man.

If a foreign born woman is married to a citizen of the United States, no matter whether he be naturalized or a native born citizen, she becomes a voter by such marriage.

HUNTING GAME BIRDS.

How the Law Is Violated Near New Haven—Quail Very Scarce—A Pair of Terms.

On Sunday, October 1, the close season on woodcock, quail and ruffled grouse (or partridge), says The New Haven Register, will terminate, and the gunners will resume shooting them. Many of the hunters who respect the law say that these birds have been killed for the past two weeks in the vicinity of New Haven, and although there is a fine of $25, one half going to the informant, no complaint has been made. It was stated that eight woodcock had been killed near Montowese. More birds have been killed right around New Haven, it is said, than twenty miles inland. Hunters claim that there is no place in the state where the law is so openly violated, and they long for as good protection as is given in Hartford and vicinity. The penalties provided for shooting game out of season is as follows:

Woodcock, quail, ruffled grouse (called partridge), gray squirrels, between January 1 and October 1, $25.

Ducks, May, June, July and August, $7. Can not be shot from boats propelled by steam or sail.

Rail, January 1 to August 20.

No law on plover, snipe or any of the so-called shore, marsh or beach birds, excepting rail, nor on wild pigeons.

Nightingale, bluebird, Baltimore oriole, finch, thrush, lark, sparrow, catbird, wren, martin, swallow, any species of woodpecker, bobolink or rice bird, February 1 to September 1, $1.

Destroying or taking song and insectivorous birds, except on owners' premises, prohibited, $5.

Snaring is prohibited, except on owners' premises or premises under lease, and by members of the owner's or lessee's family, $10.

Transportation of game birds out of the state forbidden, $7 to $50.

The use of ferrets for taking rabbits is forbidden, except upon owners' lands, $7.

Sunday shooting forbidden, $25.

Trout from July 1 to April 1, and only with hook and line, $50.

Hunting on posted grounds, $7 to $25.

Quail are likely to be scarce owing to the severity of the winter of '92 and '93. The long continuance of snow prevented the quail from getting food and large numbers starved.

Woodcock, partridges and squirrel are reported about as plentiful as last season. Rail are fairly plentiful up on the Quinnipiac meadows. Thomas Coyne and Edward Newton shot forty-seven last week, and Frank Sherman and John Savage secured thirty-nine.

Injured Innocence.

The request of Spiker Murphy to see General Viall at the Rhode Island state prison was gratified Thursday morning and the results were scarcely what the prison officials expected.

Murphy met General Viall with a most surprised appearance and pretended the innocence of a child. He was amazed that there should have ever been a breath of suspicion aroused that he was in any way connected with Ellwood of the plot to escape. He could see no reason for the punishment that he was subjected to, and he told General Viall in the most childlike way that he felt aggrieved at the insult that had been heaped upon him.

General Viall says that that is Murphy's habitual characteristic, and he has carried it so far that the prisoners, and especially the long term ones, have become thoroughly disgusted with him.

NEW BOOKS.

GLIMPSES THROUGH LIFE'S WINDOWS. Selections from the writings of the Rev. J. R. Miller, D.D., by Evelyn L. Fryer, with portrait. Published by T. Y. Crowell & Co. Boston and New York.

This little volume contains about two hundred select thoughts from the sermons of Dr. Miller with apt and enforcing anecdotes. The book is prettily and attractively printed and bound, and it will prove acceptable to the large and ever increasing circle of readers whom Dr. Miller has delighted and instructed through his other works. For sale by Cranston & Co.

THE MUSICAL JOURNEY OF DOROTHY AND DELIA, by Bradley Gilman, with illustrations by Francis T. Atwood. T. Y. Crowell & Co., publishers, New York and Boston.

This is a pretty and attractive book, the aim of which is both for the amusement and instruction of its readers. It is as entertaining as "Alice's Adventures in Wonderland," and is also valuable as illustrating and "lighting up" the rudiments of music. It is simple, unetchnical, full of quaint wit, and bubbling over with sympathetic descriptions. It will be appreciated by all young students of music and will lighten many weary hours. For sale by Noyes & Davis.

MONEY, SILVER AND FINANCE, by J. Howard Cowperthwait: Question of the day series. G. P. Putnam & Sons, publishers, 27 West Twenty-third street, New York.

This is a book written by a business man upon this vital subject from a business point of view; and the subject is so plainly and comprehensively handled that any man of ordinary intelligence can grasp it. The author makes no claim to originality, but he brings to bear on the free silver coinage heresy a mass of facts, effectively presenting to the strong common sense of the American people the ludicrous spectacle of thousands of men devoting their time and labor to the taking of silver out of the mines, where it could do no harm, for the purpose of placing it in the treasury's vaults, whence the monstrous bulk menaces the industries and the general prosperity of the country. For sale by Cranston & Co.

PHILLIPS BROOKS YEAR BOOK, selections from his writings by H. L. S. and L. H. S. E. P. Dutton & Co., publishers, 31 West Twenty-third street, New York.

The editors say: "To the friends of Bishop Brooks this little book will come as no stranger. His sermons have had such living qualities in them that they are read and re-read by many a one who never came under the influence of his marvelous personality. The aim of the book is to group together cognate thoughts in sequence of time, as well as to represent fairly this man of large love for humanity and of absolute surrender to his Master." The book is daintily bound in white and green, with ornamentation in gold, with a photograph of Bishop Brooks on the cover, and is well designed for a gift book. For sale by Cranston & Co.

"NOT ANGELS QUITE," by Nathan Haskell Dole; Lee & Shepard, Boston.

A novel which is sure to excite discussion and comment. It deals with four affinities, who come perilously near ultimating, but who, all in good time, are led to realize their position, to change partners, marry, and presumably live happy ever after. As the title implies they are well fed, every day mortals, with healthy if selfish interests, in refreshing contrast to the usual characters whose evanescent shadows are projected through the rapid pages of the regulation modern novel. The story furnishes a vehicle for the author's expressions concerning nationalism, hypnotism, and many another modern ism, as well as for the exploiting of ideas in rhymes which are really not commensurate with the prose merits of the book. The story abounds in epigrams of Parisian neatness, New York point, and Boston finish; and although the author is somewhat spendthrift with his humor, probably the majority of readers will consider this at the most a venial fault. For sale by Noyes & Davis.

Roland's Breach, the natural mountain pass leading from France into Spain through the Pyrenees, is 1,200 feet broad, 300 feet high and 60 feet long.

The pyramid of Cholula stands on a base 480 yards each way. It was 180 feet high and contains 7,000,000 cubic yards of brick.

The fragile and paradoxical wonder, the "snow plant," which is found in the Sierra Nevada mountains, is pronounced by western botanists as probably our most remarkable plant.

HOKE SMITH TALKS.

The Secretary Says He Is In Favor of Pensions.

ONLY TRYING TO PURGE THE LIST.

Wants Only the Undeserving Removed From the Rolls.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—In an interview published in the Post, Secretary Smith defines at length his position on the question of pensions. He says it is wrong to suppose that he is a common enemy to pensions. He actually and conscientiously believes that there have crept upon the pension rolls, by various rules of pension commissioners and the work of examiners and other officers of the pension bureau, an enormous number of persons who are not entitled to pensions. "These are the ones I am after," said the secretary, "and they are the ones we intend to weed out of the pension list, if they reduce the total number of pensioners one-half."

Referring to the order of Commissioner Lochren, directing that all pensioners whose claims were not good upon the presentation made should be dropped from the rolls for a period of 60 days, when they or suffer permanent suspension, Secretary Smith stated that this action was taken when he was absent from Washington, and that it did not meet his approval. He believed that, whether there was authority or not, a pensioner after once being placed upon the rolls should have notice before being dropped.

Questioned as to the effect of the modified order, the secretary stated that about one-half of those who were placed upon the list of suspected frauds, and who were given notice that they must furnish proof of their right to receive pensions, were dropped or would be dropped at the end of the time within which proof was required, and that at least half of those who were dropped would never be able to furnish satisfactory evidence that they were entitled to pensions. The effect of this would be that at least one-fourth, if not fully one-half, of those who are placed upon the list for suspension are Finally Deprived of Their Pensions.

The secretary declared that it was a great mistake to suppose that he intends to decrease pension expenditures by depriving those who were entitled to pensions under the law of their just rewards. He declared with earnestness that he was not opposed to pensions.

Mr. Smith said: "I am determined that all pensioners now upon the rolls on the pretext that they are suffering from disability, received either in the line of duty or since the war, shall prove their alleged disability prescribed as pensionable under the act of 1890. We shall go ahead in our work of purging the pension rolls, and I might add that we have only begun the work, and that its fruits are ample for the efforts put forth."

BORING FOR A WELL

But Vein of Natural Gas Was Struck at Saratoga.

SARATOGA, N. Y., Sept. 24.—While boring for a well on the farm of Rev. Samuel McChesney, at Malta Ridge, near here, a vein of natural gas was struck. The volatile fluid was found at a depth of 59 feet and in hard pan. Drilling had only been begun when the vein was struck. A match applied to the gas caused it to shoot up a brilliant blaze six feet in the air, the spring roaring loudly.

The natural gas is different in every respect from the carbonic acid gas which impregnates Saratoga mineral waters. Last spring the villages of Saratoga and Ballston refused to grant franchises for piping those villages for natural gas on the plea that it could not be found in that vicinity. The discovery of this well suggests the fact that there might be other wells of the same character found in close proximity to this one, and if so, natural gas will be carried in pipes to Saratoga and used as fuel and for illuminating purposes.

The natural gas well is three miles south of the carbonic acid gas well recently discovered in Saratoga. The flow of gas there is still unchecked, and a building to contain the machinery to compress it for commercial purposes is in erection. Crowds of people have come from all directions to gaze on the latest phenomenon that Saratoga county has produced.

THE DEADLY ELECTRIC.

A Mother's Heroism Saves Her Child From an Awful Death.

BOSTON, Sept. 24.—A mother's heroic rescue of her infant from instant death yesterday may result in the sacrifice of her own life. The mother and child are at the City Hospital, the mother with three of her ribs crushed in, the child suffering from severe internal hurts.

Mrs. Elizabeth Ober, a young woman was standing in the doorway of her home on Derby place, watching her 3-year-old daughter playing on the sidewalk. Her attention was diverted from the child for several minutes, and when she turned to look for the infant she was horrified to see the child in the center of the car track on Washington street.

A short distance away from the child an electric car was approaching at a high rate of speed. The motorman evidently had not seen the child. The frantic mother rushed into the street and screamed, but still the motorman appeared unconscious of the peril.

As the car approached to within 10 or 12 feet of the babe, the mother dashed forward, seized the child by the waist, and then endeavored to cross the track. She was too late. The car came on under slackened speed, but the motorman was unable to control the momentum it had gained, and the iron guard struck the mother, throwing her, with the babe held tightly in her arms, to the ground.

The mother struck the paved surface with her child above her head, as if to shield it from harm. Still the car came on. The guard pushed against the prostrate woman with cruel force, tearing the clothing from her body and causing her to release her hold upon her child. The babe fell out of harm's way, but sustained serious injuries which may result in its death.

The mother, when the car came to a standstill, was caught under the latticed guard. The horror of the situation, coupled with the injuries she had received, had bereft the woman of her senses, and she rested unconscious upon the track.

The horrified spectators rushed to the assistance of the woman and child, but the immediate danger was over. Tenderly, however, they took the mangled form and bore it to a store in the near vicinity. Restoratives were applied by a physician and the woman revived.

Mrs. Ober's condition is very critical. In addition to the three broken ribs she has internal injuries. The child was badly bruised and also injured internally.

QUESTION OF AUTHORITY.

Selectmen and Road Commissioners at Loggerheads in Derry.

EXETER, N. H., Sept. 24.—The town of Derry presents questions not unlikely to call for the official interpretation of an act passed by the last legislature under which every town is constituted one highway district, and the maintenance of all roads and bridges is committed to agents, not exceeding three in number, chosen at the annual town meeting and empowered to employ the necessary labor and to purchase needed material and supplies.

Each town is compelled to raise in money for the express purpose of highway maintenance one-quarter of 1 per cent of its valuation, providing such levy does not exceed $60 per mile of highway within its limits. The agents shall be sworn to the faithful discharge of their duties, and give bonds to the satisfaction of the selectmen by whom their compensation is fixed and to whom they are responsible for their expenditure and the "faithful discharge of their duties generally." They shall receive no money except on the order of the selectmen.

In Derry the selectmen have ordered Road Commissioners Priest and Webster to stop work upon the highways, and have stated that the town will pay no more bills of their contraction. The reason ascribed for the selectmen's action is dissatisfaction with the localities selected by the commissioners for improvement.

It is thought by well-posted lawyers that the selectmen have exceeded their authority. These gentlemen take the ground that road commissioners are responsible to selectmen simply for the honest and faithful discharge of their duties, and are otherwise unhampered and subject to no dictation as to how, when or where their duties shall be performed.

SLIPPERY CUSTOMER.

The Yacht Valkyrie Admired by Crowds of Enthusiastic New Yorkers.

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—The Valkyrie has been moved up from her birth of Friday to a point 300 yards off the dock of the Atlantic Yacht club. She looked more like a racer than when she arrived under her jury rig. All day Yesterday she was surrounded by small boats and tugs. While the Valkyrie was a shapely looking boat under her short rigs he is still more so now with the big racing main boom in place and the racing topmast housed at the masthead. The deck had been scrubbed down and but few traces were left of the stormy voyage. All of the stays were stripped of their weather wraps and they looked far better than when ribbons were flying from them in all directions.

She is no doubt a slippery looking customer, and those who saw here were inclined to forget that they had been nearly as enthusiastic over the Thistle when she first came to this country and looked upon the cup as lost before the race was sailed. They forget, too, the way in which they had admired the lines of the Valkyrie when she lay off Bay Ridge at the time of the trial races. It has now been decided that the Valkyrie will take several spins down the bay before she is hauled into the dry dock to prepare for the races, and it is possible that she may go out on Monday, although the first trip may not take place until Tuesday.

Punch Bowl For Castine.

CASTINE, Me., Sept. 24.—A committee appointed by the town of Castine has ordered an elegant silver punch bowl from Tiffany of New York, to be presented to the gunboat Castine, which made such a fine record in her trial last week. Secretary Herbert will be asked to allow the gunboat to visit Castine so that the presentation may be made in a fitting manner. It will cost $427, and will be appropriately inscribed.

Refuse to Accept a Cut.

EVANSVILLE, Ind., Sept. 24.—Information received from Paducah this morning is to the effect that the Ohio Valley railroad employes, at a meeting held Friday night, refused to accept the proposed cut of 10 per cent in wages, to take effect Oct. 1, and appointed a committee to notify the company of their decision.

MYSTERY CLEARED UP.

Herr Bodnar, Hungarian Minister, Reported Still Alive.

LONDON, Sept. 24.—The mystery surrounding the disappearance of Herr Julius Bodnar, councillor of the Hungarian ministry of commerce, bids fair to be shortly cleared up. In fact it is known now that he was not drowned, as the police had concluded, and that he is somewhere on the continent.

Herr Bodnar was sent by his government on an official visit to Chicago, and so far as known, performed the duties of his position to the satisfaction of everybody. Toward the end of August he sailed from New York on the steamer Lahn and arrived safely at Southampton, but when the Lahn proceeded on her voyage to Bremen, Herr Bodnar was missing.

It was thought at first that he had been lured away from the vessel, and then murdered and robbed. The Austrian government requested the English police to investigate, and they did so with the result of arriving at the conclusion that the murder and robbery theory were untenable.

Further investigation led them to believe that Herr Bodnar had fallen overboard from the steamer while she was lying at Southampton, and that in the confusion attending the landing of passengers he was drowned without the accident being noticed.

A few days ago, however, the ministry of commerce at Buda-Pesth, Hungary, received, presumably from Herr Bodnar himself, a sum of money to repay the money advanced by the ministry for his travelling expenses to Chicago and return. This fact was communicated to the police, who again investigated the case.

They traced Herr Bodnar to Ostend, Belgium, discovering that he had been accompanied by a woman on his journey to that place. The woman traveled under an assumed name, and her right name has not been made public.

REPORTS FROM PARIS

Say Uncle Sam Tried to Float a Loan of $50,000,000 There.

LONDON, Sept. 24.—A dispatch to The Economist from Paris says that the negotiations started by the United States to raise a loan of $50,000,000 in gold at 2 1-2 per cent having collapsed, through the demands of the syndicate that was to advance the loan, and the intervention of the French government.

The dispatch adds that the government wanted reductions made in the McKinley tariff on French goods imported into the United States in return for permitting the official listing of the proposed bonds at the Paris bourse. The United States government refuses to treat on that basis. According to the dispatch, overtures have been made since in London for raising the loan.

SING ME A SONG.

Sing me a song, some old, loved tune,
To ease my heart of its weight and care;
Sing as you did when the world was June,
With glorious sun or silver moon,
And the perfume of flowers was in the air.

Sing me a song; some little air
That you used to sing in the long ago,
When you were younger, but not more fair,
And we knew naught of the burden of care.
Sing sweet and soft and low.

Sing me a song, then we'll say good night.
We'll say good night with a tear and a sigh,
To our own June time, when the world was bright
With summer sun or soft starlight.
We'll say good night and goodby, goodby.
—George F. Brennan in Brooklyn Eagle.

A WILD NIGHT.

An engineers' party of one of the big mines in Sonora, Mexico, were going into Nogales, A. T., to spend a few days and rest from the hard labor they had put in during several weeks. They rode north all day and scarcely exchanged a word between one another, but as they got toward their destination it began to grow dark, and then an argument arose. Some wanted to push on and get into the United States, which was still about 18 miles away, and others wanted to go into camp just where they were and move on again early in the morning.

Both plans met opposition from a few, and then one member of the party said he knew where there was a house at which they could stop. He had never stopped there, but he had seen the place from a distance and had been told that it was a sort of tavern. The plan seemed a good one, and all were willing to go off the road and find comfort for the night.

Then the man who knew of the place began to describe the location exactly. All listened attentively, and when he had finished one member of the party, Fred Brewster by name, said: "Boys, I ain't in it. You fellows go to your hotel, but I'll ride all the way to Nogales by myself before I go there."

"Why, what's the matter?" all asked at once.

"Well, I can't tell you in a few words, but I have been there once, and I will never go there again unless I am carried."

All became excited at once and wanted to know all about it, and at the same time they made up their minds to go to the place. But they did not like to leave Fred on the road and urged him to come along. They said there was no danger with such a crowd, and they were all well armed and good fighters.

"But you can't fight with what you find there," said Fred.

This remark made the others only more curious, but they told Fred to hurry up and give his reasons, as they would have to be moving along in a minute.

"Well, fellows, I'll tell you," said Fred hesitatingly, "but the fact is, the place is haunted, and I won't go there; so goodby."

A change came over the crowd in an instant, and all called loudly to Fred, who had started off on his horse, to come back.

"I guess we won't go to that place tonight," said one member of the party, and all came to the same conclusion in a moment. Fred came back, and it was then agreed to camp where they were. But a strange silence had fallen over the party at the mention of a ghost. The idea of confronting the supernatural will shake the nerves of the oldest plainsman.

As the fire was being built and the work of fixing for the night proceeded with, all who came near to Fred told him how glad they were that he had mentioned the fact about the haunted house. Not that they were afraid of ghosts. Oh, no! But a place of that kind could not be comfortable after it had such a name.

After supper had been disposed of and clouds of tobacco smoke were mingling with the glare from the campfire, the crowd revived a little and asked Fred to tell the story of his experience in the haunted building, but all the time every man was looking over his shoulder at frequent intervals. Still the story had to come, and as Fred had aroused the curiosity of the crowd he knew there was no use to try to get out of it, so he proceeded at once when he had found a comfortable spot on his blanket, where he could look into the fire and see the wreaths of smoke curl upward until they mingled with the stars.

"It's only a couple of months ago," commenced Fred, "since I was at that place, and why I am here now is more than I understand. I didn't say anything about it at the time, because you know a fellow don't like to speak of such things.

"But I was caught out one evening over there on the desert and was about to make my bed on the horse blanket when I saw the house from a distance and thought I might be able to get some sort of lodging there, so I went in that direction. Before I got to the place I struck a good, well marked road and wondered why I had never heard there was a road over that way. But I didn't bother very much, as I was too glad to get to the place, which, as I neared, I saw to be quite a large building. When I got up to it I found that it was a hotel [illegible] seemed to be in a prosperous condition.

"The landlord came out and took my horse, telling me to go into the front door, where I was met by his wife, who proved to be a kind, good natured lady and seemed anxious to do everything she could for me. They got me a very good supper, and we sat in the corridor talking about different things until it grew quite late.

"Both were so good natured and pleasant that I hated to leave them, but when I said I wished to retire they led me across a large clean court with a fountain playing in the center and trees and flowers blooming everywhere.

"My rooms were large and furnished in a substantial manner, but somehow they looked very old fashioned, and the whitewash on the walls was smooth, but a sort of gray in color, as if from age. There were no pictures of any kind on the walls, and the only relief to the large blank spaces was the shining brass crucifix. It seemed to be looking at me while I was looking about the rooms and stirring the fire, which was necessary because the place is high and the nights are cold.

"It must have been about midnight when I blew out the candle and got into bed. Oh, how cold the sheets were. It made me feel as if I was getting into a coffin. But it did not make much difference, and I was soon dozing off, but I was too tired to go to sleep at once.

"As I lay there it seemed to me I saw a pink flame come from the candle and rise up toward the ceiling, where it disappeared. Then another came, and they kept coming, but I thought I must be very fatigued and worn out, and that they were the result of my imagination. Then some animal seemed to rush across the fireplace, but when I looked all I saw was a pile of red embers and the corners of the room filled with dark, impenetrable shadows. I listened, but as no sound struck my ear I thought I had better give myself a rest and turned my face to the wall and went to sleep in an instant.

"I may have slept several hours, and it may have been only a few minutes, but I suddenly came to my senses and found the room filled with a peculiar red glare that seemed to come from everywhere at once. Then I heard strange sounds, as if there were people in the rooms. But I couldn't see any, and I might as well say that I began to feel very queer and reached for my revolvers, but found that I had left them in my saddle. But I had my knife, which I took hold of and kept ready for any emergency.

"The silence was unbroken for a long time, and then I heard one of the most unearthly yells that ever struck my ears. It seemed just outside of my door, so I got up and peeped out. But all was quiet, and the fountain was splashing in the moonlight, and the water in the basin was sparkling cheerfully. It did not seem as if there was anything wrong, but I determined to ask the landlord about it and went across the court to find him. It was very cold, and as I called to him my teeth chattered dreadfully. No answer came to my call, so I went back to my room and put on more clothes.

"Then I walked all over the house, but as I did not know where the landlord's room was of course I couldn't find him.

"I had reached the front hall where I entered the building and was debating what to do when that unearthly howl reached my ears again. This time it was just in front of the door, and I opened it as quick as I could so as to see what was there.

"But it was the same as before. I looked over the desert for miles on one side, and on the other the view was broken by the mountains, which came to within a short distance of the house. Seeing nothing, I stepped outside, my knife in my hand, and looked around.

"Before I could realize what was going to happen I saw two enormous panthers come from somewhere. They were standing on their hind legs and growling ferociously.

"A moment later I was paralyzed with fear and then turned to the door so as to get inside and escape the monsters. But horror! The door had blown shut and the latch had caught on the inside, so there was no way to open it. There may have been some string or other arrangement, but I did not know where to find it, so was at the mercy of the animals.

"There was nothing to do but fight, so I took a firmer grip on my knife and waited for the attack, but felt that it was certain death to me. The beasts were the largest I ever saw, and they were beside me in an instant. The largest one made a jump for me, and I dealt it a blow over the heart that I thought settled it, for it rolled over on the ground and laid still. The other was frightened for a few minutes and hesitated about attacking me, but I now had hope, with only one to fight.

"How I finished the animal is more than I can tell, as my memory is very dull on that point. But he made a rush at me which I had to dodge, and I made an attempt to get behind him. I had almost succeeded and could have done my work right there, but my foot slipped, and I fell down, and before I could get to my feet the panther jumped on me. But in some strange way he jumped for my feet, and I got hold of his tail and commenced gashing his hind legs with my knife.

"For several minutes the air seemed in a whirl, and I was all mixed up with my antagonist, but unable to get in a telling cut. We fought and rolled over on the ground until I was covered with wounds, but at last I saw my chance and plunged my knife in the animal's stomach and gave a downward rip. It did the work enough to let me get up and find the animal's heart with the steel.

"I looked at my two victims a moment and then started to awaken the landlord by pounding on the door.

"Suddenly I was grabbed from behind with terrible force, and turning around saw that both of the animals I had left for dead had got up again and were about to make short work of me.

"I had no show this time and calmly waited for the end to come. Both the panthers got hold of me and started for the mountains, dragging me over the stones and logs as if I was a feather, and the speed they made seemed swift as lightning. I had no idea of where I was going and didn't care, as I had no hope of escape and fully expected to be taken to the panthers' lair and devoured.

"I was right about the place, because I was soon dragged to a sort of gorge that had a cavern at one end. I was taken to this place and laid on the ground, and both my enemies sat and looked at me.

"Somehow I was not hurt very much and was able to move easily. I made an attempt to sit up, but was promptly pushed back by the larger of the panthers. Then both began to howl, and near by I could hear other howls that proved to be those of cubs. The little fellows came out and wanted to make a meal of me right there, but were stopped for some reason by the older ones.

"What was to be done with me was now a most important question to me. The old ones did not seem as if they wanted to devour me but let the cubs do it. But this the cubs objected to and commenced on my feet, which were badly bitten before the old ones could stop them. Then one of the boldest of the cubs made a rush for my throat, but I kept him away with my arm.

"This seemed to anger the old panthers, for they chased the young ones back to the cave and then took hold of me again and started somewhere.

"They went faster than before, and it was not long, although it seemed ages to me, before I was laid down on the ground. I opened my eyes and found that I was in front of the door of the hotel. I looked again and saw that it was open, and that the panthers were sitting down and watching me closely. But the temptation was too great, and I had to seize the chance of escape, although it looked like certain death.

"I made a sudden jump and got inside the door and closed it after me as the two beasts threw their huge bodies against it.

"I was now safe and commenced calling the landlord and wondered why he had not heard the fight. It was also evident that he had got up and opened the door. But no landlord came, and as it seemed to me I had looked in every part of the house before I gave up finding him and went to my room, where everything was just as I had left it, except that the candle had gone out, but the fire was burning brightly.

"I wanted to wash my wounds, and as there was not much water in the pitcher on the stand I went out to the basin of the fountain. It was most refreshing to let the soft cold water fall over my body, and in a short time I did not feel the least bit as if I had been through such a terrible struggle. I sat down on one of the seats in the court for some time before going to bed, but the moonlight, flower trees and the splashing fountain were not long in producing a feeling of drowsiness, so that when I laid down I was asleep in an instant.

"When I awoke, it was late in the day, and the sun was streaming in all around me. For several minutes I was dumfounded and wondered how I got into the place where I was.

"It was the same room in which I had laid down to sleep, but it looked as if nobody had entered it for 100 years. I was lying on a pile of rubbish, and everything around me was in the last stages of decay. I got up and went into the court, but the fountain was dry, and nothing could be seen but crumbling walls. There was no sign of vegetation, and the trees and flowers had vanished with the water.

"I was in an awful state of mind and thought at first that I had slept in that room for years and years. But when I made my way to the outer door by climbing over rubbish and fallen timbers and looked out the first thing I saw was the two dead panthers, and a short distance off my horse, with his saddle still on him, tied to a cactus.

"My mind was in a whirl, but I had no desire to skin the animals, so I got on my horse and went to Nogales as fast as I could, where I put in several days doctoring my wounds and getting my mind back into its natural state.

"I did not attempt to solve the mystery, as I felt sure the whole affair was supernatural, and the sooner I can forget it the better I will feel."

The crowd had all been silent during Fred's story, and most of them had allowed their pipes to go out, but when he had finished several commenced to ask questions. But all were glad they had not passed a night in the old place and said they did not blame Fred for not wanting to go there again.—San Francisco Call.

Buddha Avenged Himself.

A curious story is told of a white elephant once shown in a circus at Bangkok. The circus belonged to an Englishman named Wilson. He advertised boldly in the sacred city of Bangkok that he had a real white elephant in his show. His tent was crowded to suffocation, and sure enough the elephant which appeared was snow white. It had been whitewashed, and the clown made great fun out of rubbing himself against it and bringing the white off on his clothes. It is easy to imagine how outraged the Siamese felt, and European residents feared that he would be lynched, but the Siamese loftily remarked that Buddha would avenge himself—that man and elephant were to die, and when the elephant died at sea a few days afterward and the proprietor was carried off by dysentery as soon as he landed at Singapore, they were justified of faith exultingly.—London Tit-Bits.

Why Buried With Head to the West.

All Christian nations, I believe, bury their dead with the head to the west. There is a "why" for this, just as there is for every other known custom. As far as I have been able to ascertain after an exhaustive search of all the leading authorities, our present custom in burial modes originated in primitive times, when the people believed in corporal resurrection. They had an idea that inasmuch as the star that heralded Christ's coming first appeared in the east, "judgment day" would be ushered in with the Lord's appearance in the same direction and that when they "arose from the dead" they would be facing him whose mission will be that of sounding the doom of all earthly things.—St. Louis Republic.

French Art In Manipulating Plaster.

It is stated that French builders, who have carried the art of hardening plaster to where it is used for flooring, either in place of wood or tile, employ for this purpose six parts of good quality of plaster intimately mixed with one part of freshly slaked white lime finely sifted. The mixture as thus composed is laid down in as quick time as possible, care being taken that the trowel is not used upon the surface for too long a time. After this the floor is allowed to become dry and is subsequently saturated in a most thorough manner with sulphate of iron or zinc, the iron giving the strongest surface, its resistance to breaking being found to be 20 times the strength of ordinary plaster. It appears that with sulphate of zinc the floor remains white, while when iron is used it becomes the color of rusted iron. But if linseed oil, boiled with litharge, be applied to the surface it becomes of an attractive mahogany color, this being especially the case if a coat of copal varnish is added.—New York Sun.

DEATH IN THE STORM.

PITILESS WORK OF THE GIANT TWINS, WIND AND WAVE.

How Cruel at Times Seems the Ocean—The Most Populous Cemetery on the Planet. The Land the Book Tells of Where "There Shall Be No More Sea."

And there was no more sea.—Revelation xxi, 1.

What a strange mystery the ocean is! Sometimes it holds your little craft as tenderly as a mother holds her child, and you wonder that the charge of caprice can be brought against it. At other times it is like an angry ogre who has a tyrant's power and uses it like a tyrant.

It is a marvelous sight, a spectacle of thrilling magnificence which makes the blood tingle, to stand on the beach at such a time and watch the serried columns of white capped rollers dash themselves to pieces on the sands. They remind you of Napoleon's army at Waterloo, which had wandered over Europe with victorious banners, which dreamed of no force which could resist its progress, but suddenly found itself face to face with its master, and then, with uncontrolled madness, threw itself to death as well as to defeat. The huge array of white capped monarchs, thinking themselves invincible, attack the shore with ferocious energy and pound themselves to spray. The heart beats wildly as this great battle between sea and land fills the air with thunder, and poet and painter come from far to witness the conflict and describe its glories with pen and brush.

But how cruel the ocean can be when it catches our craft at a disadvantage! Wind and waves in unholy alliance, a compact of death, make the world's cheek blanch with horror as the work of destruction goes on. These twin giants seem to be moved by a common hatred of whatever floats, and as though every vessel was an intruder on their domain tear it to pieces and doom it to disaster. The sails are cut into tatters, their masts are torn away as though the rigging were made of pack thread, and the huge hull is either sent to the bottom or thrown high on the beach in disdain. The sun in very pity creeps behind the veiling clouds for awhile, and when it shines again, after the waves have subsided and the tempest has spent itself, the coast is strewn with wrecks and many a brave sailor lies with upturned face on the sands.

That was sad news which flashed over the wires one Thursday morning. One story followed on the heels of another until disaster seemed to be multiplied by itself, and each account was more pitiful than the last. A fisherman outrode the gale for awhile and then went down with all hands; a sturdy freighter off Hatteras was dismasted, sprang a leak and sank, leaving only one survivor to tell the tale; scores of lesser craft were torn from their anchorage, and the Jersey shore was literally strewn with wreckage. Other vessels which had managed to outlive the hurricane were towed into harbor, either the captain or part of the crew missing.

The book of Revelation tells us that in that other country from whose bourne no traveler returns "there shall be no more sea," and on this Sunday morning we breathe a sigh of relief over the statement. We can dispense with its magnificence if we may be rid of its dangers. It has devoured millions of property and is the most populous cemetery on the planet. When the sea gives up its dead, a countless multitude of the lost will reappear.

But we are specially impressed with the lesson which the great storm emphasizes—namely, the uncertainty of life. On the ocean the unexpected happens more frequently than elsewhere. At one moment a cloudless sky and a musical ripple along the vessel's side. The long roll lifts the craft, which lazily yields to the rhythmic motion of the waters. But danger is in ambush, and after a little the puff of wind grows stronger, the long roll is plumed with a white crest, the tempest sounds its trumpet, and the rigging, like the strings of an æolian harp, emits a mournful note like that of a dirge. In another half hour the whole artillery of nature is at work, the moaning vessel is thrown on her beam ends and creaks and groans as though crying for mercy. In another hour there is nothing visible except some straggling sailor clinging to a spar.

However, death has many ways of achieving its purpose. Not on the sea alone, but on the land, it does its daily stint, and it behooves us to remember that sooner or later it will have something to say to us. "All men may die, but I shall live," is the dream of heedlessness. "All men must die, and therefore I," is the fact that is to be recognized and prepared for.

But we can become indifferent even to this "last enemy." It is not the glum indifference of desperate despair, but the cheerful indifference of perfect faith. If we have no place to go to, it is hard to contemplate our exit. But if there is a better place, a residence in which will be added happiness, we may even shake hands with Death, tell him that our latchstring is always out and he will be welcome whenever he sees fit to come. It is the fear of taking a leap in the dark that bids us pause. But if we are sure of taking a leap into the light we can easily let go our hold on this rugged life and drop into the life to come. The sea may rage as it pleases if our next port of entry is heaven. And lurking accidents and diseases may come out of their hiding places into the open, for at the worst they can only do us a good turn by opening the door of a larger and better house to live in.—New York Herald.

A Story About Painting.

The story is told that a woman once asked St. Francis de Sales whether she might use paint to improve her complexion. His reply was: "Some holy men object to its use, while others see nothing wrong in it. I would adopt a middle course and grant you a dispensation to paint one side of your face only."—New York Times.

The Butterfly and Its Case.

The most curious thing about the butterfly is the size of the case from which the insect proceeds compared with the size of the insect's body. The case is rarely more than an inch long and a quarter of an inch in thickness. The butterfly covers a surface of nearly 4 inches square.—St. Louis Republic.

Lemonade Beats Bandoline.

"I was out to a dance recently," said an acquaintance to me, "and a funny thing happened. It was not so very funny either, but it made me laugh after it was over. You see, it was as hot as a bake oven, and the room was crowded to suffocation. I had a girl, and we were waltzing around as best we could when suddenly the girl gasped, turned pale and said, 'Get me out to the air.' I stopped and released her and offered her my arm, when bump! down she went on the floor in a heap. Fainted away, see? Dead as a herring. What did I do? Why, I tried to pick her up and couldn't do it, for she was a heavyweight. Then I succeeded, with the aid of others, in getting her to the porch, but she wouldn't revive. Then I ran into the refreshment room for water, but the tank was empty, and the only thing they had was lemonade.

"Something had to be done, and I got two glasses, ran back and emptied their contents into her face—not exactly 'into' but 'onto.' After using 30 cents' worth of nice, sweet lemonade she came to. Well, say. You would have died to see her hair. Sticky? Why bandoline, quince seed, gum arabic and kindred concoctions were not in it. Lemonade beats them all. Was she mad? Well, I guess yes. She said I was intoxicated and a natural born fool. Some one else took her home, I didn't."—Youngstown (O.) Telegram.

Freaks of Globe Lightning.

A very singular story is told concerning the vagaries of one mass of globe lightning. A tailor in the Rue St. Jacques, in the neighborhood of the Val de Grace, was getting his dinner one day during a thunderstorm, when he heard a loud clap, and soon the chimney board fall down, and a globe of fire as big as a child's head came out quietly and moved slowly about the room at a small height above the floor. The spectator, in conversation afterward with M. Babbinet, of the Academie des Sciences, said it looked like a good sized kitten rolled up into a ball and moving without showing its paws. It was bright and shining, yet he felt no sensation of heat. The globe came near his feet, but by moving them aside he avoided the contact.

After trying several excursions in different directions it rose vertically to the height of his head—which he threw back to prevent it touching him—steered toward a hole in the chimney above the mantelpiece and made its way into the flue. Shortly afterward—"when I supposed it had had time to reach the top," the tailor said—there was a terrible explosion, which destroyed the upper part of the chimney and threw the fragments onto the roofs of some adjoining buildings, which they broke through.—Chambers' Journal.

An Obscure Litterateur.

It seems odd that a man could make $12,000 a year in New York by writing fiction, die and remain as utterly unknown as if he had never existed. Arthur Elder Nelson, whose death occurred some days since, was such a man. He did not get even a three line obituary in any newspaper. His dealings were mostly with two huge New York concerns devoted exclusively to the manufacture of dime and half dime novels, and his specialty was the fiction that deals with boy pirates, boy highwaymen, robbers and other equally interesting juveniles. He started six years ago, when he was 25. Educated and refined (he was an Oxford man), he came to this country shortly after attaining his majority. His first effort in the line of blood and thunder narrative was made during his leisure as a drug clerk.

The success of his production encouraged him to persevere, and for the last two years he had worked steadily. His publishers say that his own share of the profits of his pen last year were $12,000, and he lived pretty well up to his income. He spoke four languages, and his wide reading and ripe scholarship enabled him to wander at will in the highways of literature, plundering wherever he saw an opportunity. Thus his works were, as a rule, mere plagiarisms brought down to his reader's level. He never aspired to anything higher. Certainly if he had wished to be a serious writer his income could never have exceeded say $2,500 a year, even had he attained great vogue. As it was, he kept a horse and carriage and enjoyed life.—Journalist.

SEWED UP IN A BAG.

Treatment Which Finally Cured a School Girl of Somnambulism.

A young lady at school became a somnambulist, says a writer in Pearson's Weekly. She rose from her bed and walked in her sleep.

I was taken into consultation and suggested various expedients, such as sedatives, sleeping drafts and network to put around the bed at night. All, however, has been tried in this instance, and all in vain.

I then thought for a little, and hit upon the following plan: I directed her nightdress to be sewed up at the foot so that it formed a large bag, and then I had the sleeves lengthened so much that each sleeve, after going round the body, reached the front, where it met the other sleeve and was securely fastened to it.

The whole dress was loose, but the long sleeve prevented the hands from being used to get rid of the dress; while from the end being sewed up the feet could not be used in progression.

Night came, and our charge retired to bed in the new-fangled nightdress, with which she was amused. The usual hour for the night walk came. Her attendants were strictly enjoined not to stir.

She raised herself up as usual in the sitting posture, then stood upright and commenced to walk. The second step was a trip, for the foot behind held the bottom of the bag in which she stood. She stumbled, fell forward and awoke, and was put back into bed, where she soon fell asleep.

And now came a curious change in the phases of the affliction. She would still rise from bed each night, but made no further attempt to walk as before. She would stand erect, and, keeping the knees perfectly rigid, spring straight upward from the floor.

This she would continue until thoroughly fatigued, and then retire quietly to bed to sleep. The case ended in a perfect cure.

A HINDRANCE TO BUSINESS.

Notwithstanding the panic and consequent financial and business distress, the democratic majority of the senate do not care to help in the protection of business, although confidence is gradually being restored and the wheels of industry are starting up. The business situation is still characterized by dullness, and there is a cautious advance movement by the manufacturers, many of whom had hoped not to reduce wages, but they have been obliged, on account of the continued uncertainty of the democratic policy, to announce a reduction the past week. There was never a more emphatic demand in this country for any legislation than now exists for the repeal of the silver bill, and never an instance in the history of the country when senatorial courtesy was more generously abused. The senate could have done much to have helped the condition of the country, but it has been guilty of dallying with public business when dallying was unpatriotic and shameful.

However objectionable and un-American closure may be regarded in this country, Senator Platt was right when he favored such an act last week. The senate and the country have had talk enough, and the senate should be voting instead of obstructing important business. Some one has said "freedom ends where the other fellow's nose begins;" and freedom of speech in the United States congress ought to stop where hindrance to industry and prosperity begin.

There seems to be no doubt that the senate is in favor of the unconditional repeal of the silver bill by a good majority; and the majority would be upheld by all parties in sitting down upon the obstreperous and snarling silver minority whose obstinacy is as mulish as senatorial courtesy is elastic.

THE YACHT RACES.

The arrival of the English yacht Valkyrie has turned all thought from her long passage to the approaching races in which she is to take part, and led to speculation as to her chances of wresting the American cup from its defender, the Vigilant. There is no doubt that the anxiety for her arrival has given place to an anxiety lest she shall take the American cup to England. The Valkyrie has made a great record as a high wind sailer, covering fourteen knots an hour, and her excellent condition on arrival, after having encountered an unusually rough passage across the Atlantic, shows that she has strength and stiffness. After being under the eye of the American experts for two or three days there is not a yachtsman who speaks slightingly of her merits, or talks with much certainty as to her possibilities.

The great race between the Vigilant and Valkyrie will have in it the uncertainty which greatly increases interest in races. A concensus of expert opinion commits the result to the condition of the weather and not to any superior points visible in the construction of the yachts. It is conceded that the Vigilant is not built for a fourteen knot speed. In a heavy breeze the Valkyrie may come off the victor; but the Vigilant is a light breeze boat and with favoring winds will be sure to get there.

All Americans will pin their faith to the Vigilant regardless of expert opinions of her, hurrah for her as she sails and wish for her the victory.

REFORM IMPERATIVE.

This Columbian year should mark a change in this country with reference to passenger traffic and the management of railroad passenger trains. The reader of every paper in the country is expectantly looking daily for the railroad horror of the preceding day. It is at a great sacrifice of life and the bereavement of many families that the people are learning in what a careless and absolutely criminal way human life is being jeopardized by the managers of these great railroad lines. Within the past six weeks a hundred people have been killed and twice as many more injured; and when the cases are investigated the guilty party is generally a switchman who was working at $1.15 a day, or the boss of a gang of laborers who perhaps received $2.50 a day for his services. The high salaried managers seem to be entirely lost sight of.

There is no class of men in the United States who are more persistently overworked than railroad men, or a class more underpaid considering the hours of labor they perform and the amount of responsibility placed upon them. Several accidents have occurred within a year because the engineers and firemen had been so long on duty that they fell asleep on the locomotive while at work. Most of the accidents can be traced to overworked, ignorant or incompetent men.

The public should not submit to such hazardous transportation. It is not permitted in any other country on the face of the earth, and a protest from the people and a determined demand for better and safer carriage would bring about a much needed reform on the railroads of the country. This reform ought to date from this year. It is a reform which would be as beneficial to the roads as to the people.

PENSION FRAUDS.

The spirit of the democratic press is high when a nest of pension frauds is unearthed like that at Baltimore; but it never has anything to say about the obstructive actions of the secretary of the interior who by rulings, cruel orders and obstructive manoeuvering is trying to freeze out a large part of the honest pensioners, and by false pretence to make the old soldiers appear to be what his party slanderously claim they are.

We have not noticed that any democratic paper has condemned the illegal suspension of seven thousand pensioners in this country as imposters, who had proved their claims, and against whom no new evidence had been obtained. They have not protested against the rule which makes it necessary for feeble old pensioners to go after their own pension money or lose it, in doing which one or two have overdone and died; or for sending invalid applicants two hundred miles at their own expense for re-examination.

We hope every pension fraud will be unearthed and that the imposters will be severely dealt with, but we are opposed to the barbarous policy which puts upon the rack some of the bravest and most worthy citizens of this republic.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

The Wabash road is one on which the wages have lately been decreased and the death-rate increased!

A democratic paper in California has read President Cleveland out of the party. He isn't up to D on the Chinese question.

The authorities in Hartford judge the trolley-by a poor specimen which runs out to Wethersfield. If they were judged by their poor relations would they consider that just judgment?

Rev. Joseph Cook looks upon the parliament of religions at Chicago with "fear and trembling." His pose would be improved if he beheld it "with faith in God and confidence in his fellowmen!"

The Pollard scandal is said to have got into Kentucky politics, and the report is that Representative Breckinridge can not get a renomination. Kentucky likes to be represented by a "white" man.

Gov. Jones of Alabama talks right. He says: "If I was the governor of Virginia I would put Mayor Trout back in his office if it took the entire militia of the state, and see that he was treated with the respect that is due him!" The governor of Virginia would honor himself and his state by enforcing such a sentiment!

STATE EDITORS' OPINIONS.

The Next Best Thing.

Although William B. Hornblower didn't find it convenient to be born in Connecticut, he did the next best thing, and came from Connecticut ancestry.—[Waterbury Republican.

The Inevitable.

Chairman Wilson says that the industries of the country will have ample time to prepare for the blow that he is to give them. This is something like giving the condemned man a little longer to dread the inevitable.—[Hartford Post.

The Proper Length.

One who assumes to be an authority says that the proper length for topcoats this winter is anywhere between the ankles and the feet. Simply a matter of choice. But there are many old coats in Meriden that will be worn longer—one season longer.—[Meriden Republican.

Horrible and Revolting.

The story of the fiendish lynching and burning of the negro Smith at Roanoke, Va., is so horrible and revolting that even the most degraded of Americans blush for the country when they read it. That people living in even a half civilized condition could be guilty of such infamous conduct passes all human comprehension.—[New Haven Union.

Senator Platt Right.

Senator Platt is right. The senate is "fast losing the respect of the people." It is being considered as a body "that exists for the purpose of retarding and obstructing legislation." We commend the senator from Connecticut, whatever the merits or demerits in detail of his scheme for cloture, for showing that he has more regard for the wishes of the people than the traditions of any legislative body.—[New Haven Register.

Perhaps!

Perhaps in the course of the twentieth century the world may become civilized enough to settle its differences without bombardments. Blazing away at a hostile fortress is one thing; battering down peaceful dwellings, shops, warehouses and churches is another thing. It has been recognized as a legitimate act of war through eighteen Christian centuries, it is true, but that doesn't make it either a Christian or a sensible proceeding—[Hartford Courant.

The Crisis Not Over.

The crisis in the affairs of the Ansonia Young Men's Christian association is not yet passed, although the outlook is more hopeful than it was two weeks ago. Many people who have never been active in supporting the association have come to realize that it is an important part of our home life, and they begin to see that the work it is doing is as necessary as any that goes to make our community law-abiding, prosperous and progressive. There are hundreds whose interest, though indirect, is none the less positive, who have as yet done nothing to aid in keeping alive this institution. Every dollar counts and every dollar helps swell the total.—[Ansonia Sentinel.

Among the odd patents of recent invention is one for a harness covered with phosphorescent paint which makes it luminous at night.

TEACH CHILDREN TO GARGLE.

Importance of the Habit in Case of Epidemics.

A physician in a paper on diphtheria urges upon parents the importance of teaching children to gargle at an early age, and mentions the fact that during an epidemic of the disease in his city he taught his baby girl, only a little more than two years old, to gargle as well as her nine-year old brother, and kept up the practice regularly, three times a day, throughout the prevalence of the disease. This is one of the small points in keeping with the tendency of the age, which is toward preparation and prevention rather than relief. None, perhaps, except physicians and nurses, realize the obstacles which obstinate and spoiled children make of themselves in cases of illness, and the helpless mother who stands by with her despairing "he won't take it, and I can't make him," adds to the hopelessness of the situation. A child who is old enough to understand what is said to him is not too young to learn that he must do his share in the fight for recovery when sickness assails him.

The same paper states that it is a noticeable fact that a much larger number of girls have diphtheria than boys, ascribing as a probable cause that girls as a rule spend more time indoors than boys, which should be another notice of warning to mothers, and cause them oftener to turn the girls out of doors after school hours than is done.

A TRUTHFUL MAN.

Was Particular in Stating the Exact Thing About His Cigars.

There was no one but the proprietor in the office when the man in sailor clothes came into the office and cautiously closed the door behind him

"You smoke?" asked the visitor.

"Yes."

"Want somethin' extra, dirt cheap?"

"What do you mean?"

"Cigars; these never saw the custom house." And he pulled a box from under his arm and opened it. Like many another individual, the man in the office was weak, and willing to profit at the government's expense.

"How much?" he asked.

"Four dollars," was the answer.

The bargain was closed and the mariner started for the door.

"Hold on!" exclaimed the other, as he bit a sample of the goods. "This is domestic tobacco. Didn't I understand you to say these cigars had never seen the custom house?"

"Sure. What I meant was that they had never been so far away from home."—[American Industries.

The excavation of Hell Gate reef was attended by 21,000 soundings and 8,000 borings.

The longest animal known to exist is the rorqual, which averages 100 feet in length.

Queen Victoria is a skillful knitter and works at it indefatigably. She has knitted, with her ladies, many quilts for the use of the wounded in hospitals during the campaign of the British forces.

I have had catarrh for twenty years, and used all kinds of remedies without relief. Mr. Smith, druggist, of Little Falls, recommended Ely's Cream Balm. The effect of the first application was magical, it allayed the inflammation, and the next morning my head was as clear as a bell. I am convinced its use will effect a permanent cure. It is soothing and pleasant, and I strongly urge its use by all sufferers.—[Geo Terry, Little Falls, N. Y.

Relief from Sick Headache, Drowsiness, Nausea, Dizziness, Pain in the Side, guaranteed to those using Carter's Little Liver Pills. These complaints are nearly always caused by torpid liver and constipated bowels. Restore these organs to their proper functions and the trouble ceases. Carter's Little Liver Pills will do this every time. One pill is a dose. Don't forget this. Price 25 cents.

Nervous Dyspepsia.

Senator James F. Pierce, of New York, writes:

"For the past two years I have suffered very much from an aggravated form of nervous dyspepsia. I have resorted to various remedial agents, deriving but little benefit. A few months since a friend of mine suggested the trial of ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS. Following the suggestion, I have been using the same with the happiest effects. To those similarly afflicted let me suggest the manner of their use. I place one over my stomach, one over the hepatic region, and one on my back. The effect is excellent. From the day I commenced their use have been slowly but surely improving, and am quite confident that by continuing I shall again be restored to my accustomed health."

The well known strengthening properties of IRON, combined with other tonics and a most perfect nervine, are found in Carter's Iron Pills, which strengthen the nerves and body, and improve the blood and complexion.

For Over Fifty Years

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used by millions of mothers for their children while teething. If disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of Cutting Teeth, send at once and get a bottle of "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for Children Teething. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures Diarrhœa, regulates the Stomach and Bowels, cures Wind Colic, softens the Gums and reduces Inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for children teething is pleasant to the taste and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States. Price twenty-five cents a bottle. Sold by all druggists throughout the world. Be sure and ask for "MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP."

Will be found an excellent remedy for sick headache, Carter's Little Liver Pills. Thousands of letters from people who have used them prove this fact. Try them.

A STRANGE CASE.

How an Enemy was Foiled.

The following graphic statement will be read with intense interest: "I cannot describe the numb, creepy sensation that existed in my arms, hands and legs. I had to rub and beat those parts until they were sore, to overcome in a measure the dead feeling that had taken possession of them. In addition, I had a strange weakness in my back and around my waist together with an indescribable 'gone' feeling in my stomach. Physicians said it was creeping paralysis, from which, according to their universal conclusion, there is no relief. Once it fastens upon a person, they say, it continues its insidious progress until it reaches a vital point and the sufferer dies. Such was my prospect. I had been doctoring a year and a half steadily, but with no particular benefit, when I saw an advertisement of Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine, procured a bottle and began using it. Marvelous as it may seem, but a few days had passed before every bit of that creepy feeling had left me, and there has not been even the slightest indication of its return. I now feel as well as I ever did, and have gained ten pounds in weight, though I had run down from 170 to 137. Four others have used Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine on my recommendation, and it has been as satisfactory in their cases as in mine."—James Kane, La Rue, O.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee or sent direct by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid. It is free from opiates or dangerous drugs.

REPUBLICAN PLAN.

Will Offer No Factious Opposition to Tariff Bill.

PARTY SCHEMES WILL BE FOUGHT.

Repeal of State Bank Tax Meets With No Favor.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—The Republican congressional committee is now organized for business. At the last conference the members talked over the whole situation and discussed the three paramount questions which the Democrats propose to carry through the present congress: Tariff reform, repeal of the federal election laws, and financial legislation looking to the repeal of the 10 per cent tax on state banks. It was the general opinion among the leaders, Reed, Burrows, Henderson and Dalzell that the Republican minority should take issue with the majority on all these lines of controversy. It was well understood that the Democratic majority in the house has the power to force any legislation it pleases. Therefore all that the Republican minority could do would be to antagonize on Republican lines, and make a record upon which they can go before the country.

If the Democrats in the house carry out the program foreshadowed, the Republicans feel confident that they can lay these questions before the people in such a shape that in the coming elections they will reassert their lost prestige by securing or reducing the Democratic majority to a minimum. On the question of the tariff, it is not the Republican policy to make any factious opposition. They regard it as wiser, under the circumstances, to permit the Democratic majority in both houses of congress to go to any extreme in their reform projects, as it now has the power, and let the country have a practical knowledge of the Democratic idea of tariff reform, and to let the people judge between Democratic and Republican doctrines on this important issue.

In reference to the bill for the repeal of the federal election laws the Republican leaders have determined to make a persistent fight and will contest every inch of ground in the consideration of that bill in the house. The Democrats, under the parliamentary methods of the house just adopted, which have already been illustrated, and which Representative Reed characterized as out Heroding Herod, will be able to force that bill to its passage whenever they choose. It will meet, however with a different fate in the senate. The Republican leaders in that body, including Allison, Hoar, Lodge, Hawley, Sherman and others, do not intend to permit these to be wiped out without a struggle. They propose in this case to give the Democratic leaders who antagonized and defeated the force bill a taste of their own medicine. The 38 Republican senators in that body can prevent the accomplishment of this proposed legislation.

If the scheme is carried out to get this election repeal bill in the senate, pending the silver controversy, and an attempt is made to sidetrack silver repeal, thus precipitating a controversy over elections instead of honest money, the probabilities are that not only the administration but the Democratic party will find itself stranded.

The administration and its friends in the senate were in excellent spirits Saturday. They regard the action of Friday as favorable to their cause and now believe that some solution will be reached within the next two weeks. Senator Hawley is quoted as saying that opponents of repeal could not hold out a week after general debate had been closed. The senators who are regarded as obstructionists do not number more than eight or 10 at most.

THE BIG FOUR FIGHT.

Other Roads Watching It to Make Sweeping Reductions.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., Sept. 24.—Before leaving for Cincinnati, Grand Master Sargent of the Fireman's association said the men believe that, should the Big Four successfully lower the wages of its employes, other roads will immediately pursue the same course, and a sweeping reduction will be made throughout the country.

"I have no doubt," said he, "that other roads are contemplating the reduction, and are awaiting the termination of the fight of the Big Four."

The Loss Was Large.

BRIDGEWATER, Mass., Sept. 24.—As the night patrolman was passing the grocery store of Avery F. Hooper & Co. at 1:30 Saturday morning, he smelled smoke, and an investigation found that an entrance had been made into the store and the safe blown open. The force of the explosion completely shattered the safe, which was a strong fireproof one. Mr. Hooper refuses to state the amount of his loss, but says that it is large. The work appeared to be that of professionals.

Mayor Matthews on Deck Again.

BOSTON, Sept. 24.—Mayor Matthews has came back from the White mountains, having stayed six weeks at Jefferson, N. H. He is vigorous, and the only remaining sign of his horse-riding accident is a slight stiffness in one arm.

FIGURES OF INTEREST.

Some of the Things Pension Commissioner Lochren Will Report.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—The formal report of the commissioner of pensions, which is now in the hands of the secretary of the interior, is supplemented by some figures of interest. A statement prepared at the pension bureau shows that since March 4, 1889, the total number of pensions granted was [illegible]

The number issued for disabilities contracted in the service was therefore 20 in excess of those issued under the dependent act. The board of revision is now disposing of an average of about 1600 cases per week of those suspended under the recent rulings of the bureau. At this rate it is estimated that practically all those heretofore suspended will be disposed of by Oct. 10. It is also estimated that at least 75 per cent of those suspended will be retained on the rolls, though not all of them at their old rates of pension.

But with this large number of pensions restored Commissioner Lochren estimates that the amount appropriated for this year will be enough and that the only deficiency appropriations required will be $800,000 for special examiners and another appropriation for fees and expenses of examining surgeons. The estimated appropriation for 1895 is $162,631,570.

The commissioner enumerates the various reforms inaugurated—the abandonment of the completed files system and the modification of order 15, 1891, as to disability pensions, etc. He says on this latter point: "It is perfectly clear that under this order 164, in granting pensions under this act of June 27, 1890, the act itself was set aside and disregarded, with the result of granting pensions not authorized by any law."

In regard to the temporary suspension of order 164 he says: In cases where it was believed that a pension could not be sustained and another medical examination was thought necessary the payment of the pension was ordered suspended pending investigation, according to the practice of the bureau from the beginning, and at the proper time the usual 60 day notice was given to the pensioner, within which he could ask for a medical examination or supply further evidence of his right to his pension.

BRAZILIAN TROUBLES.

Rebel Flagship Damaged, but Port of Santos Is Still Blockaded.

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—The Herald's Montevideo correspondent cables that the Republica, flagship of the rebel squadron, sustained considerable damage in the fight at Santos.

Owing to the lack of facilities for getting a necessary supply of coal, the United States cruiser Charleston was unable to sail for Rio Janeiro until Friday.

An absurd rumor was put into circulation yesterday to the effect that President Peixoto had asked President Cleveland to sell the United States cruisers Yorktown and Charleston to the Brazilian government.

A part of the rebel Brazilian fleet continues to blockade the important port of Santos in the state of Sao Paulo, and according to the advices received here they have made the blockade effective. The rebels are also conducting operations south of Santos.

Some of their vessels attacked and captured Fort Desterro on Santa Catharine island, off the coast of Santa Catharina. Desterro, which lies 450 miles southwest of Rio Janeiro and is defended by several forts, among the more important of which is Fort Desterro.

There is a considerable arsenal in the city, and it is thought that the object of the rebels is to force the capitulation of the town and secure the munitions of war [illegible].

State's Evidence All In.

BOSTON, Sept. 24.—At the Trefethen trial on Saturday the government concluded its case, the morning session being taken up with the evidence of experts in handwriting. The theory of the defense is that Tena Davis committed suicide, and it is their claim that there has been no evidence that she was murdered produced.

Gigantic Strike Imminent.

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 24.—Present developments in the situation between the Big Four Railroad company and its men indicate that a gigantic strike is a matter of only a short time, perhaps two days at the longest.

BROCKTON, Mass., Sept. 24.—At Saturday morning's session of the police court the case against Mrs. Hattie M. Russell, charged with attempt to blackmail Levi A. Merrithew, a local business man, was dismissed. This means that she will be tried by the United States authorities solely on a wrong use of the mails.

Tramps Set the Fire.

THE DOCTOR.

A mixture of camphor and myrrh, a few drops in a glass of water, is a mouth rinse for unpleasant breath.

When a delicate person is fatigued and has no appetite, sponging the body with bathing whisky, diluted alcohol or milk will nourish the system and produce rest or refreshing sleep.

A bug in the ear may be drowned out with a little warm water. Apply with a sponge or syringe, and after each injection incline the head with a jerk so as to dislodge the contents of the cavity.

An excellent way to cure insomnia is to bandage the eyes with a handkerchief before retiring. The compress seems to drive away the blood from the eyes and so to cure, or at least to temporarily relieve that feeling so often experienced by insomniacs of trying to see in the dark.

KENRICK DEPOSED.

Venerable Archbishop of St. Louis Loses Power.

HAS BEEN SUPREME FOR YEARS.

Mgr. Satolli Straightens the Church Tangle.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 24.—After more than half a century of almost absolute power among Roman Catholics west of the Mississippi river, the venerable Archbishop Kenrick has been deposed. He will continue to wear the title, but that power of which he was as fond as Richelieu, to whom he has been compared as an intellectual force, has been taken away and invested in his coadjutor, Archbishop Kain.

Peter Richard Kenrick wanted no coadjutor, and refused for a long time to listen to the suggestion of one. Finally, when he could no longer disregard the voice of his suffragans he tried to force the appointment of his vicar general, Father Brady. Father Brady died while the appointment was Being Considered at Rome.

Mgr. Satolli, who finally forced the aged metropolitan to abdicate his power, was kind in one respect at least. He sent Archbishop Ryan, Kenrick's warmest friend since Brady's death, to inform him that there would be no compromise, that he must surrender. The archbishop of Philadelphia executed his mission successfully.

Twice in his career Archbishop Kenrick has almost defied papal authority. He refused to promulgate the Baltimore decrees in his diocese and for a time vigorously combatted the dogma of papal infallibility. For more than a year it has been rumored that the aged prelate was failing mentally. The fact that he has given up this struggle will do much to convince the public that

There Is Something In the Story.

The community will argue that Peter Richard Kenrick, in possession of his faculties, would have known no such word as yield. The priests of the diocese feel a sense of relief. He has ruled with an iron hand as far as their ministry extends. This does not mean that he has been tyrannical or unjust.

On the contrary, his treatment of them has won their love and veneration. They have felt for more than a year, however, that he was using his powers capriciously. When the Baltimore council sought to enlarge the influence and powers of diocesan priests he made the decree void, so far as his subordinates were concerned, by Refusing to Promulgate It.

A prominent Catholic says: "The situation is: The archbishop would not abdicate—he was deposed. Coadjutor Kain will consult the venerable prelate, but the former's authority is absolute. Consultation will be mere form to satisfy the whims of the enfeebled old man whom we all love." The feeling is easier in Catholic circles generally about church affairs than it has been for some time.

With Bishop Kain at the helm, reinforced with instructions from the papal ablegate, it is expected that entanglements will soon be straightened out and a healthy condition of diocesan affairs will speedily be established.

COAL MINER'S STRIKE.

Its Prolonging Only a Question of Money. [illegible] Raised by Loan.

LONDON, Sept. 24.—The question of prolonging the strike of the coal miners, which two or three times has appeared to be on the verge of collapse, is simply one of money.

It was thought a few days ago that the Derbyshire miners would be compelled to return to work, the funds of their association having been exhausted and tradesmen refusing to further accept the coupons that the association issued to the strikers in lieu of money. The association, however, proved itself fertile in expedient and at once opened negotiations to raise a loan of £15,000.

Five Gladstonian members of the house of commons agreed to guarantee the repayment of the money and with these gentlemen as its security, the association found little difficulty in raising the desired amount of money.

The sum thus raised will enable the Derbyshire association to pay its members the usual strike pay for a long time, with the result that the strike may be indefinitely prolonged, unless some amicable understanding is reached with the mine owners.

THE TATTLER.

Mrs. Daniel Lamont has given her cottage on Lorrento island, Maine, the title of Blueberry Lodge.

Mrs. Grover Cleveland is very fond of amateur theatricals, although she never takes part in them.

Mrs. Walter Damrosch is the fortunate, or otherwise owner of 60 dozen forks. They were all wedding gifts.

Mrs. William Choate, president of the Woman's Exchange, is fond of jewelry and wears a good many rings, all costly ones.

Mrs. U. S. Grant has a brooch, bracelet and earrings made of wood from the tree under which Lee stood when he surrendered his sword to General Grant.

Mrs. Reginald de Koven is pretty and winsome enough to inspire any man to write music. No wonder her husband gives the world such charming melodies.

Mrs. F. Marion Crawford is an enthusiastic sailor and accompanies her husband on many of his yachting expeditions. She is also an accomplished linguist and musician.

So valuable are her jewels that Mrs. Potter Palmer never attends a ball or party of any kind to which she wears them without a private detective to form part of her escort.

Mrs. Bartholomew, wife of the chief justice, has been appointed by Governor Shortridge as corresponding secretary for North Dakota of the National Society of Charities and Corrections.

Miss Grace Hawthorne, daughter of the well known writer, is a famous pedestrian and thinks nothing of a 10 mile walk—not before breakfast perhaps, but any time between sunrise and sunset.

Mrs. Sophia Wansir of Sheboygan, Mich., has grown rich by a peculiar industry. She built a gas works several years ago and sold it to the town at a great advance. Now she is building the village waterworks.

Mrs. Charles Briggs, wife of the celebrated professor of theology, is an accomplished musician, as are her two daughters. All three studied at Leipsic and have attracted much attention by their marked ability.

Mrs. Stella B. Conger, wife of ex-Senator O. D. Conger of Michigan, died recently, and her will leaves him the sum of $120 a month, and makes provision for his funeral and for the erection of a suitable monument over his remains.

The only daughter of Prince [illegible], a wealthy nobleman of [illegible], recently eloped with her father's coachman, taking 100,000 rubles with her. The young princess is only 18 years old and is one of the reigning belles of the old Russian capital.

LEGAL ANTIQUITIES.

The blue laws of Connecticut were so called because they were printed on blue tinged paper. These were some of them:

No food or lodging shall be offered to a heretic.

The Sabbath day shall begin at sunset Saturday.

No one shall kiss his or her children on the Sabbath or on feasting days.

No one shall cross the river on the Sabbath but an authorized clergyman.

No one shall travel, cook victuals, make beds, sweep houses, cut hair or shave on the Sabbath day.

No dissenter from the essential worship of this dominion shall be allowed to give a vote for electing magistrates or any officer.

No one shall be a freeman or have a vote unless he is converted and a member of one of the churches allowed in the dominion.

CURIOUS CULLINGS.

The ground in an open lot at East Great Plains, Conn., has been struck by lightning nine different times in the past seven years.

There is a block of sandstone on exhibition at Fontainebleau on which the outlines of a knight and his horse, both in full war trappings, may be plainly traced.

The Dyak of Borneo believe that all the men whose heads he can cut off must be his slaves in the next world. From this belief arises the cheerful custom of "head hunting."

THE STOCK MARKET.

Dealings in Leading Securities In Boston and New York.

BOSTON, Sept. 23.—In the outside market call money is quoted at 5 to 6 per cent, and time money is nominally 6 per cent.

The feature of the past week, so far as financial matters go, is the decided improvement in monetary conditions. Money is now in abundant supply. The rate between the banks, which last Monday was 6 per cent, is now 5 and 6 per cent, and call loans in the outside market are being made at a shade under 5 per cent in Boston and at 3½ to 5 per cent in New York. Furthermore, clearing house certificates have been retired in Boston to the amount of $3,050,000 and in New York to the amount of nearly $9,000,000. The statements of the associated banks in both cities show important gains in deposits and reserves. New York banks today show an increase in reserve over Saturday week of more than $7,000,000.

The only disturbing feature has been the advance in exchange rates, bankers' sight sterling rates rising since Monday from $4 85¼ to 4 86¼. This, with the scarcity of grain and cotton bills and the demand on the part of those who have been maturing sterling loans to remit, in conjunction with the hesitation of bankers to draw, in view of the uncertain monetary situation here, has suggested the possibility of gold exports again.

Speculation has been purely professional. Not only professional, but extremely narrow. The scarcity of stocks has prevented the traders from undertaking any aggressive campaign, while the doubt attending legislation at Washington has led the bull party to settle back until something more definite has evolved. Such industrial developments as have been noted have been mildly favorable. Railroad earnings will show sharp fallings off, but not so much as the preceding week. Returns from 75 roads for the first week in September showed a decrease in gross earnings of $1,112,002. From 45 roads for the second week in September the decrease is $970,882.

On the local list New York and New England has been the strongest speculative stock, appreciating nearly 3 points. Cleveland and Canton preferred has recovered 1½ points lost through the passing of the road into the hands of receivers. Atchison and Chicago, Burlington and Quincy have just about held their places, though both were weak at times. General Electric has lost 1½ believed to be the result of a gradual feeding out of long stock, while Sugar has dropped 1 and National Lead quite 4, as the result of unfavorable rumors. Bonds have held steady, but have been rather neglected.

London has not been important as a factor at all. Generally its quotations have followed those here except for Louisville and Nashville. These have been lower. This morning, however, London was below prices here. Trading today was very light, and no significant changes appeared. Sugar closed at [illegible], the same as the last sale, New York and New England [illegible] unchanged, and General Electric [illegible], the fraction stronger. Bay State Gas appeared on the tape again, but ¼ down at 8.

WITH FINGER TIPS.

HOW HELEN KELLER WAS TAUGHT THE NAMES OF THINGS.

Something of the Method Explained by Her Tireless Instructress—A Face That Mirrors a Soul Which Knows Naught of the Appearance of Sin.

The most interesting feature of the educational congress was the appearance of Helen Keller under the kind and skillful guidance of Miss Annie M. Sullivan, her teacher. When a babe, Helen Keller became blind, deaf and dumb. When Miss Sullivan, a young woman of unusual beauty of form and feature, stood before the audience beside a girl who, except for the sad sign of blindness in the large eyes, gave promise of still greater beauty, her face glistening with a rapture that painters try to express in the ecstacy of angels, hearts seemed to stand still. It was a face that had never consciously looked on the distortions of passion or pain—the mirror of a soul that could not imagine the outward appearance of sin nor remember any of the discords of life.

In her presence it was hard to appreciate the fact that her world lay within ours, without sun, music or speech. No one who saw it will forget the impulsive fluttering of her young, white hand as it sought her teacher's face or round, white throat; the satisfaction when the contact of her delicate white finger tips gave her what sight gives us; the flash of light over her face when, with her forefinger resting on her teacher's lip, she read the answer to the question she had asked by the twinkling digital movements in her teacher's palm. There were those who wept when she repeated audibly, with a depth of feeling she alone can feel:

Tell me not in mournful numbers
Life is but an empty dream.

All were invited to ask questions, yet not many did so. The occasion seemed sacred.

"How did you teach her the first word?" some one ventured at last.

"Her first word was 'doll,'" was the answer. "I gave her the doll, placed her finger on my lip and spoke the word. When she wearied of the doll, I took it from her, and when I returned it again gave the movement of the lips. The second word was 'mug.' I used the cup from which she drank, but became convinced that she had not a clear idea of the name, but that it meant to her also water or drink. So I one day took her to the pump, and as the water was flowing into her cup had her hold her hand in the stream, and then putting her finger on my lip gave her the word 'water.' Then I again gave her the word 'mug.' The idea that everything had a name, the comprehension of nouns, was a great revelation to her and came then and all at once. She was greatly excited. A nurse, with the baby sister in her arms, was standing near. Helen immediately put her hand on its face to know its name. I told her 'baby,' and she caught it at once. Then she stooped down and patted the ground to know what it was called. She learned many words that day, and those words she never forgot."

"How soon after she learned words did she frame sentences?"

"Immediately."

"Were verbs harder to learn than nouns?"

"Not at all. I began with such words as 'sit,' 'stand' and the like that were easy to illustrate. Prepositions troubled her most."

"How does she get an idea of the abstract?"

"I cannot tell. It seems to be with her, or it comes."

"Has she any distinguishing sense of musical vibrations?"

"Yes, very distinct. She likes music."

"Is her vocabulary large?"

"Very large. She expresses herself fluently and is choice of words."

"What books does she like best?"

Every now and then the white fingers fluttered to the teacher's face for just one delicate touch—a finger look it was—and now they rested on Miss Sullivan's lip:

"Tell—the—people—what—books—you—like—best."

Helen's face was an open book of her mental processes. She repeated each word after Miss Sullivan, but hesitated a little on the words "tell" and "you," the brightness of her face dimming for the instant. As soon as she comprehended the question, which she did in advance of its completion, the flash of intelligence came, and when she turned toward the audience, for she did not seem at any time to lose her location, she said with spirit:

"Oh, I have read so much that it is very hard to say what I like best, but"—waiting a moment—"'Little Lord Fauntleroy'"—And then followed rapidly the names of several works, some of which, it would seem, could hardly be understood by any one who cannot know sound and color.

"How do you read?"

"By raised letters and by my teacher."

"I noticed when you pronounced for her you articulated with an exaggerated motion of the lips," said one. "Is not that necessary?"

"Her teaching was begun in that way. I do not think it is necessary or best. I attribute the peculiarity of her voice to that mechanical action which she uses. I think it would have been better and just as easy if she had been spoken to with the usual movement."

In reply to the question of her knowledge of the abstract, General Fulton remarked that the greatest development in the case of Helen Keller was that of the spiritual.—Memphis Appeal-Avalanche.

To Stop a Trolley Car Instantly.

A Rochester man has devised a plan by which a trolley street car can be stopped almost instantaneously, or within a space of three feet, while the car is going at full speed. His device is operated by a lever in the motorman's cab. It is, generally speaking, a steel shoe, upon which the rear wheels of the car ride, the under side of which is corrugated so as to produce great friction upon the rails of the track. On the top of the shoe is an arrangement which, as soon as the wheel rises upon the shoe, clamps the outer rim of the wheel and at the same time grasps the inner edge of the rail. The simple weight of the car crowds down the shoe upon the rail and at the same time clamps together, as in a vise, the wheel and the rail, and all this by a single movement on the part of the motorman.—New York Telegram.

The Bulletin.

Norwich, Monday September 25 1893

The Bulletin should be delivered everywhere in the city before Six a. m.

Subscribers who fail to receive it by that time will confer a favor by reporting the fact to the Bulletin Co.

The Norwich Weekly Courier is the best weekly newspaper in New England at 50c a year.

The Weather Today.

Indications for Connecticut: Fair; south winds; slightly warmer.

NORWICH AND VICINITY.

CITY NEWS.

The trotting dog Bonaparte has arrived in town and is stalled at the fair grounds.

Fred. L. Osgood's steam yacht Cossette went out of commission for the winter Saturday.

Painters are at work on the Thames street electric poles, indicating the stopping places.

The celebrated trotter Martha Wilkes will give exhibitions of speed at the fair on Wednesday and Thursday.

Arrangements are being made for the opening of evening schools in town, in compliance with the recently enacted law.

A well-attended mission service for the French-speaking members of the parish was held in St. Patrick's church last evening.

Congressman Russell has introduced a bill in the national house of representatives providing for a public building in this city, to cost $100,000.

The Rev. Dr. L. W. Bacon has preached in the First Congregational church, New London the past two Sundays, in the absence of the regular pastor, Dr. Blake.

Golden rod is now in abundance along the roadside. Those who go for a stroll into the country invariably return with an armful of this beautiful flower, in its different varieties.

The out-of-town female teachers of the Free Academy faculty have hired the house on Franklin street recently occupied by Dr. Fairbanks, and will try co-operative housekeeping.

The large Pachaug reservoir, in the town of Griswold, which furnishes the water power for the large Ashland cotton mills and Slater's big mill at Jewett City, is very low. There is little more than the natural stream running. When full it holds eighteen feet of water and flows 1,000 acres.

Miss Brown will be at the Slater building from 4-6 and 7-8 p. m. today to give information about the various classes of the art school. The draughting classes, for mechanics and others, will meet Mr. Olcott in the manual training shop, Tuesday at 7.15 o'clock.

Harry Daniels of Philadelphia, connected with the clothing sale in the Carroll block, was arrested Saturday afternoon, charged with violating the state law forbidding the distribution of handbills about the streets. He was released under $300 bonds. It is said that Daniels is not the one who disseminated the paper.

It is said that when Fred. Miller, Jr., wrote the "Golden Wedding" it was not with an eye to artistic literary production, his sole effort being to produce something calculated to make the people laugh. That its purpose has been accomplished has been demonstrated by 16 consecutive weeks at the Park theater, Boston. The Golden Wedding will be at the Broadway theater tomorrow evening.

Governor Morris at Danbury Fair.

Governor Morris and staff will attend the Danbury fair on Wednesday, October 4. The governor's letter accepting the invitation has been received and arrangements are under way for his reception. It is probable that Company G will act as escort to and from the fair grounds.

An Expressman Attempts Suicide.

Expressman Henry O. Kelley was found in his yard on Lake street late Friday night in an unconscious condition, with a communication which purported to be an earthly farewell to family and friends. Dr. Rush W. Kimball was hastily summoned, who resuscitated the patient and restored him to life. Kelley is subject to apoplexy, but is thought to have taken arsenic.

The Y. M. C. A. Delegation.

Among the members of the local Y. M. C. A. who go to Hartford today to visit the new building of the Young Men's Christian association will be Messrs. N. L. Bishop, W. R. Burnham, F. S. Camp, G. C. Haskell, W. N. Blackstone, Gardiner Greene, Jr., W. T. Lane, W. S Allis, Wm. C. Farrington and General Secretary Ross. The delegation will go on the 10.35 a. m. train and return at 7.18 p. m.

City Court—Kelleher, Judge

In the city court Saturday morning, Abraham Dawson, for breach of the peace, was fined $15 and costs—$28 33. The case of J. W. Kelly, of Philadelphia, charged with the same offence, was continued to to-day under $100 bonds.

Thomas McFarland, of Montville, went to jail for thirty days and to work out $8.50 costs for stealing a shoe maker's awl.

Patrick O'Brien, for drunkenness, was committed for the want of $7 86.

Robert Schaellibaum, of Lowell, was charged with assaulting Supt. E. B. Page of the Shetucket and Falls mills. He was bound over to the superior court under $500 bonds.

"Mauchy" Brewer, for breach of the peace, went to jail for four months, with $11 86 costs to work out.

INDOOR SERIES INAUGURATED.

The Rev. A. W. Kingsley Preaches Under Young Men's Christian Association Auspices.

The Rev. A. W. Kingsley delivered an interesting address at the four o'clock meeting Sunday afternoon in the Young Men's Christian association rooms. Mr. H. E. Batty sang two solos during the song service. A large number of men was present at this first fall meeting indoors. City Missionary Swan was in attendance and conducted a short second meeting in the parlor of the association. A wonderful testimony was given by a young man who has recently professed conversion.

At Breed Opera House Tonight.

This evening Fletcher and Garrison's comedy players will begin a week's engagement in Breed opera house at popular prices. The play tonight will be "A Society Tramp." Seats at Noyes & Davis. The Louisville, Ky., Courier Journal says of it:

The wet weather did not keep a large audience from attending Harris' Bijou theatre last night. "A Society Tramp," a comedy drama, was given by a very good company, and its reception was exceedingly hearty. There are some very pretty pictures of southern homestead life, and the various roles are taken in a creditable manner. Harry Allen takes the part of Appetite Bill, and wins the mirthful interest of the audience throughout the play. Miss Elsie Gladys as Clover contributes a number of pretty songs and dances. The trained bulldog, "Nelly," made an undoubted "hit" when she made her appearance in the action of the play.

Personals.

Misses Nancy and Mary Lucas and Miss Louise Allen leave for Chicago this week.

Committeeman George H. Martin of the Falls schools is teaching vocal music in that district, this term.

THE WEEKLY SUMMARY.

Real Estate and Business Transactions.

The summary of The New Haven Weekly Record for the past week shows considerable improvement over the previous week, but a heavy falling off from last year. The details are as follows:

Real estate sales—New Haven and West Haven 15, Bridgeport 15, Hartford and East Hartford 17, Waterbury 5, Meriden 9, New Britain 4, Middletown 1, New London 1, Danbury 2, Norwalk 4, Ansonia 1, Derby 2 Shelton 3, Willimantic 4.

Real estate mortgages—New Haven and West Haven $38,350, Bridgeport $9,740 Hartford and East Hartford $35,050, Waterbury $2,075, Meriden $3,050, New Britain $15,400, Middletown $5,740, Norwich $5,300, New London $4,309, Danbury $11,183, Norwalk $4,725, Ansonia $4,600, Derby $1,712, Shelton $9,140, Willimantic $800.

The total number of sales last week was 88 as compared with 80 for the preceding week and 136 for the corresponding week last year. The total of recorded mortgages is $127,888 against $171,689 the preceding week and $184,275 for the corresponding week last year.

NEW VOTERS ADMITTED.

Seventy-One Freemen Made Saturday—Ballots for Women Voters.

The board of selectmen and Town Clerk Freeman admitted seventy-one new voters Saturday.

Fifty-six women have thus far registered as voters. Who is going to provide ballots for the women voters? The law says that the women may vote only for school officers and on educational matters, and that their ballots must be deposited in separate ballot boxes. They cannot vote the regular ticket which the men vote, for those will have other names than those of the nominees for high school committee and school visitors, the only part of it that the women may vote.

The different political parties have to purchase the official paper and print their own ballots. Where the ballots are to come from for the nearly a hundred women who have registered nobody seems to know. They must be different from the ballots the men will vote, for they must contain fewer names. Perhaps the men's ballots with all the names scratched off except the candidates for high school committee and school visitors would do all right, and perhaps the regular parties may have separate ballots prepared for the women voters. Or—just think of it! —the fair voters may march to the polls only to find nothing there which they may legally deposit in the ballot box.

[There seems to be no trouble about the ballots. The women can scratch out all names upon the official ballot except those of the school officers, and vote for them. The men would not be so discourteous as to decline to furnish the ballots.—Ed]

REBELS GAINING REINFORCEMENTS.

Buenos Ayres News — Desultory Fighting Sunday.

NATIONAL TROOPS DESERT.

A Whole Regiment with Their Arms Go Over to the Rebels.

BUENOS AYRES, Sept. 25.—There was desultory fighting all day yesterday around Santa Fe, the capital of the province of that name. It is not known that either side gained any advantage. The rebels are gaining accessions to their forces. A large number of the foreign colonists have thrown in their lot with the insurgents and have been cordially welcomed by the enemies of the government. A more serious feature of the outlook, however, is the disaffection among the national troops. Desertions to the rebels are of frequent occurrence. In one instance a whole regiment has gone over to the insurgents, carrying their arms with them. These defections are causing the government considerable anxiety.

Gen. Pelligrini, who is in command of the government troops, has been reinforced by national troops from the provinces of Buenos Ayres, Cordova and Santiago. These additions to the government forces have more than offset the desertions and Gen. Pelligrini expressed himself as confident, with the augmented force at his command, of being able shortly to suppress the revolt.

BUENOS AYRES, Sept. 25.—The rebels in the province of Santa Fe have taken Rosario and the national troops have retreated. A powder magazine exploded yesterday at Uruguay. Twenty soldiers were injured, but nobody was killed.

Report of Assassination Denied.

BUENOS AYRES, Sept. 25.—Denial was made late this afternoon of the report of the assassination of Dr. Alem.

The government has appointed Gen. Roca to the supreme command of the Argentine army.

CASTINE WAS STRAINED.

Contract Limiting Pressure Violated—Premium to Be Cut.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—While much gratified with the splendid performance of the Castine the secretary was anxious to know why she had done so much better than her sister ship, the Machias.

He discovered that the clause in the contract limiting the pressure in the fire room to half an inch had been completely ignored, and that during a greater portion of the four hours run the pressure reached 1½ inches.

This clause was placed in the contract especially for the purpose of preventing an undue strain upon the machinery, and as it has been violated the secretary holds that the contractors have no right to the full premium earned.

It is understood that a settlement will be made upon a basis of about 16½ knots, which is little better than the speed made by the Machias. About $48,000 will be the sum finally agreed as the premium earned by the Castine.

In Memory of Lucy Larcom.

NEWBURYPORT, Sept. 25.—The Belleville church of Newburyport was crowded last evening when a service in memory of Lucy Larcom was held.

A sketch of her life was prepared by Miss Alice G. Pierce, one of the instructors at the high school, and various poems by the deceased were read by Miss Florence A. Weatherby, Miss Gertrude S. Lunt, Miss Elizabeth H. Cheever, Miss Arabella Edwards and Miss S. B. Chute. Hymns written by Miss Larcom were sung and a brief address was made by the Rev. Mr. Hitchcock.

Was a Large Real Estate Owner.

BOSTON, Sept. 25.—Mr. John B. Brewer, brother of the late Gardner Brewer, a wealthy retired dry goods and commission merchant of Boston, died at his summer residence here today, aged 75. Mr. Brewer was the largest real estate owner in Stoneham and for some years he has devoted himself to his extensive farm, which is a model one. Two sons and two daughters survive him.

Counterfeits in Springfield.

SPRINGFIELD, Sept. 25.—It is believed that the same gang of counterfeiters which have been working in New Haven is passing bills in this city.

The Chapin National bank received four of the bills this morning, but discovered their worthlessness in time to return them to the depositors. The hotel men and saloon keepers are the principal sufferers. The bills are $5 silver certificates of the Grant issue, and are very cleverly executed.

Biddeford Confectioner Burned Out.

BIDDEFORD, Me., Sept. 25.—Fire was discovered at 11 o'clock tonight in the work room of the building occupied by Kenneth W. Sutherland, confectioner, wholesale and manufacturer, and George T. Davis, caterer and confectionery. The stock was nearly ruined. Mr. Sutherland's loss is estimated at $4,000, insured for $5,000. The building is owned by Mayor Staples, and is insured.

Reduction Will Be Small.

NASHUA, N. H., Sept. 25.—The amount of the reduction in wages, to take effect in the Nashua and Jackson company's mills October 2, has not yet been determined, but it is probable that it will not exceed six per cent., and will be simply a return to the wages paid before the last increase, made about a year ago. There is no excitement over the reduction.

Six-Year-Old Boy Killed by the Cars.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Sept. 25.—A working train struck two children of William Bigary at the foot of Wilcox street this evening and killed Walter, six years old, and Charles ten years old was badly injured. The children were carrying wood which their father was cutting on the other side of the track from their home.

To Remove Dangers to Navigation.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—Mr. Cummings of New York introduced in the house today a joint resolution authorizing the president to make an international agreement with other governments for the reporting, marking and removing of dangerous wrecks, derelicts and other menaces to navigation in the North Atlantic ocean.

A Vitriol Thrower Pleads Not Guilty.

BOSTON, Sept. 25.—Miss Mary McGuiness, charged with assault with intent to maim on Wm. Lally, appeared in court today and pleaded not guilty. After the witnesses had been sworn the case was adjourned till tomorrow. The assault, which consisted of vitriol throwing, occurred on May 1 last, and the victim was disfigured for life.

A PLOT CONFESSED.

Anarchists Commit Murder in the Village of Calamity.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Sept. 25.—At the little village of Calamity, two miles distant from West Elizabeth, Mrs. August Reese was instantly killed and her husband, a coal miner, received probably fatal wounds last night. Last evening a number of men, among them Noel Marson and a man named Brice, called at Reese's home. There were sharp words, ending in a fight in which blows were freely exchanged. Revolvers were drawn, and Mrs. Reese was shot dead. Mr. Reese, besides receiving a bullet wound, was badly beaten with clubs. All the persons involved are French Canadians.

It is stated that Marson, Brice and their companions are avowed anarchists. In some way Mrs. Reese became acquainted with some of the secrets of their secret organization, and her death was then decreed. Marson and Brice were chosen to kill her. It is reported that the anarchists had made arrangements to go to Canada, where they were to engage in an attempt to blow up some of the government buildings. Marson is under arrest and has confessed.

Charged With Bringing Immigrants Without Notifying Authorities.

BOSTON, Sept. 25.—Captain Angus Matheson, of the schooner William McKay, was before Commissioner Fiske this morning, charged with bringing immigrants into the country from a foreign port without notifying the immigration authorities. It is charged that on Nov. 7 two passengers, Alexis McLean and Mary A. McNeal, were landed at Provincetown from Cape Breton. On Nov. 10 the captain made his report at the custom house in Boston but forgot to tell of the landing of the two passengers. It appears that McLean was mentally deranged and his recent advent to the Westborough insane asylum set on foot an investigation. The case was continued until Oct. 11, pending a decision from the secretary of the treasury.

East Hartford Physician Arrested for a Serious Assault.

HARTFORD, Conn., Sept. 25.—Dr. Henry E. Childs of East Hartford was bound over in the sum of $1,000 this morning on a charge of assault with intent to kill, preferred by James Brennan, a railroad man. Grand Juror Bond says that last night Dr. Childs induced Brennan to come to his rooms, and then he pointed a revolver at his head and charged him with making improper proposals to his wife. Mrs. Childs was present, and ran out of the house, calling to Brennan to flee for his life. Brennan dashed out, and Childs fired three shots at him. Brennan fell and then Childs went back into his house. The accused is said to be jealous of Brennan, who has a wife and eight children.

N. E. Trotting Horse Breeders' Association.

BOSTON, Sept. 25.—The annual meeting of the New England Trotting Horse Breeders' association opened at Mystic park today, under unfavorable weather conditions, although the number of animals on the ground is smaller than at previous meetings, an improvement in quality and breeding is noticeable, and the officials say that the meeting promises to be the best ever held by the association. On account of the rain today, many people supposed there would be no racing, the attendance was small. The racing was begun, however, on a muddy track and some of the events were particularly good.

The 3 minute class trot, best two in three, was won by Judge Austin. Time, 2.28, 2.29½, 2.28¼.

The yearling trotting purse was taken by Princess Clark. Time, 2 38¾.

In the 2:15 class pacing, Gil Curry won in straight heats. Time, 2:12¾, 2:16¼, 2:18½.

The three-year-old trot was won by Zerbrine taking the last three heats. Time, 2.33¼, 2.30, 2.41½, 2.36¼, 2.40.

Queer Railroad Contest in New Britain.

NEW BRITAIN, Conn., Sept. 25.—The New York and New England Railroad company and the Central Railway and Electric company of this city are having trouble over the latter's crossing the New England's tracks at the Main street crossing.

To prevent the electric company from laying a frog at the crossing, the New England Railroad company is having an engine and caboose cross and recross the crossing at intervals of every two minutes. This causes obstruction to traffic on the street, and an indignant crowd of citizens have assembled to protest against the conduct of the New England railroad.

Accidentally Shot Her Son.

HARTFORD, Conn., Sept. 25.—Mrs. Sanders of No. 11 Beaver street, New Britain, accidentally shot her son Edward, fifteen years old, last night. He had a revolver to keep for a playmate, and his mother did not intend to let him carry it. He showed how apparently harmless it was and then she took it and pulled the trigger. The ball entered the boy's chest between the third and fourth ribs, passed through the right lung and lodged in the muscles of the back. The boy cannot recover and is expected to live but a short time.

Zulu Preacher Arrested in New Haven.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 25.—Borneo Mostago, a Zulu, was arrested last night while about to open the services at Zion African M. E. church. He is charged with obtaining money under false pretences from Calvary Baptist Sunday school, Dwight Place church and First M. E. church.

Y., Sept. 25.—Two men entered the branch office of the Western Union Telegraph company at 587 Main street early this morning, and after beating the night manager, Henry Leipman, into insensibility, broke open the cash drawer and took the contents, amounting to about $26. FINE BUSINESS HOUSES BURNED.

$1,000,000 Worth of Property Destroyed at St. Joseph, Mo.

CITY WATER PRESSURE WEAK.

Dynamite Used to Blow Up Buildings—Firemen Injured.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Sept. 25.—Several of the finest business houses of St. Joseph are in ruins tonight, and a million dollars worth of property has been destroyed.

At 10 o'clock this morning C. A. Purdy, who was passing along Allmont street, noticed a thin current of smoke coming from the top floor of an eight-story department store. By the time he could turn in an alarm the flames burst from the entire top floor. When the department arrived it was found that the water pressure was weak and the firemen were compelled to fight at a disadvantage. The entire building was soon in flames, and Chief Cane saw there was no chance to save it.

A strong wind from the north soon carried the flames across the street to the magnificent Commercial bank structure, and it was soon destroyed. The Central Savings bank went next and then followed the Center block. The Rogster & Shoup Crockery company's new house was next to succumb and $70,000 worth of goods dropped into the cellar. The Carbrey block was next attacked and then Binswanger & Co. the Hong Kong Tea company, the Spencer Cigar Co., and a dozen smaller institutions were consumed.

The fire was then burning fiercely from four sides and the destruction of the best business interests of the city was imminent.

At this time, dynamite was resorted to and a number of buildings were blown up and the progress of the fire was stayed. With the help of the Topeka and Kansas City fire departments which were telegraphed for and which arrived at this juncture, the fire was got under control.

The principal losers are the Townsend & Wyatt Dry Goods company, $250,000, insurance $200,000; Central block $85,000, insurance $75,000; Highland block $75,000, insurance $60,000; Rogster & Shoup, crockery, $90,000, insurance $70,000; Commercial bank $30,000, fully insured; Carbrey block $40,000, insurance $25,000; Hanson Garrett & Brewster $17,000, insured, and thirty smaller institutions which represent a loss of $175,000.

A few accidents occurred during the progress of the fire. When one of the buildings was blown up, a boy named Harkins was struck and badly hurt. Two firemen were precipitated from a ladder and both were badly hurt, one probably fatally.

The Yellow Fever.

BRUNSWICK, Ga., Sept. 25.—Five new cases of yellow fever developed here today.

In an interview today Surgeon Faget stated that while the air was poisoned and the fever was in an epidemic form he expected that a majority of the cases from now on will be of a mild type and the fatality small, a thorough organization of physicians and nurses having been perfected to handle the epidemic. He says further that frost may be expected here within twenty-five days. Dr. Faget says the relief now being furnished to the poor will greatly aid in preparing them to resist the ravages of the fever.

Advance in Price of Coal at London.

LONDON, Sept. 25.—The season is rapidly approaching when the demand for coal reaches its largest volume, and as the demand increases coal merchants advance their prices, for, owing to the strike of the coal miners, the supply is not equal to the demand. On Saturday prices were advanced two shillings per ton and today a further advance of two shillings was made. It is feared that even should the strike shortly end it would be some time before prices would reach their normal level, and the rates even now prevailing are almost prohibitive to the poor. Should the winter set in early much suffering will result from the scarcity of mined coal.

Maasdam's Passengers Transferred to the Veendam for New York.

LONDON, Sept. 25.—The steamer Veendam from Rotterdam called at Plymouth yesterday for the purpose of taking on board the passengers of the same company's steamer Maasdam. THE SPRINGFIELD FLYER.

Tyler the Hero of the Bicycle Races at Scranton, Pa.

SCRANTON, Pa., Sept. 25.—H. C. Tyler, the Springfield flyer, was the hero of the bicycle races held here today. He won as prizes a piano valued at $600 and a diamond worth $150. In the one mile international he defeated Sanger by a foot in one of the prettiest finishes ever seen. Sanger in the one-mile handicap made the best time of the day, covering the mile in 2.19 1-5.

The two mile handicap was somewhat easy for James Willis, Sanger failing because he underestimated Willis' ability. Sanger made the two miles in 4.47, two seconds faster than Zimmerman's time in Philadelphia, Saturday. Considerable dissatisfaction was expressed over the funk of Zimmerman, who, up to this morning, kept promising by telegraph that he would surely contest on the Scranton track.

Nordica says she has cabled Frau Wagner, accepting engagements to sing in "Tannhauser," "Lohengrin" and "Parsifal" at the next Bayreuth festival. She will cancel her contract with Sir Augustus Harris at Covent Garden.

FOR A $9,000 PURSE.

Smith Arrested Soon After by a Sheriff from Roby, Ind.

CONEY ISLAND, N. Y., Sept. 25.—Despite the stormy weather, the sporting fraternity came in droves to the Coney Island Athletic club tonight to witness the prize fight between George Dixon and Solly Smith. This match has attracted more wide-spread interest than any other fight that has been held at Coney Island since the club has been in existence. Prominent sporting men were attracted here from all parts of the country and the attendance was much larger than had been expected.

There were many Boston and Philadelphia people present. The contest proved to be the greatest betting event that has taken place at the club house. Dixon was the favorite in the betting, but Smith had many supporters. John Humphries of California bet $5,000 to $3,000 with Phil Howell, the bookmaker, Humphries taking the Smith end. This was the largest bet made. "Billy" West, the minstrel, bet $1,000 to $600 on Dixon and Mike Bradley of East Boston bet $1,000 to $600 on Dixon.

Soon after the battle had ended Smith was put under arrest by a sheriff from Roby, Ind., for being a principal in a fight there recently, with Johnny Griffin, before the defunct Columbia club

To Play at the Fair.

The New London Telegraph says: Fred C. Wight will be engaged this week at the county fair in Norwich doing an exhibition act for the Sheninger piano people, playing daily concerts for the benefit of any part of the fair crowd that may congregate around the booth where he is located. Last week he was engaged in similar work for the same company at the fair in Willimantic.

A Famous Fox Dog.

The Springfield Republican, in a description of fox hunting and the pleasure it affords, tells of the career of "Tinker," a famous dog in that city who has helped to secure at least 300 pelts. Once, when "Tinker" thought it was time to begin fox hunting again, he started from Springfield to Groton, and finally showed up in Norwich. Mr. H. A. Wulf, the tailor, took the wanderer home, communicated with the owner, Mr. Charles Bill, and a few days later saw the dog restored to his kennel.

Mr. Murphy's Movements.

Temperance Orator Murphy closed a successful campaign against the rum shops in Willimantic Sunday evening. He goes from there to New Britain, where he will be tonight and Wednesday evening. From there he goes to Putnam for four or five nights. After that he may go to Holyoke, Mass., but he is undecided as yet whether he will leave the state. They want him to come to Bridgeport after he leaves Putnam, and it is possible that he may go.

A Semi-Annual Visitor for Thirty Years.

A Norwich visitor on a Montville homestead last week was surprised at the cordiality with which the occupants greeted a nomadic organ grinder. On inquiry he learned that this particular dispenser of professed harmony had been a regular comer every spring and fall for thirty years, spending the night in the hay loft every trip. It was the wandering musician's steadfast custom to completely disrobe and slumber in the conventional night gown and in the morning to always bathe generously at the trough.

REGISTERING DENTISTS.

A Meeting of Commissioners in New Haven.

The state dental commissioners at a meeting held in New Haven Saturday, adopted rules governing the registration of all dentists practicing in this state prior to May 25, 1893, that being the time of the passage of the law regulating dental practice. All who were in practice before that date must file an application for registration with the recorder, Dr. George L. Parmelee of Hartford, who will soon send out blanks and full information to all known to the board to have been in practice, and to all who apply by letter to him. All who intend registering must do so before November 15, 1893, and after that date all not registered and desiring to legally practice in this state must appear before the full board in person and show cause to the commissioners why they should be licensed to practice. The fee for registration was fixed at $2.

PUBLIC USE OF THE ARMORY.

A New Order Has Been Issued by the Military Authorities.

In the general orders issued Friday from the adjutant general's office at Hartford, it is ordered as follows:

General orders No. 26, A. G. O., November 1, 1889, is hereby revoked, and the following substituted for paragraph VI.:

Whenever an application for the use of an armory for any purpose whatever, other than the regularly ordered drills, parades, inspections, and reviews of the battalion or companies, is received by the officer in charge, he shall at once report the same, with his recommendations, through regimental headquarters, to the quartermaster-general for his approval, and any agreement made by the officer in charge must be made subject to such approval.

LOOKING FOR A RIFLE RANGE.

It is Probable a Strip of Land Will Be Bought in Niantic.

Governor Morris, Adjutant General E. E. Bradley and Quartermaster General John P. Harbison were at Niantic Saturday, with a view to purchasing land near the state camp ground for a brigade rifle range.

It is more than likely that a strip of land which lies to the northwest of the military rendezvous will be purchased. This strip of land includes a long swale admirably adapted to the purpose, and was discovered by General Bradley during the recent encampment.

Most of the state contests have heretofore been held in Hartford. The other regiments think this unfair in that the First regiment has an advantage in shooting over the range which it is accustomed to practice on.

RALLY SUNDAY.

Its Observation in the First Congregational Church.

The Rally day services at the First Congregational church last Sunday were of unusual interest. A very large congregation, consisting mainly of church members, assembled for morning worship, and listened to a sermon from Col. 2:5—7, on "A Solid Front and How to Keep It."

The Sunday school rally brought together nearly all the enrolled scholars of the main school, together with many from the home department, and the claims of the Sunday school motto for the year, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God," were plainly and seriously presented to each scholar.

In the evening about fifty persons, young and old, gave testimony as to how Christ had helped them.

The church and Sunday school rooms were appropriately adorned with autumn flowers and foliages. There was extra singing and an attentive hearing at all the services. A new impetus was given to the work of the church, and brightening prospects already appear.

A collection of nearly fifty dollars was taken for the debt of the American Board.

PUTNAM.

Mrs. Lindsey's Narrow Escape—Another Store Burglarized—Various Matters.

Mrs. J. S. Lindsey, formerly of Putnam, but now of Philadelphia, was among those who were in the sleeper that was burned to ashes on a wrecked train west one night last week. She had been the guest of her sister, Mrs. E. G. Wright of this place, and was returning home. Mrs. Lindsey was formerly school teacher in the Fifth district school, and she has many friends here who will be pleased to learn that she escaped uninjured.

Some unknown burglars broke into the Putnam Manufacturing Company's store in the upper village, on Sunday night at about 12 o'clock, and carried off a quantity of canned goods. An entrance was gained by breaking two panes in the front window. It is thought to have been the work of tramps.

Before Judge Wheeler, in the superior court Monday, the case of Daniel Downing vs Jerry M. Sullivan, both of Plainfield, was called. This is a suit for debt. Court adjourned at 1 o'clock. The case may be settled. Attorney C. F. Thayer of Norwich appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. Shields of Norwich for the defendant.

Hon. L. H. Fuller is sightseeing at the World's fair.

Mrs. L. E. Smith and son, Bertie, have returned from a visit to Canterbury.

Leslie Harston is at the World's fair.

Fifty-two women voters registered at the town clerk's office last week.

STONINGTON POINT.

A Lively Democratic Caucus—The Nominees—The Regatta—Personals.

The democrats held their caucus for the nomination of town officers, to be voted for at the approaching election, in Borough hall, Saturday afternoon. A spirit of harmony did not prevail to any great extent. Before the meeting was organized quite a spirited row was engendered, by the refusal of the chairman of the town committee, George W. Tingley, to call the meeting to order. The reason for his action, he claimed, was that the call was not in accordance with an understanding arrived at, when he called the committee together a few days since, which was to the effect that the caucus should be called for September 30.

After a long wrangle Mr. James Dougherty of Pawcatuck, another member of the committee, called the caucus to order, and an organization was effected. Soon after this was done a democratic voter made himself obnoxious, by occupying too much of the time of the caucus, and he was taken to the lockup, in the lower part of the building, and kept in a cell until the deliberations were over.

The meeting then proceeded with its work. The following are the nominees for the prominent offices: Selectmen, George D. Stanton and James Purtill. Town clerk and treasurer, Elias B. Hinckley. Assessors, J. Hamilton Langworthy and Robert A. Woodburn. Board of relief, Calvin Wheeler and Dennis Hargan. Collector—Arthur G. Wheeler.

Town Committee—District No. 1, John E. Carter; district No. 2, James Dougherty; district No. 3, Arthur G. Wheeler; district No. 4, Charles H. Foley; district No. 5, Charles Bennett.

Mr. Thomas W. Capron, who has been an active locomotive engineer between this place and Providence for over thirty-nine years, has been placed in charge of the round house and railroad yard in place of Mr George Markham.

At the regatta of the Wamphassett Miniature Yacht club, Saturday afternoon, several races were contested. The light wind made the race very unsatisfactory, and no prizes were awarded. Another contest will take place on Wednesday afternoon of this week, at the mouth of the harbor.

The ordinance of baptism was administered to Attorney H. A. Hull, in the Baptist church, Sunday evening.

ROBBERS EUCHRED.

Two Are Killed and Three More Are Captured.

RAILROAD RIGGED DUMMY TRAIN.

Filled It With Police Officers and Foiled Attempt at Robbery.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Sept. 25.—The Kansas, St. Joe and Council Bluffs railroad people foiled an attempt last night to rob one of their passenger trains, and killed two of the bandits and captured three others at Francis, one and one-half miles from this city. The dead are, Ed Kohler and Bigo Indall. The captured are Frederick, Harsh and Harvey.

Train No. 3 was the intended victim. It left Kansas City at 9:05 last night and arrived here at 12:30 this morning. The officials had been notified that the robbery of the road had been planned and they notified the police. When the train arrived here a dummy train was made up and 16 police officers, under the command of the chief of police, were put aboard. In order the train was made an exact duplicate of the train No. 3, and consisted of an engine and tender, an express car and the usual coach and Pullmans.

When the dummy reached a point two miles north of St. Joseph the engineer's attention was arrested by a lighted lantern moving to and fro between the rails. He obeyed the signal and six masked men surrounded the engine. One of the six mounted the engine, and, presenting one revolver at the engineer and another at the fireman, held them in subjection while the other five men hastened to rob the express car. They ordered the messenger to open the door, which he did forthwith. Three of the bandits at once entered the car, leaving two without to keep guard. The policemen, who were guarding the train, were distributed in the various cars, the majority of them being Concealed in the Express Car.

When the three bandits entered the door the police ordered them to surrender. The robbers were taken completely by surprise, but opened fire at once upon the police. The latter returned the fire, and a general fusilade followed. About 25 shots were fired on both sides. When the smoke cleared away, the lifeless bodies of Kohler and Indall were found lying on the floor of the car. Both had been shot through the head. Frederick, the third robber engaged in the fight in the car, was uninjured and was placed under arrest. None of the officers were injured.

While the fight was going on in the car those of the police not engaged in it put under arrest the two robbers who had been left to keep watch. The bandit who had been detailed to guard the engineer and fireman quickly realized the situation when he heard the battle going on in the express car, and Promptly Made His Escape.

A detail of officers was quickly put upon the track and quickly took up the pursuit, with every prospect of capturing the fugitive before long.

A remarkable feature of the fight in the express car was the escape of all the officers from injury. The three robbers in the car were each armed with a brace of revolvers and used them freely, but still they did no harm. The bodies of Kohler and Indall were brought here on the dummy train, which returned to the city soon after the encounter. The prisoners, Frederick, Harsh and Harvey, were brought here on the same train with their dead comrades and were locked up at the police station. All the robbers lived here.

HARPER ON TRIAL.

Portland's Election Fraud Being Aired in the Superior Court.

PORTLAND, Sept. 25.—The trial of Thomas B. Harper, charged with election frauds, was begun in the superior court today. The court room was packed with politicians of both parties and leading lawyers of the city.

It will be remembered that during the municipal election in March 6 of this year, Harper, who was warden in ward 1, was charged with crookedness in altering the returns and destroying the ballots, thereby defrauding the Republicans of victory and necessitating another election.

Harper is defended by Hon. William Henry Clifford, and the government is represented by County Attorney True and Assistant County Attorney Webb.

The work of impanelling a jury occupied but a short time. The first indictment against Harper is that he gave a false count for mayor. The other four counts are modifications of the first. The polling place was reproduced as it was on March 6, and the jury examined it thoroughly this forenoon.

AGAIN BLOCKADED.

Rio Janeiro Is Once More Menaced by Admiral Mello's Ships.

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—The Herald's Montevideo correspondent cables: Admiral Mello, commanding the rebel fleet of Brazil, has renewed the blockade of Rio Janeiro, as the latest dispatches from that city state, and is now organizing a squadron to sail for northern ports. It is rumored that his destination is, first of all, Para.

Ruy Barbosa, who recently escaped from Rio Janeiro, has published a letter in which he says the navy under Mello is defending the rights of the Brazilian people against President Peixoto's military tyranny and despotic rule.

CHARGED WITH MANSLAUGHTER.

The Trial of George Colburn For Killing Fisher Ayers Begun.

DEDHAM, Mass., Sept. 25.—The case of George Colburn of Needham, charged with manslaughter in the alleged killing of Fisher Ayers at Needham on the night of Jan. 21, was called at Dedham for trial at 10:45. The court room was crowded when the defendant, aged 76, hobbled in on his crutch. Colburn has lost the sight of his right eye and his right arm is missing at the shoulder. His right leg has been broken twice and his left once, and the old man is a physical wreck.

The weapon used in killing is supposed to have been a club, as pieces of one were found on Colburn's premises. Ayer's dead body was found in the kitchen of Colburn's house, where the night before Colburn, the dead man and Francis Ayers, a brother of the deceased, had been engaged in a drinking bout. On April 28, Colburn was arraigned and pleaded not guilty.

The following jury was empaneled to try the case: Gustavus A. Crockett, Medway, painter, foreman; Edward P. Allen, Braintree, piano varnisher; George F. Boynton, Brookline, dry goods dealer; Henry M. Buck, Hyde Park, carpenter; Henry W. Clapp, North Weymouth, shoe cutter; George W. Cook, Wrentham, farmer; Daniel T. Curtis, Sharon, retired florist; Charles E. Davenport, Hyde Park, ice dealer; Peter McIntyre, Milton, farmer; Luther H. Morse, Canton, machinist; and George Nilson, Bellingham, blacksmith.

There were no challenges on either side. Thomas E. Grover appeared for the defense and District Attorney Harris for the commonwealth. Mr. Harris briefly outlined the government's case and called as the first witness Francis Ayes, a brother of the dead man. His evidence occupied the morning session.

HUSBAND ARRESTED.

Sanford Wood Accused of Trying to Chloroform His Wife.

ATTLEBORO, Sept. 25.—Sanford Wood, husband of the woman who was chloroformed last Thursday, was arrested at his home in Attleboro Falls this morning by Deputy Sheriff Brown, on suspicion of being the person who administered the chloroform. Wood has had a bad record in the past.

A few years ago he was arrested by Deputy Sheriff Brown for breaking and entering the Congregational church at Attleboro Falls and stealing the money box. He pleaded guilty and was placed on probation.

It has been lately discovered that Wood has been intimate with a Pawtucket lady, and it is alleged that this is one of the reasons why he wanted his wife out of the way. It has further been discovered by the officers that Wood was probably guilty of writing the letter his wife received threatening her life.

The fact that there was no man discovered in the house, and no way by which he could have got in or out, is strong evidence, the officers think that Wood must know something about the matter. Mrs. Wood is also of the opinion that her husband was the guilty party.

Mrs. Wood is from a respectable family, and the affair has about prostrated its members. The officers have also secured evidence which, it is said, will show Wood guilty of other wrong doing of a serious nature in connection with his family.

CAPTURED AT LAST.

Virginia's Most Notorious Moonshiner in the Hands of Officers.

WHEELING, W. Va., Sept. 25.—The most important capture of a moonshine whiskey maker of recent years was made by United States Marshal Harmon on Indian Creek, Wyoming county, Saturday. The man captured was the famous Willard Morgan, over whose head a reward has been hanging for 10 years.

Morgan began making moonshine whisky and killing people who were in his way in 1870, and has prospered and defied the law ever since. He has, with the assistance of those engaged with him, driven a dozen posses out of Wyoming county, and last fall, single-handed, disarmed four officers and made them walk out of the county before the muzzle of his Winchester.

The number of men who have died at his hand is variously estimated at from six to 18. He was finally captured at the duplicity of one of his men, who led him into close quarters, where he was surrounded.

BOSTON'S POLICE RECORD

Opens Up With Two Deaths by Suicide Monday Morning.

BOSTON, Sept. 25.—Two cases of suicide opened up the police records this morning. The victim in one case was William Blackburn, a middle aged man, who resided at 113 West Concord street. He was found dead in his room this morning, and an open unlighted gas jet near his bed seemed to complete the tale.

The other victim was Patrick O'Donnell, a junk dealer at 184 Dorchester avenue, who was found dead in his shop early in the morning. Beside him on the floor lay an empty phial which contained the drug with which he is supposed to have ended his life.

APPLEY AT HOME.

Proud of His Feat of Rowing a Shell to the World's Fair.

PAWTUCKET, R. I., Sept. 25.—Franklin G. Appley of the Pawtucket Boat club, the champion long distance sculler of the world, who rowed from Pawtucket to Chicago in an aluminum shell of the ordinary racing pattern, has arrived home. He left his shell, the Little Rhody, at Chicago, where it will be on exhibition during the remainder of the fair, probably in the Rhode Island department of the fisheries building.

The whole distance rowed is estimated at about 2000 miles—down the Pawtucket river and Narragansett bay, around Point Judith, through Long Island sound, by the Hudson river, and then by way of the great lakes.

Appley left Pawtucket on the evening of June 3, and arrived in Chicago Sept. 2, having been just three months on his trip. He is looking remarkably well after his long row, and is, as he has the right to be, somewhat proud of his feat.

THE MOUNTAIN.

From lands of sunshine gay with bloom
We took the northern course and came
To that great city which delights
Grim satire in Seattle's name.

A remnant weak, his people take
The crumbs that from her table fall;
The past is theirs, the future hers
Who crowds them harshly to the wall.

Proudly she sits upon her hills,
Her various waters gleaming round;
Her snowy crested mountains fair,
Soft mirrored in their blue profound.

But one, the top and crown of all,
High soaring far above the rest,
Hid in impenetrable clouds
His towering head, his ample breast.

But, oh, at length a morning dawned,
One more divine earth never knew,
When better far than winter dream
The mountain clove the heavenly blue.

The mountain! All the snowy peaks
Which mountains seemed the day before,
That day were little hills, so high
We saw the highest climb and soar.

So high! So grand! And yet with all
So sweetly, delicately fair.
We had believed if one had said,
"A dream, a phantom of the air."

And as the perfect day went by
More dreamlike still the mountain grew,
As gathering mists, a purple zone,
Around his base their vesture drew

All white and pure from crown to foot
There floated in the azure deep
A hill of heaven, a mount of God.
It made our hearts with gladness leap.

The things of sense are types of soul.
How oft for many days the best
Is thick involved in clouds that chill
Man's heart within his lonely breast!

And then there comes a day of days,
And floating bright in heavenly air
He sees the mount of God, all white
With fields of faith and founts of prayer.

And by that glorious vision blest
He knows the peace that passeth thought.
God folds him to his heart. His good
Is better than the best he sought.
—John W. Chadwick.

WOMAN'S WORLD.

THE WOMEN OF GRAND RAPIDS WILL VOTE FOR SCHOOL OFFICERS.

Miss Willard and Lady Henry Somerset. Bread and Butter—Utilizing Autumnal Beauty—Women Learning Politics—She Has Made the World Richer.

That the women intend to take a hand in the coming school election is evident. They are bestirring themselves to call out candidates in the several wards, and the enthusiasm displayed in the informal primaries is suggestive of a presidential year. This is just as it should be. It ill becomes anybody to question the right of women to participate in the management of the public schools. It ill becomes anybody to ridicule their attempts to organize to assist one another in exercising the limited franchise conferred on them at school elections.

It is a short step from the nursery to the schoolroom. The mother that teaches her child the manners and [illegible] demanded by modern civilization is better qualified than anybody else to provide for its education in the arts and sciences as taught in the public schools. Therefore the women should be encouraged in their efforts to secure and retain a voice in the selection of school trustees. If the board of education were dominated by competent women, it is fair to presume that the schools would be managed quite as well, if not better, than they are at present. If the women seek larger political rights than they now enjoy, that, too, is commendable. It should not be a text for covert sneers and biting sarcasm.

Many women have no desire for the suffrage; many men have no desire that they shall have it. The women that do desire it are our wives, mothers and sweethearts, and they are demanding the right to vote, not because they are our loved ones, but because they have brains. They have been petted and pampered and enslaved since the dawn of creation. Now they want the privilege of thinking and voting for themselves, and we have no apprehension for their weal.

Give the women the fullest measure of freedom consistent with good government, and our [illegible], both public and private, will be the better.—Grand Rapids Herald.

Miss Willard and Lady Somerset.

"The uncrowned queen of American democracy," Miss Frances Willard, and that much admired English woman, Lady Henry Somerset, have attained the height of friendship where they can be justly termed the Damon and Pythias of modern women. A photograph of them has just been sent out in which they appear standing side by side, with their arms around each other's waist.

Miss Willard and Lady Somerset are long past the gentle schoolgirl period, and friendship between women of their maturity must be adamant to stand the test of the camera in such an affectionate position. It is too rare to escape attention. Feminine friendship has been railed at as frailest of the frail, made only to break at the first corner.

The latest cable dispatches report these two friends as resting together among the mountains of Switzerland. From the first moment when Miss Willard and Lady Somerset met, about 18 months ago, they have been bound by more than ordinary ties. They were prepared to agree with each other, but since the death of Miss Willard's mother they have hardly been separated.

In this country they have worked and traveled together. Then Miss Willard was the guest of Lady Somerset in her English home. The English and American temperance leaders worked in England together, and reached America in season for the W. C. T. U. convention in Boston. Next Chicago acquired the great pair, and following their exertions at the fair they took refuge on the continent. It is understood that at the next move Lady Somerset will return to visit Miss Willard here.—New York World.

Miss Elizabeth Tagg has "proved up" on a pre-emption entry for 160 acres of land in Columbia county, Or., and proposes to settle on her claim and make a good farm out of it. She is young and has lived for several years in Astoria.

A young woman of Drifton, Pa., not only mends her own shoes, but those of the members of her family. It is said that she is proud of her ability as a shoemaker.

Bread and Butter.

A new adjunct to the breakfast table is the butter "spreader." It is a knife 5 or 6 inches long, with a blade varying in size from a half to three-quarters of an inch. One side of the end of the blade is rounded. The other side rises in a point divided into two teeth. You break apart your lump of butter with the teeth and the blade spreads it on the bread. The new notion is to serve butter in tiny balls or curls or cubes, patted in the home pantry and kept solid in a cool place until serving. For helping there is a spear or lance of silver or gold, the point of which is thrust through the butter ball and so transferred to the bread and butter plate.

To accommodate the fashion in serving, new styles of butter bowls are seen. They are round and flat, with sides of open work silver 3 inches high. The silver shape is filled with white or colored glass or china. Their usefulness is shown in warm weather, when the glass is half filled with ice water or cracked ice, and the butter balls float about solid and firm during the meal or until they are eaten.

A new silver piece is the "bread fork," a trident with a short cylindrical handle of bright repousse work and prongs of the same, 3 inches long, terminating in points. The idea and design are imported from the English table, where the fork is of practical use. The Britisher has his cold loaf on the table and slices it as one wishes it. Whoever assumes the duty passes not the breadboard for you to help yourself, but the slice on the tip of the bread knife. The fork is in helping to replace the knife.—Detroit Free Press.

Utilizing Autumnal Beauty.

Forest, field and woodland yield forth their glorious harvest of autumnal treasures — bittersweet, clematis, fantastic thorns and twigs, vines and bright foliage, that still linger as delicious memories of the gay bloom and sapphire skies of the sunny queen. The wayside is studded with gleaming gold, dark eyed yellow daisies and that feathery rod, the favorite of the nation. Harvest these beautiful offerings, and with them deck the home, brightening the cheerless season of ice and snow, when all without is desolate and barren.

Cut golden rod with long stems, strip off the leaves and dry. With seasoning, the stems grow hard and woody, and will readily stand when tied into a huge standing bouquet for the corner. The gleaming roadside daisies press beautifully between several layers of cotton wadding. They are pretty arranged in panel form against a plain or calcimined wall, particularly as a hall decoration.

The foliage of the black oak retains its gorgeous coloring until spring if cut before heavy frosts. The young sprouts, shooting up from an old stump, seem to be most brilliant in their wealth of tints. These branches are effective as a frieze above a square or bay window. Likewise wonderful effects are wrought through the twining of the bittersweet, clematis and hop vines. All of these must be cut before frost has nipped them. —Anna Hinrichs.

Women Learning Politics.

There are indications that an entirely new branch of education will soon be established in New Haven. It will be nothing less than a school for the instruction of women in the peculiar and complicated profession of politics.

At the coming fall election the women will be given their first opportunity to vote, and although they will be restricted to balloting for members of the board of education they are none the less interested in their new privilege.

The women are determined to be represented on the board of education. There are nine members on the board, and the women want two of the places for themselves. It is probable that each party will try to secure the female vote by placing a woman on its ticket. As there is a minority representation provided for, this would practically insure the election of two women.

The new voters will demand the privilege of naming their own candidates, but they have not yet proceeded so far as to pick them out. They feel that they are not sufficiently versed in political methods to take that action just now, and are waiting until they shall have secured an initiation into the ways of the politicians. It is expected that several thousand women will register with the town clerk and will deposit their ballots in the special boxes which will be provided for them.—Cor. New York Press.

She Has Made the World Richer.

Miss Mary Grew of Philadelphia passed her eightieth birthday Sept. 1. She received loving tributes from many appreciative friends. Miss Grew's long and noble life has been spent in aiding all good things. She was one of the delegates to the world's antislavery convention in London in 1840, with Lucretia Mott and Sarah Pugh. The women delegates from America were refused seats in the convention on account of their sex. Mr. Garrison declined to take his seat if the women were not admitted, and he sat with them in the gallery.

Miss Grew was a coworker with Mr. Garrison and Mr. Phillips all through the antislavery struggle. She then entered heart and soul into the battle for the equal rights of women. Her high and spotless character commanded esteem, as her warmth of heart attracted love. She was for many years the principal pillar of the suffrage movement in Pennsylvania, and she is now honorary president of the Philadelphia W. S. A., one of the largest and strongest suffrage associations in the country.

Miss Grew is one of the women whose lives have made the world richer, and a multitude of friends will heartily wish her "Many happy returns."—Exchange.

A number of Kentucky women are running for office this year and are said even by their opponents to be good speakers, making an active canvass and hustling for votes. Miss Lucy Townsend, a Democrat, is running against Miss Dora Gibson, Republican, for superintendent of public schools in one county. Miss Kate Edgar is carrying the Democratic standard for the same office in another county, and Miss Laura Cravens has announced her candidacy in a third.—Exchange.

Sextons are proverbially long lived men. Not many of them, however, can surpass the record of Mrs. Sarah Kitchen, who recently departed this life at the age of 98, she having been for 74 years the faithful sextoness of a Leicestershire church.

London Women Advised to Rebel.

Why do not our ladies rebel en masse and persist in promenading during the acts and taking their coffee or tea, claret or champagne cup in the foyers and refreshment buffets with their gentlemen friends, brothers and husbands? The only alteration I would have in our theaters is that a handsome foyer as well as refreshment rooms should be added to every house. I don't see why ladies should be obliged in several theaters to keep their seats during the whole of a play when there is ample time given between the acts to promenade or take some refreshment if they wish to do so.

I often pity a lady in the stalls on a sultry evening, looking flushed and hot, and evidently yearning for a glass of claret cup, a lemon squash, or an ice, and yet were she to have such refreshment brought to her society would be shocked. In these days it is not considered ladylike and smart to eat an ice or drink a cup of coffee or a glass of wine in a box; although, if you get far back and well behind the curtains, dear ladies, no one can see you should you desire any one of these refreshments.—Sala's Journal.

Amusing Figures at the German.

Among some of the figures danced at a cotillon at one of the smart houses in London recently were the following: Fencing foils, in which two gentlemen fenced with foils tipped with powder puffs, the one who first left his white mark on his adversary claiming the privilege of the dance with the lady. Airball figure, two balls thrown in the air, and the competitor who first secured one had the choice of a partner.

The wheelbarrow was another successful and amusing figure. Two barrows filled with light trifles were rapidly wheeled from one end of the ballroom to the other, the man who was able to reach the goal first without upsetting the contents securing the dance.

The giant muff was a welcome novelty, the ladies and gentlemen thrusting their hands into it, and when it opened the interlocked hands decided the question of partners for their owners.

Still another was the melinite bomb, which, bursting, showered bits of paper.

To Make a Test Case.

The women of Deerfield who were denied registration and so lost their right to vote for school committee last spring have moved with deliberation in calling the offending officials to account—but they have moved. Edward C. Cowles, Alden Briggs and Henry Waite, a majority of the board, realized the fact when warrants were served upon them by Officer Snead. They have been settling into the comfortable belief that the women were either forgetful, forgiving or timid, neither of which is true, as the result is certain to show.

The suit is brought by Mary A. Fisher, one of the women deprived of what she considers was her legal right to vote, and it is understood that she is the representative of others, the sum of $100 having been raised by them to carry through the test suit. Mrs. Fisher names $500 as the damage done by each of the registrars.—Deerfield (Mass.) Gazette.

At the End of the Rainbow.

The fashionable woman's fashionable gown has not been a thing of beauty during the past season, and from every indication of fall and winter styles it will not soon be much lovelier. It will doubtless be more elaborate, more lavishly trimmed and built out in more astonishing fashion across the shoulders. Huge sleeves and stiff bretelles still reign, while skirts are adorned from waist to hem with ruffles, velvet, ribbon, rosettes and every sort of trimming that feminine fancy can devise. During the reign of tailor made, untrimmed gowns of a year or two ago it was prophesied that an outbreak of frippery and fol-de-rols loomed up on a not far distant horizon, and now we are surely at the end of the rainbow. —Springfield (Mass.) Homestead.

A "Lady Cowboy."

In Pratt county, S. D., lives Gertrude Paten, who is known among the residents of that neighborhood as the "lady cowboy." Her father owns a ranch and a large number of cattle, and much of the care of these devolves upon his 18-year-old daughter. Dressed in the fashion prevalent among cowboys and wearing a wide brimmed sombrero and long gauntlet gloves, she rides all day about the ranch mounted on the wildest broncho, taking care of the cattle as well as any man could do, even rescuing them when they are mired along the streams where they graze. Her duties frequently take her 30 or 40 miles from home, and she has full charge of all the cattle on her father's ranch.—Harper's Bazar.

Table Decorations.

The considerate table furnisher has recently designed some decorations for those occasions when a simple dish of flowers seems inadequate. They are arranged to combine candelabra and flowers in the way usually described as fairylike. The arches for the ends of the table have shades set around them in which either fairy lamps or electric light globes may be fastened and vases for holding flowers. The center piece has its bowl similarly arranged and smaller arches. When vines and feathery plants like maidenhair and asparagus fern are used plentifully, the effect of the glowing lamps shining out of the mass of green is remarkably good.—Exchange.

Literary Woman's Attire.

Lady Wilde (Oscar's mother) has been writing a book of "Social Studies," and among other things she gives the following description of what she considers a model dress for literary women: "The literary dress should, in fact, be free, untrammeled and unswathed; as simple and as easily adjusted as Greek drapery, and fastened only with a girdle or a brooch. No stiff corselet should depress the full impulses of a passionate heart. There should be no false coils upon the head to weigh upon the brain, no fuzzy furze brush on the brow to heat the temples and mar the cool logic."

Rose Hardwick Thorpe, the author of "Curfew Must Not Ring Tonight," is now living in California, but her early home was in Litchfield, Mich. The poem was written one afternoon in school, when the writer was only 15 years old.

A divorce was secured by a two months' bride in Superior, Wis., because her spouse refused to scratch her back.

Mr. Ferguson's Saving Prayer.

Away back in the early sixties Mr. Ferguson was defending a man accused of beating his wife. The case was on trial before a justice of the peace, probably the same justice who decided that stealing a sack of potatoes out of a canoe was "piracy on the high seas." The accused was convicted, and the justice promptly sentenced him to be hanged.

"But you can't hang a man for beating his wife," expostulated Ferguson.

"The devil I can't," said the justice, bridling up. "Ain't he guilty? Oughtn't any man to be hung who would beat a woman and that woman his wife? And ain't I the only judge in this county? If I haven't got the power to hang a man, who has, eh? I'll hang him within an hour; won't we, boys?" he concluded, addressing the crowd standing around, whose sympathies were evidently with the woman.

"That we will," shouted the crowd.

Seeing that the case was beginning to look serious for his client, Ferguson said:

"Well, your honor, before the man is hanged I'd like to take him out behind that big tree and pray with him."

"All right," said the justice, and off went the prisoner and Ferguson. When they got behind the tree Ferguson said in an undertone:

"Now git, you hound." And he got.—Seattle Press-Times.

Collecting Canceled Stamps.

What is apparently more useless than canceled postage stamps? And yet there is a store on Michigan avenue where they seem to be in demand. One of the windows is entirely heaped up with present day United States stamps, mostly of the 2 cent denomination. There must be thousands of them, and the observer can only wonder what in the world can be their value. They cannot possess any particular interest to the stamp collector, for they are neither rare nor valuable. To the ordinary person the canceled 2 cent postage stamp seems a worthless thing indeed. Prices paid for such stamps, however, are 10 cents per 1,000, $1 per 10,000, and $12 per 100,000. Many an industrious lad will probably be moved by this offer (as the appearance of the window indeed testifies), and yet the immense labor of collecting 100,000 stamps can be appreciated.

Yet during the Centennial stamps were bought in the same manner, and those who purchased them are today reaping a handsome profit, for the Centennial postage stamp has increased wonderfully in value in a canceled condition during the last few years. As time goes on stamps increase greatly in value, especially stamps issued for one year only on a special occasion like the Centennial or fair. To show how valuable a stamp may become, the writer of this may mention the fact that eight years ago he purchased a first issue English envelope stamp in London for $7.50, and it was at that time worth a great deal more in this country. Now it has probably increased still more.—Detroit Free Press.

A New Theory of Sleep.

Some discussion has been going on concerning Herr Rosenbaum's recently proposed theory of sleep—namely, that the somnic condition of the brain is due to an excess of water in the brain cells of that body. The supposition, as stated, is that sleep is essentially a matter of nervous action, and the direct cause is thought to be fatigue of the nerve cells which communicate with the heart and bring about some change in the circulation. The nerve cells are thus supposed to be full of water when sleep comes on, and this water during sleep passes into the venous blood as waste, and the nerve cells then receive nourishment from fresh arterial blood. Then when the process is entirely over the sleeper awakens.

According to this theory, sleep is not solely healthy because it rests the body and brain, but also because it invigorates them. It is also to be inferred from Rosenbaum's theory that the nerve cells and brains of infants who sleep so much must contain more water than is to be found in those of adults, and that the effectiveness of brain cells is in inverse ratio to the water contents.—New York Tribune.

Odd Insurance.

There is in existence a legitimate "graveyard" company. It is a company operating entirely among the very poor and insures a man against pauper burial. The agents of the company put it in less disagreeable terms and offer simply to guarantee decent burial.

The company engages to furnish a grave in a cemetery and see that the insured is respectfully interred therein. If any member of his family dies before him, he is given a deed to a lot in which he may bury his dead.

Some of the large companies issue a policy covering losses from defective title, defalcations by partner, agent or other employee for which a firm may be liable, damage by storm, losses caused by accident to or by steam boilers, engines, lifts, steam pipes, automatic sprinklers or other specified machinery, including all kinds of machinery in use.—Boston Globe.

Why Not?

Apropos of Marion Crawford's remark about our mustached butlers, that they amused him after the shorn ones of England, why won't somebody say that our butlers—our American butlers—wear mustaches, and we, when abroad, find it amusing to see the English butlers smooth shaven, and wonder why their masters do not insist that their mouths be covered. Will the time ever come when we will dare to be Americans?

There are great lessons to be learned from the older nations of the world, great models to be studied and wisdom to be got from the experience which is the accretion of centuries, concerning which the taste of one cultivated community is as good as that of any other. —New York Times.

The Cat Was Hungry.

A young lady bookkeeper employed in an office at South Manchester, Conn., has been in the habit for some time past of giving the office cat a piece of meat for its lunch every day. Precaution is taken to lay a piece of paper under the meat to avoid greasing the floor. The other day at lunch hour, when there was no meat, pussy begged for some in her most intelligent fashion, and at last going to the wastebasket dragged forth her regular paper table cloth and laid it properly for the meat.—Philadelphia Ledger.

STEAMBOATING ON THE OHIO.

It Was at the Height of Its Prosperity Half a Century Ago.

It was from 1840 to 1855 that steamboating was at its height. Fortunes were made in those years by men who owned and ran boats. There were lots of steamers on the river then. The embryo industries of that period depended on the river entirely, for railroads had only been proposed—not built. About 100 steamboats were built at Pittsburg annually to run on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers. This city was noted for the trim crafts it placed on the water, as some of the biggest and best running steamers were built at the headwaters of the Ohio.

The boats of the early steamboating days were all side wheelers. It was not until late that the advent of the stern wheel boats occurred, and when it did they were not looked upon with favor by the denizens of the side wheel crafts. The rivermen regarded them as an inferior kind of boat, on whose decks it was beneath the dignity of a first class steamboatman to tread.

The packets were of good size and stoutly built. They were not supplied with swinging stages and steam capstans, and their engines were of sure but not so graceful movement as engines now, and electric lights for steamboats were not even dreamed of. But they served their purpose in making big money for their owners.

There was but one organized packet company running boats down the river from Pittsburg. It was the old Pittsburg and Cincinnati Packet line, and it owned about 25 steamboats, some of which left the Pittsburg wharf daily. Among them were the Buckeye State, the Hibernia, Pittsburg, Crystal Palace and Pennsylvania. These boats were all stoutly built and especially adapted for fast running. The laws relating to racing were not so stringent then as now, and exciting contests of speed on the river occurred daily.

One of the swiftest of the packets was the Pennsylvania. She was the largest of the Cincinnati boats and made some splendid records on the Ohio. She was 310 feet long and 21 feet beam. Another fast steamer was the Alleghany. She was not so large as the Pennsylvania, but was almost as speedy. Some of these old Cincinnati Packet line boats were sunk, a few burned, and the others wore out in the river service.

Besides the Cincinnati company's packets there were several steamers, most of them owned by Pittsburgers, which ran down the river and which had no regular trades, but made trips whenever and wherever there was occasion for their services. They were chiefly to St. Louis and New Orleans, the trip to the last named point being completed in about 30 days. There were a few boats running up the Monongahela and Alleghany rivers. Brownsville was as far up as the slackwater improvements extended on the Monongahela, and Franklin was the head of navigation on the Alleghany. —Pittsburg Post.

A Dardistan Legend of a Bear.

Two women, a mother and her little daughter, were one night watching their field of Indian corn—"makai"—against the inroads of the bears. The mother had to go to her house to prepare the food and ordered her daughter to light a fire outside. While she was doing this a bear came and took her away. He carried her to his den and daily brought her to eat and drink. He rolled a big stone in front of the den whenever he went away on his tours, which the girl was not strong enough to move.

When she became old enough to do this, he used daily to lick her feet, by which they became swollen and gradually dwindled down to mere misshapen stumps. The girl eventually died, and the poor bear, after vain efforts to restore her to life, roamed disconsolately about the fields.—Dr. Leitner in Asiatic Quarterly.

A Book Brought Down From Heaven.

According to Mohammedan belief, the first copy of the Koran, or Alkoran, their sacred book, was brought down from the highest to the lowest heaven by Gabriel on the mysterious night of Al Khade in the month of Ramadan. This wonderful book, written in heaven and bound in satin, jewels and gold, was communicated to Mohammed at different times during a period of 23 years. This was done, according to Mohammedan belief, either by Gabriel in human shape or by God himself. When Gabriel acted as translator and communicator, he did so "with a great sound of music and bells." God appeared either "veiled or unveiled during Mohammed's waking hours or during dreams at night."—St. Louis Republic.

THE REPUBLICAN CAUCUS.

The republican caucus for the nomination of town officers will be held Wednesday, and there should be a large attendance. There is no reason why every good republican should not be interested in the nomination of town officials and the fitness of the nominees for the offices which they are selected to fill. There is a good opportunity this fall to place Norwich under republican rule again if the nominations are made with regard to the fitness and popularity of the candidates. There are reasons why the present board should not be continued, and they are of a character which ought to be clear to every business man in the town.

There should be a large caucus, and the republicans who are nominated should be the choice of the party and command the full party vote. That is all that is needed in Norwich to place the republicans in power, and we hope that the primary meeting will be a representative meeting, with the olden-time enthusiasm and a hustling spirit which will presage republican success.

THE POLICY OF OBSTRUCTION.

Congress has entered upon the greatest farce which was ever undertaken in this nation in a period of distress and uncertainty. The discussion of the federal elections bill as a filibustering scheme to delay the unconditional repeal of the silver purchasing bill is an insult to a patient people and a disgrace to the party in power.

There is nothing in the federal election laws which interferes with the rights of any quiet, law-abiding citizen, and these laws were made necessary by the overt acts and acts of injustice at polling places, of which the South furnishes a proportion of instances out of all proportion to her territory or population. These laws were intended to protect the polls and the citizens in their rights, and have been executed with as much judgment and care as any protective laws could be.

The democratic party has made its record of violence at the polls, and if ever the use of bayonets was contemplated at the ballot boxes it was because a shot-gun or bludgeon policy made it necessary.

In the New England states the federal elections law works no harm and when the democrats are in power they always fill the quota of deputy marshals allowed under the statute and these democratic poll-supervisors enjoy the money which their services bring. This is merely a policy of obstruction of which a decent party ought to be heartily ashamed.

ANOTHER EXPLORER.

The latest American who has resolved to turn explorer is Julian Hawthorne, the novelist, who believes that there is something to be discovered and written about in the Sargasso sea, of which Theodore Tilton drew such a wierd picture in his novel entitled "Tempest Tossed." Mr. Hawthorne writes The New York Recorder: "About this time next year I expect to know more about the Sargasso sea than any one does now. I shall leave for Jamaica next month, and after getting established there, as headquarters, I mean to prosecute expeditions to those places where it is good to be, but where few people ever succeed in getting. The rent of a fishing schooner in which to make the voyage will cost but little, and were it to cost much, the returns of the adventures, direct or indirect, would repay it and leave a balance. Imagine me, if you please, next winter, say about February and March, when you up here are thinking that life on earth is a raw, dismal, comfortless, inhuman waste and exasperation of body and mind, paddling about within hail of the Equator, in a delicious, mysterious, ambiguous, problematical fairyland of tropic vegetation, bottomed upon transparent abysms of heaving ocean, and transversed by winding canals, interlacing and leading into an enchanted maze of wonders, which have drifted thither through ages, drawn by the subtle attractions of ocean currents as the magnet draws iron filings; finding the hull of the Fliegende [illegible] and the poops of Spanish galleons lost 300 years ago, and the shell-encrusted keel of an ancient Norwegian pinnacle, like the one in Chicago, with a couple of mermaids sitting on it, who will bob down into the water as I approach, but will afterward come up again and strike up an acquaintance."

We hesitate to quote farther from Mr. Hawthorne's highly imaginative picture of his expectations: but we venture the prediction that if he realizes one half of his imaginative picture that he will be the most successful explorer of his age.

COMPOUNDING THE OUTRAGE.

The democratic orators of the last campaign pointed out the outrage of a policy which taxed the breakfast table and everything an American wore; and now their party is compounding the outrage by imposing taxes upon tea, coffee, sugar, beer, tobacco and incomes, so that "the constitution of the United States may not be violated and no wrong shall be done the poor foreigner!" The democratic party is the only party on earth that thinks the foreign manufacturer is a benefactor, and should be given free privileges in the home markets of the country.

THE DIFFERENCE.

Republican protection forced British manufacturers to erect plants in the United States in order to compete with American manufacturers in the same business line. They built of American material, hired American workmen, paid American wages, and increased the business and prosperity of this land. If the democratic policy of free trade prevails Americans must move their works abroad to gain the advantage given to foreigners, or else they must cut down their workingmen to the price paid the foreign laborer, and add to the American distress on account of a policy that is un-democratic and against the thrift and prosperity of this republic.

NEW BOOKS.

"Ingleside," by Barbara Yechton, with illustrations by Jessie McDermott. T. Y. Crowell & Co., publishers, New York and Boston.

This is a charmingly written and popular story which first appeared in The Churchman, and was put into book form in answer to a lively demand for it. The heroine of the story is a winsome little maiden of nine years, Theodosia, who by her innocence brought about a reconciliation between an old aunt and a favorite nephew, after whose marriage the aunt resolved never to love another child. Dosia wins the affection of her self-willed and stern old aunt, and her life in a Philadelphia mansion is prettily and entertainingly told. For sale by Noyes & Davis.

Famous Voyagers and Explorers, by Sarah K. Bolton, with portraits. T. Y. Crowell & Co., publishers, New York and Boston.

This is the eleventh book in Mrs. Bolton's famous series, and is written in the same entertaining manner. It contains portraits of Raleigh, Sir John Franklin, Magellan, Dr. Kane, Greely, Livingstone and others. The frontispiece is a portrait of Columbus. Beginning with Columbus she gives the biography of explorers who were concerned in the discovery of this continent or whose explorations had a bearing more or less direct upon it. There is a great variety in the book, which will appeal to all classes of readers. For sale by Cranston & Co.

Third Hand High, a novel, by W. N. Murdock. Lee & Shepard, publishers, Boston. Paper.

This is No. [illegible] of the Good Company series, and the eminence of the writer is a guaranty that it is both entertaining and profitable reading. For sale by Noyes & Davis.

VOICE OF THE PRESS.

Starvation for Pensioners.

The pension policy of the administration—starve all the old veterans to death.—[N. Y. Recorder.

There's No Other Side.

"There is no other side," excitedly declared Speaker Crisp in the house last week, when he throttled the republican minority. This is the precise condition the democratic party seeks to create by its efforts to wipe out the sole safeguards to honest federal elections.—[New York Press.

To Make the Thing Certain.

Under the new rules adopted by the house the democratic majority believes it will be amply protected against Tom Reed. To make the thing certain it should vote to confine him in the crypt of the capitol while it is in session.—[N. Y. Recorder.

Shifts the Responsibility.

Even Hoke Smith, it appears, is unwilling to take the full responsibility for the harsh measures of the pension bureau, and publicly explains that the original order of Commissioner Lochren went further than he approved.—[Boston Journal.

Democratic Can's and Can't's.

In South Carolina if a negro is known to be a democrat he can take part in the democratic primaries so far as to cast his vote. In Tennessee it makes no difference how good a democrat a negro may be, he cannot vote in the primaries.—[Springfield Republican.

A Warming Proposition.

However strong the antipathy which southern members of congress feel to pensions for Union veterans, they may be expected to warm toward Mr Oates's proposition to restore to the pension lists those Mexican war veterans who have been unable to furnish proof of their loyalty during the rebellion.—[Boston Journal.

A Bold and Righteous Venture.

The Times-Democrat ventures to direct the immediate and earnest attention of Governor Foster to the atrocity of this gratuitous and unprovoked lynching of innocent negroes in Jefferson parish, and to the negro persecuting spirit which is evidently pervading the parish as a sequel to Judge Estopinal's death. The negroes of Jefferson parish, however humble and however undesirable citizens they may be, are entitled to protection from outrage.—[New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Where the Blame Is.

The responsibility for this apparently hopeless and quite possibly dangerous state of affairs rests upon the twenty democratic senators from the south, who, in chasing the chimera of free coinage, are willing to render the senate imbecile and helpless, to defeat their party, to discredit their administration and to abandon all hope of securing any of the reforms which the people have commissioned the democratic party to execute.—[New York World (dem.)

A Single Case.

Here, for example, is a single case, described in a few words by the pensioner himself:

Sir: I have drawn $8 a month pension for three years, being totally disabled. I served three years in the Tenth Wisconsin regiment and never applied for a pension until crippled by age. I am 65. Two months ago Hoke Smith cut off my pension without cause and without explanation. I never knew it until the check failed to come. Then I wrote to the secretary. After three weeks a reply came that my pension had been suspended. No cause was given. Is this fair? Is it lawful?

E. S. TALCOTT.

[illegible], Conn.

This is but one instance out of perhaps ten or fifteen thousand. It is not an exceptional instance, because the class of pensioners singled out for the process of summary suspension is made up of the oldest, feeblest and most helpless on the list.—[Boston Journal.

If human dwellings were constructed on the same proportionate scale as the ant-hills of Africa, private residences would be a mile high.

PRESIDENT'S FAITH.

Believes Senate Will Pass Silver Repeal Bill.

GORMAN HOLDS SAME OPINION.

Astonishment Expressed at the Attitude of Southern Democrats.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—Notwithstanding the conditions in the senate at this moment concerning silver repeal are not very encouraging, still the president and Secretary Carlisle entertain the belief that the repeal bill will ultimately pass. They are supported in this opinion by Senators Gorman, Voorhees, McPherson, Gray and other administration senators. When asked upon what they based their conclusions they have no very tangible reason to give. They are, perhaps, basing their calculations primarily upon the idea that the silver leaders will eventually abandon the struggle. They also feel that it will be impossible for them to continue the fight in the face of the overwhelming public sentiment which is arraying itself against factious obstruction. The silver senators are hearing from many of the business men in their localities, who are inquiring whether their course is not detrimental rather than beneficial to the interests which they wish to serve. These senators, however, have so persistently held their ground that they cannot see how they can consistently retrace their steps without Laying Themselves Open to Criticism.

The silver senators on the Democratic side who are more aggressive now than they were two weeks ago, will not listen to any suggestions of abandoning the fight. The foremost in this are the two senators from Alabama, Morgan and Pugh, Cockrell and Vest of Mississippi, Butler and Vance from the Carolinas, and Walthall and George of Mississippi. The president and members of the cabinet are greatly surprised at their action. They believe that if these senators had taken a conservative course and had promptly come to the support of the administration, they would have had their people with them. The president and members of his cabinet were led to believe, when the administration assumed control of the government, that they would have the cordial and earnest support of the same men in the south who secured his nomination and election. This understanding continued up to the meeting of the extra session. All were treated with great deference and consideration. In no instance were their wishes disregarded. Now these senators and criticising his course on the silver question. They are even more offensive in their language than the directly instructed senators from the silver states. The administration, therefore, is at a loss to comprehend what these Democratic senators mean by their course.

Are Arraigning the President

If they succeed in the end in defeating silver repeal and thwart the policy of the administration and will of the mass of the people on this vital and overshadowing question it must, in the opinion of the administration and many Democratic senators, result in the disruption of the Democratic party, and dividing the country on sectional lines, aligning the south, southwest and silver states against the east and middle states. To avert this, Senators Voorhees, Gorman, Gray, McPherson, Brice and their colleagues have been exerting themselves

To Keep the Party Together.

They have been apprehensive from the beginning that such a condition of affairs might arise. They have accordingly done everything in their power by persuasion and a conciliatory course to hold their southern friends. Notwithstanding all their efforts they find their southern colleagues drifting farther away from them every day.

If this state of things continues for 10 days longer, the contest will assume such a form that reconciliation in any shape will be impracticable. Senators Voorhees and Gorman said today that they hoped that another week's debate under the new order—meeting at 11 and sitting until 6 in the evening—would have favorable result. When all the senators who desired to be heard on the silver question had made their speeches there could be no further pretext offered to delay a vote on the question. When it comes to obstructive tactics, it has been ascertained that there are not more than eight or 10 senators at most who will join in a move of that character. This number could not hold the senate and prevent a vote longer than three or four days.

WESTERN FINANCIERING.

Louisville Deposit Bank Wrecked and Looted by Its President.

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—A special from Louisville says that suits are to be filed in a day or two charging that the Louisville Deposit bank was organized simply to save the German National bank from ruin, and that it was deliberately looted and wrecked by its president, Moses Schwartz, for the benefit of himself and the German National.

The charges are that the German National has been carrying Schwartz for years, and knew that he was totally insolvent; that, in order to save himself from bankruptcy, the bank entered into a conspiracy with him to wreck and loot the Deposit bank, after inveigling men to take its stock, and that the statement that the German National would cease business and turn its funds and patronage over to the Deposit Bank was only one ruse among many to induce men to go into the new bank.

When the deposit bank suspended during the financial stringency its liabilities in round numbers were: Capital stock, $200,000; individual deposits, $35,000; time deposits, $60,000. This makes a total liability of about $455,000, of which the directors are creditors in deposits to the extent of about $75,000. As Mr. Schwartz and his friends owe the bank over $300,000, and as other expenses and other charges are to be paid, there is not much margin for the creditors.

TO DEFRAUD CREDITORS.

Gigantic Conspiracy Unearthed and the Principal Arrested.

RACINE, Wis., Sept. 25.—A conspiracy to defraud creditors and insurance companies out of large amounts was unearthed here yesterday by the arrest of Henry and Louis Rosenblatt, proprietors of the Belle City fair.

The Rosenblatts, in connection with F. W. Smith, who is at present locked up in Chicago, leased a store of W. S. Buffham. About the 15th of October they were to open up a general store. For a year past the Rosenblatts have conducted a paying business. With Smith they shipped 20 cases of goods here and placed them in the leased store. Insurance amounting to $7000 was taken out on the goods.

Henry Rosenblatt weakened, and told how the game was to be worked, the plan being to set fire to the store about the middle of next month and collect the insurance. Officers Shumacher and Pieter of the local force opened some of the cases yesterday, and found nothing in them but old tin cans and charred willow ware. The store was fixed up with light pine shelving, and painted with black asbestos, all ready for the incendiaries.

SLICK HOTEL BEAT.

She Is a Woman and Is Now in the Hands of Police.

BOSTON, Sept. 25.—There is under arrest in this city as slick a hotel beat as has visited Boston for some time, and the culprit is a woman. She says her name is Mrs. Jessie McKenzie and claims to hail from New York. She is about 35 years of age, intelligent, of good appearance and very well educated. There is not one person in a hundred who would take her to be anything but a most refined young lady who would be likely to move in the best of society.

This refined woman, by appointment, called at the United States hotel on Aug. 6 and engaged a room for herself and another one for a colored maid whom she had with her. Of course a woman that could put on all this style was supposed by the hotel people to be solid as far as money matters were concerned and did not feel at all bad about letting her have all that she wanted, although there was no money forthcoming.

She stayed in the United States hotel for a little over two weeks or in other words until Aug. 25. At the end of the first week she went to the clerk of the hotel and informed him that he would have to wait a few days for the money due as her husband whom she had expected daily, had failed as yet to make his appearance. Even then the hotel people did not become the least suspicious as they often have similar transactions. Time slipped by and still no husband arrived and the hotel proprietors began to wonder if they were ever to be remunerated.

They asked Mrs. McKenzie for at least a little something at the end of the second week, but once again she put them off by saying that her husband would surely arrive with a few days. They were satisfied and still believed the woman honest, but on Aug. 25 she suddenly left the hotel, but left the maid behind her. It then transpired that this woman had not only beaten the hotel out of board and lodging amounting to $102.02, but had also borrowed sums of $25 and $10 from different clerks, promising to pay back the amount on the arrival of her husband.

Two or three weeks ago she went to the Richwood House, representing herself to be an actress and played the same game, but an officer who had been placed on her track by the United States hotel people last night located her and she is now in custody. She has respectable, and, it is said, wealthy and influential relatives who will endeavor to settle the case.

MILITARY TRAGEDY.

Drunken Officer Shoots the Guard and Himself at Berlin.

BERLIN, Sept. 25.—Considerable excitement was caused here today among the troops in garrison by the tragic death of two officers. Sergeant Wagemann of the Fusileers was drunk this morning, and knowledge of the fact coming to his superior officer, it was ordered that he be placed under arrest. Sergeant Kambousky was detailed to guard him after he was taken into custody.

Wagemann was ugly and made many threats, but little or no attention was paid to them. Through carelessness, when Wagemann was arrested, his revolver was not taken from him, and when the opportunity offered he shot Sergeant Kambousky, killing him almost instantly. Wagemann then shot and killed himself.

JEFFERSON'S POOR HEALTH.

Unable to Keep His Engagements On Account of Sickness.

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—Joseph Jefferson, the actor, is unable to keep some of his engagements on account of illness. He was to have lectured last night in East Orange, but was unable to do so. He wrote as follows in excusing himself:

"Within the last three months I have undergone two severe surgical operations, after which I had a severe attack of appendicitis. The suffering I have endured has left me in a depressed condition and entirely unfits me for the lecture. My physician, too, cautions me to do nothing beyond my professional work, and but little of that. I regret it if this will cause you any disappointment."

ANARCHISTS' PLOTS.

Widespread Conspiracy Discovered In Austria.

MANY PLOTTERS IN CUSTODY.

Their Plans Were Discovered Through a Brawl.

VIENNA, Sept. 25.—The arrest Saturday of 14 anarchists here and the capture yesterday of 66 members of a secret society at Bruenn, the capital of Moravia, has revealed the existence of a widespread anarchist plot. Today several more members of the gang were taken into custody, and the proof against all the persons arrested is said to be overwhelming. All the persons arrested are known to be anarchists of the worst type.

Among the mass of papers seized were documents showing beyond a doubt that the members of the club were affiliated with a Bohemian secret society known as the "Omladina." The police got an inkling of the through a brawl that occurred between a number of anarchists and certain advanced socialists, the trouble growing out of the refusal of the latter to assist in causing explosions.

The clue thus gained was closely followed, with the results that the anarchists who were masquerading as members of a literary society, were captured. It is charged that the Czech agitation in Bohemia, and the consequent suspension of the constitutional law in Prague and the towns in the vicinity of that city had much to do with the existence of the plot, although there is yet no evidence to connect any of the Czech leaders with the conspiracy.

It is more probable that the anarchists were to take advantage of the political turmoil in Bohemia to start against the government. In addition to the papers seized the police took possession of a large number of bombs. An oblong tin box was found, the contents of which were apparently intended to have been exploded by electricity. Conducting wires were attached to the box, which contained several glass plates, and small quantities of oreaite and picric acid.

When the prisoners were searched by the police it was found that inside the linings of the overcoats worn by one named Stulka and one Habnela were attached strong plaited wires with hooks at the ends. It is surmised that these were devices to allow of the suspension of bombs. In Stulka's room were found rolls of zinc and lead, and Glass and Metal Cylinders.

The police declare that the conspiracy they have unearthed is the most formidable plot the anarchists have ever concocted in Vienna. Every one of the men arrested had in his possession bombs or cartridges that were ready for use.

The discovery has caused much excitement in official circles. The police are searching in every direction for other members of the gang. It is believed, however, that the many arrests made have effectually put an end to the operations of the conspirators.

CAMPERDOWN AGROUND.

Cruiser That Wrecked the Victoria In Dangerous Position.

VALETTA, Malta, Sept. 25.—The British battleship Camperdown, flagship of Rear Admiral Markham, grounded this morning at the entrance of the harbor. Efforts to float her have thus far been unsuccessful. She is in a dangerous position.

The Camperdown is the vessel that recently, during the maneuver of the British fleet off Tripoli, Syria, ran into and sank the battleship Victoria, causing great loss of life. The Camperdown's repairs had just been completed, and today she started out on a trial trip, and had proceeded but a short distance when she struck bottom.

The accident to the Camperdown is attributed to the breaking down of her steering gear. Two tugs have been dispatched to her assistance. The vessel is aground on a hard bottom. There is no side to speak of in this harbor, and this will render the task of floating her more than ordinarily difficult.

TREFETHEN'S TRIAL.

Statement of Defense Concluded and Evidence Begun.

BOSTON, Sept. 25.—At the Trefethen trial today Mr. Schofield, of counsel for defense, concluded his opening statement. He claimed that Tena Davis jumped from the bridge and committed suicide; that she had threatened to do so, and had so stated to a physician whom she asked to help her out of trouble.

He also denied the intimacy alleged to exist between Trefethen and the girl and said Tena bought the ring she wore herself. The first witness for the defense was Alice M. Smith.

Three Killed in a Well.

HAZARD, Neb., Sept. 25.—Fred Dudley dropped his baseball in an old well on his father's place yesterday. A companion lowered him by a rope to get the ball, but lost his footing and both went to the bottom. Dudley's father went down by means of a rope to rescue them. As they neared the top the rope broke and all three were killed by the fall.

Fell From the Roof.

LOWELL, Mass., Sept. 25.—Edward B. Campbell, a painter, while at work on a building on Lawrence street this morning, fell from the roof to the sidewalk. At St. John's Hospital the surgeons found that he had concussion of the brain or a fracture of the skull. The chances are against his recovery.

English Admiralty Hopeful.

LONDON, Sept. 25.—The admiralty is putting the best possible face upon the grounding of the Camperdown. The officials minimize the danger to the ship. They say that her position is not at all serious, and that she is sure to be floated.

Another Sullivan Champion.

LONDON, Sept. 25.—The sculling match between Bubear and Sullivan of New Zealand for the Thames championship took place today. Sullivan beat Bubear by five lengths.

Oakland Mill Starts Up.

TAUNTON, Mass., Sept. 25.—The Oakland mill started up this morning.

Doesn't Want Second Place.

BOSTON, Sept. 25.—In an interview today ex-Postmaster Hart denies the story that he will accept the nomination for lieutenant governor.

Business Houses Destroyed.

PERRY, Ia., Sept. 25.—Fire yesterday destroyed several business houses and their contents, entailing a loss of $30,000; partially insured.

French Artisans Coming.

PROVIDENCE, Sept. 25.—The 47 artisans sent to the World's fair by the French government will arrive here tomorrow at 10:30. They will be received by Governor Brown at the state house and at the city hall by Mayor Potter.

THE SOUBRETTE.

Henri Lynn has been engaged by Hyde & Behman to appear in "Comrades."

Edward Vernon, an English actor, has been engaged to support Rosina Vokes.

Olive Berkeley has been specially engaged to play Rose in "The Masked Ball."

Marie Burress has been engaged by L. R. Stockwell for his stock company at San Francisco.

Fannie Bernard has signed with Fraser Coulter to play Shakespeare Jarvis in "The Lights o' London."

Jeannie Winston, the opera singer, will retire from the stage and take up residence in Italy, where she has property.

George B. McClellan will present Fay Templeton in a new opera after she has appeared in a revival of "Mme. Favart."

Irene Everett, a member of "The Girl I Left Behind Me" company, is a daughter of State Senator Everett of California.

Joseph Arthur is putting in all his spare time on "The Corncracker," which he says, by the way, will be a wonderful production.

Eugene B. Jackson has signed to go with "The Little Tycoon." He will play Knickerbocker, the part made famous by R. E. Graham.

THE NATURALIST.

Some butterflies have as many as 20,000 distinct eyes.

The weight of an ant queen is equal to 80,000 workers.

Many insects hear and breathe with the same apparatus.

Potato rot is caused by a minute parasite, a species of living, breathing creatures so small that a colony of 2,000 can live in a space smaller than a pin's head!

Catch the little insect called the "vine fretter" at the moment of its birth, put it where it has no chance of contact with others of its species, and it will soon give birth to others of its kind.

Hard Luck.

Wilson—I have had the worst luck lately. My wife lost her dog and—

Bilson—Why didn't you advertise for it?

Wilson—I did, at her solicitation, and found it.—Yankee Blade.

A Creditor's Philosophy.

I'm glad Smythe never paid me back
The fiver lent in days of yore,
Because had he done so, perchance,
I might have lent him many more.

Brighter In Fall River.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Sept. 25.—All of the mills are running today except the American linen and Fall River. The former will start next Monday, or as soon as certain improvements now under way are completed.

Found Dead In Bed.

BOSTON, Sept. 25.—Horace W. Adams, 43 years old, belonging in Providence, was found dead in bed at 16 Indiana place this morning. Death is supposed to have been the result of natural causes.

THE STOCK MARKET.

Dealings In Leading Securities In Boston and New York.

BOSTON, Sept. 25.—In the outside market call money is quoted at 5 to 6 per cent, and time money is nominally 6 per cent.

Speculative conditions are without change. One New York house of high standing wired Boston this morning: "Our private advices from Washington are that an early vote in the senate is certain." But the same note of hope has been sounded so often without result that the information was assigned simply to a place among the mass of gossip which cumbers the Washington wires. London, too, is losing courage, and again came weaker for the whole list.

Trading opened light. Atchison started off ¼ weaker at 19¾, and fluctuated thereafter between 19¼ and 20. Chicago, Burlington and Quincy opened ⅜ off at 80⅞ and then declined irregularly to 81¼. The [illegible] sold ⅛ up at 1⅜. Union Pacific was down ½ at 21¼, while New England, opening at 20¾, last [illegible] steady to 20¼. Sugar Refining started at [illegible] unchanged, and held between that and 87, while the preferred opened at 88. General Electric, under the throwing out of long stock, weakened from 46¼ to 45¼.

THE JEWEL CASKET.

Rococo ornamentation prevails in jewelry.

The enameled battleax is putting in claims.

There is a vast improvement in the stoppers of crystal bottles.

Gold tipped shoe lacings and gold tipped [illegible] laces are announced.

The spool holders of silver each week seem prettier and more ingenious.

Round bodied vases have heavily twisted necks expanding into round heads.

Rococo forms, with gold interlacings, are found in every sort of ornament that women wear.

Brooches consisting of a sword and scabbard crossed, with frequently a military hat added to the trappings, are new.

The wreath has not inappropriately followed in the path of the sword. Frequently the two are combined. These are the prettiest devices in wreaths.

Crystal buttons in rims of silver might be worth the consideration of jewelers. These would be used on the cavalier jackets of velvet and brocade, and on the double breasted Eton jackets now worn.

Silver was never more attractively used than today in numberless forms. Tiny vases with flower shaped mouths have appliques of vines and flowers clinging to their sides, modeled as freely as in nature.

Crystal bonbon boxes are most desired by women. They have metal tops, but since confectionery has become so ornamental it shows prettily through the glass and can even be made to harmonize with the costume.—Jewelers' Circular.

WHITE CITY WAIFS.

A lamp of nickel weighing 4,800 pounds exhibited at the World's fair is worth half as many dollars.

Two hand embroidered screens in the Japanese exhibit in the Fine Arts building at the World's fair are valued at $15,000 and $20,000 each.

Souvenir tickets to the fair are no longer good at the gates. Those already in the hands of the purchasers can be exchanged for ordinary tickets, but those sold in the future will only be good as souvenirs.

The sword which Washington wore when he surrendered his commission as chief of the American forces is exhibited. It is three edged, with a steel blade, a silver hilt and a sheath made of some material similar to parchment.

A peculiar and intensely interesting part of the bacteriological exhibit is one prepared for the World's fair by Professor Brieger. It is a collection of the swiftest and most powerful poisons on earth, all gained from the dead bodies of those who fell victims to various deadly bacteria.

FLOWER AND TREE.

The tallest tree on earth, so far as known at present, is a gum tree lately measured in the Cape Otway range, Victoria. This Eucalyptus regnans is 415 feet high.

Plants breathe through the "stomata" or breathing pores in the leaves. In case the plant or tree is of the leafless variety the stem, which is also provided with stomata, performs the office of breathing.

The Japanese persimmon has been grown for some years past in parts of the western shore of Maryland, protected from early frosts by the proximity of the Chesapeake. It is believed that Commodore Perry first sent the seeds of the Japanese persimmon to the United States in 1856.

One of the most remarkable productions of the isle of Chiloe is the celebrated "barometer trees," which grow in great profusion in all the salt marshes. In dry weather the bark of this natural barometer is as smooth and white as that of the sycamore, but with the near approach of storms these characteristics vanish like magic and the bark turns black.

PULPIT AND PEW.

Miss Blanche A. Wright of Lewiston, Me., has been ordained pastor of the Newport (N. Y.) Universalist church.

Bishop Thoburn thinks that the converts in India during the next eight years will outnumber those of the last 82 years.

Bishop Lawrence, successor to Bishop Phillips Brooks, will lecture before Boston university school of theology during the coming winter.

Calvary Baptist church in New York, Dr. MacArthur's, is never closed during the hot weather and never omits a single service in church, Sunday school or missions.

The Rev. Dr. D. B. Randall is said to be the oldest Methodist [illegible] in Maine. He was born in Hardwick, Vt., July 18, 1807, and although now 86 years old he is still a very active man.

The Rev. Morgan Dix of New York has placed a $6,500 bell in Christ church at Cooperstown, N. Y., in memory of his father, the late Governor John A. Dix. The bell weighs 1,550 pounds.

FIN, FEATHER AND FUR.

Of British birds, the cuckoo has the smallest egg in proportion to its size.

The largest fish known to science is the basking shark, an enormous but harmless variety.

Dogs, horses, elephants, seals, kangaroos, bears and lions have been taught to box with gloves.

There is in the old world a species of fish that builds a nest out of the seaweed, a nest not unlike that of the English sparrow.

Broken down horses in Germany are restored to perfect health by being fed with infusions of roasted coffee and ground coffee beans mixed with honey.

A camel has twice the carrying power of an ox. With an ordinary load of 600 pounds he can travel 12 or 14 days without water, going 40 miles a day. They are fit to work at 4 years old, but their strength begins to decline at 25.

POWDER AND BALL.

This country has 9,144,580 men available for military duty.

Every regiment of the British army in India has been rearmed with the new magazine rifles.

The armies of Europe have grown since the Franco-Prussian war from 2,228,000 to 22,348,000 men.

The German government has arranged for a competition among German builders for the construction of a series of torpedo boats with a minimum speed of 26 knots.

Breechloading rifles were invented in 1811, but did not come into general use for many years. It is estimated that over 12,000,000 are now in actual service in the European armies, while 5,000,000 are reserved in the arsenals for emergencies.

A Needless Interruption.

He—Carrie, you know I have long thought a good deal of you. Let us marry. What do you say?

She—This is not as sudden as I would wish, nor so unexpected as I might desire, but I think we may as well call it a bargain. But enough of that. Go on with your story about the Bittenhouse's new house.—Boston Transcript.

HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA.

Swellings in the Neck

Grateful for Permanent Cure by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"I cannot praise Hood's Sarsaparilla enough. For twelve years I have been troubled with scrofula and swelling of the glands in the neck. I consulted several physicians and took many medicines. My neck was also operated upon at the Mount Sinai Hospital, but this did not give me any permanent improvement. One day I read in a paper about Hood's Sarsaparilla, and on trying a bottle I found it was doing me good, so I took two bottles more. The swelling has entirely disappeared, and I am as healthy as anyone in the city. Anyone who should see my picture two years ago and now, would notice

The Dolphin has been in New London harbor several days and on board has had several cases of malaria, contracted in the James river, it is said. There are four cases of typhoid in the New London hospital from ships in the harbor, contracted, it is supposed, by having impure drinking water on board.

A pair of horses attached to John H. Ford's ice wagon ran away down Summer street on Laurel Hill Monday morning. The Golden Wedding.

As is doubtless well known the composer of "Ship Ahoy" is the author of "The Golden Wedding," which will be presented in the Broadway theater tonight. Into "The Golden Wedding" Mr. Miller has introduced some musical numbers, all of the simple, taking order, of his earlier effort. There are also plenty of comedy musical introductions. As for the comedy itself all serious business has been discarded and the humorous substituted.

Duck Hunting Near Essex.

An Essex dispatch to The Hartford Times says that the duck shooting season in Connecticut is open and the Nimrods are getting their choke-bores into shape for some sharp work a little later on, for ducks promise to be plenty this season, and shooting on the grounds at the mouth of the Connecticut river, which has for years been a famous locality for duck hunting, bids fair to be unusually lively.

Toward the first of October the blue-wing teal and the black duck put in an appearance in the coves and the tidewater inlets that scar the shores of the Connecticut river from its mouth to Ely Meadows, eight miles above. Occasionally a mallard is found in this locality, but not in sufficient numbers to encourage any special effort for hunting them.

Funeral of W. H. Burnett.

Funeral services over the remains of W. Hamilton Burnett were conducted by the Rev. J. H. Allen in the East Main Street M. E. church, before a large congregation of mourners Monday afternoon. Meech of the Norwich Croquet club. Burial was in Yantic cemetery, where a number of friends gathered at the grave.

The flag from the Chelsea Boat club house floated at half mast during the afternoon.

A New London Builder Dead.

Another of New London's veteran builders, Russell E. Burrows, expired at his home in New London Sunday, in his 79th year.

The deceased, during his long and busy life in New London, says the Day, had been engaged in the construction of many homes and public buildings which are monuments to his capability as a builder and his honest workmanship. For several years he served the city as inspector of buildings and had also held other offices of trust and responsibility under the municipality. He was a highly respected and esteemed citizen.

Odd Fellows' Sovereign Lodge.

Past Grand Master C B. Ware of New London has returned from the meeting of the Odd Fellows' sovereign grand lodge meeting in Milwaukee last week.

The reorganization of the Patriarchs' Militant, the uniformed branch of the order, was discussed at the convention. It is thought by some that this order is too expensive and it is desired to simplify it. The sovereign grand lodge will meet next year at Chattanooga, Tenn. It has never met in Connecticut and the grand lodge of this state does not want it on account of the great expense.

CITY COURT.

The Handbill Case Continued a Week—Other Business Settled.

In the city court Monday morning the case against Harry Daniels, charged with violating the statutes regarding the advertising of wares by distributing handbills, was continued to next Monday at the request of his attorney, J. T. Cunningham. The bond was raised to $500 and promptly furnished. The penalty for a violation of the handbill law is a fine of $100 and six months imprisonment.

James A. Henderson of Greeneville paid $11.59 for breach of the peace.

William Hooley was sent to jail for sixty days and ordered to pay $9.38 costs for being a common drunkard. Peter Larose of Moosup paid $9 88 for intoxication.

The continued case against W. L Kelly of Philadelphia, charged with breach of the peace, was called and resulted in his acquittal.

Some time ago Joseph Boubrowsky, a Pole, assaulted a man in Greeneville and left the city. He returned to Greeneville Saturday and was arrested by Sergeant Linton and Officer Hastings. While the sergeant was patrolling his beat near the station house Sunday night he saw Dombrowsky trying to climb through a window he had forced open. Sergeant Linton pulled the prisoner back and locked him in another cell. He was fined $20 and costs for attempting to escape and $2 and costs for the assault. He paid $39 30.

"A SOCIETY TRAMP."

A Good Comedy-Drama, Well Presented, Opens the Breed Opera House Season.

A large and appreciative audience witnessed the opening of the season at Breed opera house last night. The play was the sensational comedy drama, "A Society Tramp." A story of southern homestead life presented by a company of excellence. Harry Allen, as Appetite Bill, displayed great versatility and introduced some very clever character acting. Maj. Jackson, a typical southern gentleman, received a careful interpretation by Frank Le Rendu. Percy Obiels, as Willie Despard, is one of the cleverest light comedians ever seen in this city. Geo. W. Woods, the old time minstrel, impersonates "Pete," the house servant, true to life, while his famous laughing song, made a decided hit. Elsie Gladys, as Clover, installed herself in the hearts of all as a favorite. She is bright, spritely, and as effective in pathos as she is in humor, while her songs and dances carried the audience by storm. Ned Gilbert created much merriment as "Aunt Malindy," while Jessie Lee Randolph introduces great emotional powers as the "Governess."

All the members of the cast are well up to the requirements of their parts, while the quartette introduced some very clever musical selections. A number of very interesting and catchy specialties are introduced by several members of the company, which proves a carefully selected musical as well as dramatic aggregation.

"A Society Tramp" will be presented again tonight, and from the enthusiasm displayed by the audience last evening it should test the capacity of the house.

REV. DR. HAYNES RELEASED.

Bishop Grants His Request to Leave His Boston Pastorate.

It is settled to a certainty that the People's church of Boston is to have a new pastor, and it is reasonably sure that new preacher will be Rev. James Boyd Brady, D. D., pastor of the Franklin Street Methodist church of Newark, N. J.

Rev. Dr. Emory J. Haynes, the pastor of the People's church, was expected to come from his summer home in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., and preach Sunday. When the congregation arrived at the church, however, they learned that he had not come, and that Rev. J. B. Gould of Newton would occupy the pulpit.

There was an air of expectancy throughout the opening exercises that was relieved after the prayer by the reading of the following telegram, received Saturday morning by Mr. E. W. Crawford, chairman of the committee on pulpit supply:

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.,
Sept 23, 1893.

Bishop has telegraphed my release and offers transfer. EMORY J. HAYNES.

135 WOMEN REGISTERED.

Murphy Farewells—2,500 Persons Took the Pledge.

WILLIMANTIC, Sept. 25.—Up to Monday afternoon 135 women of the town of Windham had been registered at the town clerk's office, and will cast their first ballot at the town election next Monday.

Thomas E Murphy delivered his farewell address at Loomer opera house Sunday evening to an audience of over two thousand people, many being unable to gain admission. Nearly 2,500 persons took the pledge during Mr. Murphy's stay here, and a permanent organization is to be expected for the promotion of temperance in our midst.

Photographer Townsend took a 75-mile run on his bicycle Sunday, going to Stafford Springs, from there to Southbridge, Mass., and back home.

Of the fifty applications on the "to be made list," forty of them were made voters Saturday.

Rebel Crews of Torpedo Boats Captured—Officers Killed.

BUENOS AYRES, Sept. 26.—General Pellegrini at the head of the government troops recaptured the city of Tucuman yesterday. The insurgent forces occupying the city made only a feeble resistance. IN CONGRESS.

The Senate.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—In the senate the repeal bill was taken up at 12.10, on motion of Mr. Voorhees of Indiana, and Mr. Perkins (rep) of California, took the floor. He conceded that the Sherman law was faulty, but he did not believe it was guilty in the manner or degree charged, either by argument adduced or proven. He saw other causes pending which depressed our [illegible] and hoped that confidence in the future [illegible] industries thrived. He [illegible] to expunge the offending laws from our code of finance, but he was anxious on the other hand that in doing so neither congress nor the country should make any mistake.

He suggested that congress first repeal the purchase clause; second, declare the unfaltering purpose of the United States to maintain the double standard; third, open the mints to American silver, with a existing charge sufficient to keep the coinage within the demands of trade; fourth, coin no more gold pieces of less than $5 denomination, and issue no more currency of less denomination; fifth, issue circulating notes to the full equivalent of the coin in the treasury; sixth, make clear the power and duty of the secretary of the treasury to purchase gold; seventh, preserve those features of the national banking system that give secure and universal currency without requiring the everlasting maintenance of the public debt, and eighth, provide for a commission of monetary experts, not connected with the government, to keep it advised on all necessary matters relating to currency.

Mr. Perkins closed his speech at 1.30.

Shortly after the senate went into executive session, and afterward adjourned.

HAMBURG, Sept. 26.—Today a riot was started in St. Pauli, a suburb of this city, by the attempts of the authorities to enforce the sanitary ordinances, and during the fighting a policeman was killed. [illegible] to East Rock Monument.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 26.—Veterans all over the state are discussing adversely the action of local municipal authorities in an alleged neglect of East Rock monument. The park commissioners have twice petitioned the aldermen to grant sufficient appropriation to repair the damage caused by storm upon the cement layers between the stones of the monument, but present indications are that no remedy will be sought before the winter despite the protests of local old soldiers and other citizens.

At Work on the Tariff Bill.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—Chairman Wilson of the house ways and means committee today stated that he had already commenced work on his tariff bill, and unless some unexpected difficulties arise there would probably be no sub-committees appointed on the several schedules as was done in the case of the McKinley bill, and no announcement of the progress made will be given out until the completed bill was ready for presentation to the house.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—The senate has confirmed the following nominations: Frank H. Jones of Illinois, to be first assistant postmaster general; Kerr Craig of North Carolina, to be third assistant postmaster general; William Carroll of Baltimore, to be consul at Dresden.

And Now the Grasshoppers.

MOBILE, Sept. 26.—The grasshoppers have made a raid on the Chocoloco valley, Alabama, and are destroying the crops. The farm of Captain T. G. Bush was attacked, and a three-acre field of clover was completely eaten up in twenty-four hours. Not a trace of vegetation could been seen. Scores of men are working to get rid of the pests.

Suffering in Western Kansas.

IN THE CHEROKEE STRIP.

Half of the People Who Entered Have Returned Home.

GUTHRIE, O. T., Sept. 26.—The Cherokee strip has been settled a week and things are getting down to a business basis. The population of the new towns is now about: Pawnee 1,000, Kirk 1,000, Kildare 1,000, Ponca 1,600, Enid 3,000, Pond Creek 2,000, Alva 1,000, Woodward 1,000, Perry 13,000. DISAPPOINTED IN LOVE.

Herbert Pollett Attempts Suicide at Windham—May Recover.

WILLIMANTIC, Sept. 26.—Herbert Pollett, 26 years of age, shot himself over the heart at 8 o'clock last night. There is a chance of his recovery.

Pollett worked for Henry Larrabee of Windham as a farm hand. He became disappointed over a love affair, and committed the act outside the door of Larrabee's house. He had been discarded by Miss Coppland of Windham. He came to Willimantic yesterday morning, and made a will, disposing of his property. He appeared gloomy and evidently contemplated suicide then.

World's Religious Parliament.

CHICAGO, Sept. 26.—Julia Ward Howe opened this morning's session of the World's Religious parliament with an address of ten minutes' duration in which she congratulated her hearers upon the success of the parliament and prophesied that it would have a marked influence for good upon the whole of Christendom. The regular programme of the morning partook somewhat of a missionary turn. The Rev. A. M. Idmados spoke upon the mission of Protestantism in Turkey and the Rev. J. S. Denis of New York upon the message of Christianity to other religions.

An address on the attitude of Christianity [illegible] William T. Wilkinson of the university of Chicago and the Rev. John Gmeiner of St. Paul discussed the primitive and prospective reunion of the human family. Kinza Riuge Hirai of Japan touched briefly on the question of synthetic religion.

Defaulter Weeks to Be Extradited.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—The Costa Rican government has agreed to extradite Francis H. Weeks, the defaulter, who is now in San Jose, and unless the legal objection to this course that Weeks' lawyer will raise is successful, the fugitive will be brought back to the United States. A despatch was received at the state department this morning from the United States consul at San Jose stating the government would be glad to grant papers of extradition. No steps will be taken in the matter, however, until the arrival at San Jose of Mr. Baker, the United States minister, who is now due at the Costa Rican capital.

FLEEING FROM THE CHOLERA.

The Scourge Ravaging Villages on the Persian Gulf.

TOWNS DESERTED.

Many Deaths Daily—Residents Seek Safety Inland.

CALCUTTA, Sept. 26.—Advices received here from Persia show that for two weeks past cholera has been ravaging the towns and villages along the eastern shore of the Persian gulf. Several villages have been completely deserted, the inhabitants having fled into the interior to escape the dreaded scourge that worked such havoc last year in that locality. It is believed that these fugitives have carried cholera germs with them and that their flight will result in the wide dissemination of the disease. At Kazeroon, in the province of Fars, and a considerable distance inland from the gulf, there are many deaths from cholera daily.

BERLIN, Sept. 26.—Three persons suffering with cholera were taken to the Moabit hospital today. One death from the disease occurred today.

The Czar Question.

PARIS, Sept. 26.—Notwithstanding all the preparations and proceedings to welcome the Russian naval officers to Toulon next month, and to entertain them during the stay of the czar's ships in French waters, it is evident that heed is being paid in official quarters to the czar's request not to make the reception a cause for international dispute. It is thought that many of the official entertainments proposed in the first exuberance of joy over the proposed visit will be abandoned.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 26.—The annual ten-mile handicap road race of the Rovers' wheelmen was held this afternoon over the Pequot avenue of eleven miles around Morris cove, starting from East Haven. BISMARCK'S CONDITION.

Discouraging Reports—The Old Man Seems Like a Wreck.

BERLIN, Sept. 26.—Herr Allers, an artist, who is a close friend of the Bismarck family, arrived here from Kissingen this evening. He gives an unexpectedly discouraging report of the prince's condition. The most formidable of Bismarck's maladies, he says, has been acute pneumonia. The disease was not discovered by the physicians until Bismarck's condition had become critical.

The prince's family are exceedingly anxious and watch Bismarck constantly, as although convalescing, he is very weak and quite liable to a relapse, which must prove fatal. According to Herr Allers' report, the old man seems like a wreck. His splendid frame has shrunk and his flesh has fallen off until his clothes hang in folds. He appears as if fully a head shorter than before his illness. The princess is strongly opposed to removing him to Friedrichsruh.

Racing at Baltimore.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 26.—There was a large attendance at the Gentlemen's Driving park today, the opening day of the fall meeting, notwithstanding heavy showers about the time for people to start for the track, and occasional sprinkles during the afternoon. The track was a trifle "dead." The racing was good and the betting brisk. Only one heat of the third race (2.19 class trotters) was finished, owing to the lateness of the hour. C. F. Lessinfar seemed to be chosen for the talent by this heat and William Penn for the race. William Penn took the heat in the best time on the track in a trotting race—2.18¼. Summaries:

First race, 2.30 class, purse $300, Baron Nutmond, first; Despair, second; Senator G., third. Best time, 2.25¼.

Second race, pacing, 2.19 class, purse $300. Miss Woodford, c. m., first; Frank F., second; Belle of [illegible], third. Best time, 2.22¼.

Third race, 2.19 class, purse $300. Unfinished.

William Penn took first and only heat in 2.18¼.

IS HE A RINGER?

Rockwell Boy's Money Held to Await His Full Identification.

Rockwell Boy, Samuel Rockwell of Stafford Springs' bay gelding, trotted under protest at the Fair grounds Tuesday, the claim being made that he is a ringer. Horsemen will be interested to read what The Hartford Courant says on the subject: "There is current talk about Rockwell Boy, who has been going miles at his ease all the way down the line from the lowest classes to the free-for-alls over in the eastern circuit. He was such a handy fellow wherever he chanced to be that some one questioned him, and his money is being held subject to full identification. It seems quite likely that the bay gelding is Dudley Buck, 2.23¼ (under that name), who obtained his record at Topsham, Me., in 1889, but who does not appear as a performer thereafter. It will be interesting to know just what Dudley has been doing since that year, and there ought to be available machinery in the National office to follow up the matter, even at reasonable cost. Rockwell Boy's mark obtained at Willimantic last week—2.27¼, does not seem to be his limit.

Mr. Rockwell is said to have bought the trotter from his brother, who bought him of J. H. May of Boston. Mr. May knows a thing or two about ringers himself, if reports of turf performances are true.

Mr. Rockwell has made arrangements with the national office as to the fifty dollars fine for changing the name of the horse, and regarding his winnings, pending the identification. Until further information is at hand, the horse is eligible to the 2.26 class, but his winnings there will also be held. Those who are in position to know, say that the present owner is entirely innocent of intentional wrong. All the same, he must have been dumb founded when he found he had secured such a whirlwind of a green horse.

[illegible] in Hartford.

The Hartford Courant says: Members of the board of managers of the Norwich Young Men's Christian association were in Hartford, Monday, and inspected the new Y. M. C. A. building here. They expressed themselves as highly pleased with the building and equipments. In the party were N. L. Bishop, president of the Norwich Y. M. C. A. and superintendent of schools in the Central district of Norwich; W. T. Lane of the Lane Brothers' Harness company, William C. Farrington of the Falls company's mill store, and R. S. Ross, general secretary of the Norwich association.

The Norwich association is erecting a new $50,000 building. William A. Slater of Norwich, who established the Slater Memorial hall and the museum, places of public interest in that city, gave the first $15,000 for the building. The association at Norwich has an endowment fund of $20,000, a bequest by the late W. W. Backus, to meet current expenses. The architects of the Norwich building are Fuller & Wheeler of Albany, the same firm that designed the new building in Hartford.

THE FAIR'S OPENING DAY.

Tracy Wins Two Bicycle Races—Little Sport of Stonington Gets the 2.27 Class Race—All in Readiness for Today's Crowd.

A leaden-hued sky and disparaging north winds failed to materially mar the success of the first day of the thirty-eighth annual exhibition of the New London County Agricultural society. It was mostly a day of preparation, as usual, and today the manifold attractions will be at the full disposal of the visitors. There is good reason to believe that the public will never be better satisfied than this year.

The grounds did not begin to take on a business look till early in the afternoon, when displays of merchandise, fancy articles, fruit and vegetables began to fill Exhibition hall, cattle of all kinds and of high and low degree showed themselves through the gates, and the grounds became dotted with the usual manifold catch-penny games.

James A. Bill of Lyme was on hand with his choice assortment of stock, and Williams and Lord of Stonington take just pride in their imported sheep and other pedigreed cattle.

The one mile scratch bicycle race was called at 2.15 o'clock. There were six entries, and H. D. Tracy, A. D. Smith, Jr., and Richard Fairbanks of this city started. Tracy drew the pole and led the line to the second quarter, where he was headed by Fairbanks. He landed to the front again, however, at the three-quarter pole and came in victor by a few feet. Smith fell to the rear owing to the disarrangement of his pedal gearing. The time was 3.05¼.

The same three riders contested in the one mile handicap race. Smith got the lead at the first turn by a vigorous spurt, but lost to Tracy at the one-half mile pole and dropped out from exhaustion. Fairbanks pushed his opponent closely the remainder of the distance, losing by but half a length. The time was 2.45¼. Young Tracy won two handsome cups by his speed and strength, which are unusual for one of his years. His fine riding won much favorable comment.

The only horse race of the afternoon was the 2.27 class, pace or trot, purse $200, which was won very handily by Mr. C. P. Williams' gray gelding Little Sport. There were ten entries and six to start. Rockwell Boy won the pole. There was wearisome scoring in the first heat, which was promptly terminated by the announcement of a $5 fine for leading the pole horse. Rockwell Boy led to the home stretch, where Little Sport put on a burst of speed which brought him under the wire a length ahead. Happy Doctor broke badly.

Little Sport was in the van through all the second heat, leading a bunch of flying steeds, in which Rockwell Boy, Homer Wilkes and Happy Doctor struggled for the mastery, and came in in the order named.

The last heat was featureless, except in that it showed the remarkable speed Happy Doctor can command. The horse made Little Sport show all his fleetness to keep his place in the foreground.

Bonaparte, the trotting dog, raced about the track in a yellow trimmed pneumatic sulky between the heats, pleasing the young people, and astonishing their elders by his easy and rapid movements.

The officials of the track are W. A. Buckingham, starter, and S. R. Congdon of New London and E. J. Miner of Bozrah, judges.

This is Mr. George C. Raymond's third year as clerk of the course, a position to which he is well adapted and fills with courtesy and thoroughness.

The summary is as follows:

2.27 class, pace and trot. Purse $200, in premiums of $100, $50, $30, $20. Heats, best three in five.

Little Sport, g. g., C. P. Williams, Stonington	1	1	1
Rockwell Boy, b. g., Samuel Rockwell, Stafford Springs	2	2	5
Hugo, b. g., M. L. Brusie, East Hartford	3	6	6
Happy Doctor, b. g., Dr. F. Cassidy, Norwich	5	4	2
Homer Wilkes, g. g., F. E. Parker, Norwich	4	3	4
Leonard, br. g., Joseph Letourneau, Holyoke, Mass.	6	5	3

Time.	1st Heat.	2d Heat.	3d Heat.

Half	1.12½	1.13	1.14
Three-quarters	1.49	1.50	1.51
Mile	2.26¼	2.27	2.27½

Besides the attractions offered today in fine trotting, a large and general exhibition in the hall, and the display of cattle, Martha Wilkes will test an exhibition mile, Dog Bonaparte will show his powers and there will be a popular old-fashioned balloon ascension.

COLLECTION OF NUTS.

An Opportunity for the Boys and Girls to Win a Prize.

Secretary T. S. Gold of the state board of agriculture writes:

Our native hickory nuts and chestnuts vary much in size and quality.

To secure the best a call is made upon the boys and girls of the state to make collections of different choice varieties of all kinds of nuts and present them for exhibition at the winter meeting of the board in December.

One gentleman offers five dollars as a premium, which will be given to one exhibitor, or divided according to merit. It is hoped that others will be pleased to increase this gift.

The quantity should be not less than one quart of each variety. They should be dried immediately.

Now is the chance to hunt up your favorite hickory nuts, chestnuts, butternuts, beechnuts and hazelnuts, and make comparison.

Due notice will be given of the time and place of the winter meeting, and how to send the collections.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE.

A Misrepresentation Corrected.

EDITOR BULLETIN: In a recent issue of your paper a statement appears that in the case of the Sawyer Spindle company, et al., vs. the W. G. & A. R. Morrison company, of Willimantic, Judge Shipman had sustained the defendants claim, that the spindle in question was not the same in every particular as that which the plaintiff claimed.

We don't know who your informant was, but if the truth was ever in him be is careful not to let it out. The statement is a good illustration of what is known in law as a negative pregnant. For example, a plaintiff sues for $10,000 and recovers judgment for $9,000; the defendant publishes in a paper that the court sustained the defendant's claim that he did not owe the plaintiff $10,000. If he had stopped with the word claim your informant's statement would have been an open falsehood, but as made it was a covered falsehood.

The Morrison company have been beaten in every suit for infringement that we have brought, and this one in question is one of them. When this suit was brought Judge Shipman refused to grant a preliminary injunction because he had doubts about a claim of unity of motion, in the two bearings of the spindle. But in the final hearing he granted a permanent injunction using this language:

"The complainant's testimony is to the effect that there is no substantial, independent movement of the step bearing. This testimony was not denied or controverted by the defendant company, which showed no disposition to neglect any attackable point in the complainant's case. I therefore conclude that it could be successfully attacked and that the doubt which I expressed was not well founded."

WESTMINSTER.

A Clearing Up Day—Personals.

Wednesday, Sept. 20, was set apart by the Ecclesiastical society committee to clean up the church common, repair the roads upon it and clean the cemetery, set up the head-stones and clean them, etc. More than forty persons responded to the call and so far as it was possible great improvement was made. We saw them at work on the lots of the Leonards, King, Butts, Storers, Dyers, Herricks, Fosters, Burnetts and Bennetts. It would be a wise thing for some of the posterity of these old families who have money to send an amount to the Ecclesiastical society to be placed at interest and the dividends faithfully applied to the care of these graves. The affair was a credit to the enterprise of this little parish.

There is still much work that ought to be done, but for lack of money it will have to remain for a like event another year, when the work of today will not need repeating. The ladies came with an ample and delicious dinner to which nearly fifty people sat down.

The inhabitants of school district No. 10 (Westminster) turned out Saturday and cleaned and papered the school house, making it very pleasant and attractive. A new stove and other improvements are soon to be furnished.

Mrs. Elizabeth Huling of New Haven is visiting her son, Mr. W. H. Ims.

Miss Mary P. Boon of New London is a guest at Evergreen cottage.

Mr. G. H. Ray of Florence, Mass., and Mr. and Mrs. W. Burnett and daughter of Norwich have been the guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Greene.

Miss Annie B. Carter is visiting in Plainfield.

The Rev. Mr. Nichols of Hampton preached here Sunday, and his discourse is generally spoken of as most excellent.

The Temperance Meetings Resumed—Personals.

The O. U. A. M. held a public meeting in the Methodist church Friday evening.

Judging from the number of people who were able to attend the circus last Thursday afternoon and evening pocket money was abundant and there were no signs of the depressed state of affairs in the country.

Mr. William Finley of Hyde Park, Mass., was taken ill Friday evening at Mr. C. H. Bailey's, where he was spending a few days.

Miss Lillie B. Treat has returned to New York to teach in the same school as last year.

The fall temperance campaign under the direction of Mr. W. H. Spear, opened Monday evening. The address was given by Mr. Spear in the G. A. R. hall to a good-sized audience. The other meetings will be in the Methodist and Congregational churches.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Gates of Orange, with other members of their family, are spending a few days here.

IN BOSTON MARKETS.

Demand for Butter Has Been Quite Moderate.

TRADE IN FRUIT HAS BEEN GOOD.

Potatoes Find Steady Market Under Small Receipts.

BOSTON, Sept. 26.—The demand for butter has been quite moderate this week, only that actually necessary for the buyer's immediate wants being taken. These transactions are for the full price of quotations and if the jobber wants further business he must make a goodly concession. Western creamery rules at 26 1-2 to 27 cents, northern fresh creamery, 28c, and cold stored stock for 25 to 27 cents. The latter figure is for the best selections. An advance from these prices is expected with the advent of October. Receipts have thus far been quite light.

Trade in Fruit

has been quite good this week. There is a good supply and the demand seems steady. Apples are however scarce and high priced. Gravensteins are the best variety to be had today, but so small have been the receipts that the price now quoted for the best is $3.50 per barrel. Such are large fruit and without imperfection. Porters, Hawleys and Pippins and other less choice varieties are worth from $2.50 to $3.50 per barrel.

Pear receipts have not been up to the average neither in quality or quantity, and the traders are not satisfied with their business. Many consignments find their way to the cold storage warehouse. Some of the nicest ripe Bartletts are sold for immediate consumption at $1 to $1.50 per bushel. Seckels are bought for storage at $3 per bushel, a somewhat lower rate than last week. Peaches from New Jersey are now being displaced by natives, the former going for 50 to 75 cents per basket, while the fine flavored natives bring from 75 cents to $1.50.

The trade in grapes is brisk, Concords and Delawares being foremost. The former in five pound baskets being 15 cents while the latter in same qualities are worth 9 cents more. The cranberry crop is being rapidly picked and large quantities are now on the market. A barrel of good sound fruit is now worth $8 with seconds a dollar less.

Vegetables.

There has been a considerable change of prices in vegetables this week. Small receipts of potatoes have tended to make a steady market. Houlton hebrons are now worth about 50 cents per bushel, rose 45 cents, and Aroostook hebrons and rose from 48 to 50 cents. New York and Vermont common stock, 40 to 45 cents.

Some prices for garden truck are: Egg plant, $1 per dozen; celery, $2 to $3.50 for a barrel box; parsley, 25 cents a bushel; lettuce, 20 to 30 cents a dozen; horticultural beans, $1 to $1.25; limas, $1.25 to $1.75; radishes, 50 to 75 cents per box, and cucumbers, $1 to $2.50 per box.

Vegetables for canning are in good demand. Of these small cucumbers bring from $1.50 to $3 a bushel; small white onions, $3 per bushel; tomatoes, ripe, 40 to 50 cents a bushel, and green ones about 40 cents. Cabbage brings from $3 to $5 a 100; rutabaga turnips, $1.25 to $1.50; flat white turnips, 50 to 75 cents; carrots and beets, about 50 cents; onions, 75 cents a bushel; marrow squash, 60 to 75 cents a bushel, and turbans, $1 to $1.25.

The Quotations.

PORK.—With pork provisions the position is reported firm, with lard advanced ¼c further. Quotations are: Long cut, short cut and backs, $21; lean ends, $22.50; extra prime, $18; salt pork, $18; pork tongues, $22.50; lean salt pork, 10¼c; fresh ribs, 11c; sausages, 10½c; bologna, 7½c; hams, 13c; smoke shoulders, 10½c; corned, 9½c; smoked ribs, 10½c; boneless bacon, 11c; pressed hams, 13½c; choice lard, 10c per pound, tierces and tubs; 10-pound pails, 10½c; 5-pound, 10½c; 3-pound, 11c; choice city dressed hogs, 9¼c; country, 7½c.

BEEF.—The beef position is nearly easy here, by reason of the heavy arrivals last week, though the Chicago market is firmer. Choice fancy steers, 9@9½c; prime, 7½@8½c; good, 7@7½c; light, 6@6½c; extra heavy hinds, 11½@11½c; good, 9@11c; light, 8@9c; heavy fores, 5½@5¾c; light, 4@5c; backs, 5@7½c; rattles, 3@4½c; chucks, 4@6c; rounds, 6@8c; rumps, 9@12c; rumps and loins, [illegible] short ribs, 8@11c; loins, 10@17c.

MUTTONS AND LAMBS.—Muttons and lambs sell only fairly well, with the supply full. Prices are easy. Choice to fancy lambs, 9½@10c; common to good, 8@9c; poor and ordinary, 6½@7; Brightons 10@10½c; yearlings, 6@6½c; muttons, 5½@6c; poor to good, 5@6c; choice heavy Brightons, 8@7½c; choice eastern veals, 10@10½c; common to good, 8@9½c; Brightons and fancy, 10@11c.

APPLES.—Apples are easier. On a market like that of last week it takes only moderate arrivals to break prices. A few arrivals of gravensteins have lowered the market considerably. Pippins and Porters, $2.50@3 per bbl; Harvey, $2@2.75; Gravensteins, $2.75@4; common lots, $1@2.50.

CORN.—Corn is a little firmer again. Chicago No. 2 yellow, to arrive, is quoted at 50@c. The spot market is firm, with offerings small. Sales are noted of steamer yellow at 52c from track. The market is quoted at: Steamer yellow, 51@52c; No. 2 yellow, 51c; steamer mixed, 51@52c.

POTATOES.—Potatoes are firmer at 5c for good stock. The quotations are: New Hampshire rose and hebrons, 55@60c; Houlton rose and hebrons, 55@60c; New York stars and burbanks, 45@50c; Virginia clock heads, stems, $1.75@2; Jersey, bulk, $2@2.25; double heads, $2.25.

OATS.—Oats are very firm, with a rather better trade. Chicago clipped, to arrive, are quoted at 37@37½c; No. 2 white, 36½c; No. 3 white, 35c. The spot market is quoted at: Clipped, 38c; fancy, 40c; No. 2 white, 37@37½c; No. 3 white, 37@37½c; mixed, 35@35c.

FLOUR.—The market on flour continues a little quiet, but with the position well sustained the millers do not see the least reason in the world for lowering their ideas as to flour. Quotations are unchanged nominally.

CHEESE.—Cheese is very firm, with higher prices asked: Northern full creams and twins, 10½@11½c; fair to good, 9½@10½c; western choice, 9½@10½c; fair to good, 7½@8½c; sage, 11@11½c. Liverpool is cabled at 47s.

MEAL.—Cornmeal is very steady, if not firmer. Oatmeal is steady, with the position firm: Bag cornmeal is quoted at $1@1.02, with barrel meal at $2.25. Oatmeal is quoted at $4.40@4.70.

HAY.—There is little change in the position of hay, with only a fair trade. Millfeed is quiet. Sack spring bran, to arrive, is quoted at $17@17.50; sack winter, $18@18.25.

EGGS.—Eggs are rather more quiet, though prices are steady: Western, 18@19½c; Michigan, 20@21c; provincial, 18@19c; eastern and northern, 21@23c.

BUTTER.—The market on butter is quiet, but steady in prices. Quotations are not changed.

ARRESTING ANARCHISTS.

National Organization Discovered That Directs and Orders Explosions.

BARCELONA, Sept. 26.—Both the chief of police and the military commander here have interviewed Pallas, the anarchist, who threw the two bombs at Captain General Martinez de Campos during the parade of the troops on Saturday. The police are convinced that he has numerous colleagues in this city, and his lodgings in Sans, a suburb of Barcelona, are known to have been the meeting place of some 10 or 12 anarchists.

In the search of his lodgings a paper was found which showed that he was in close correspondence with revolutionists in Valencia and Madrid. The revolutionists are believed to be the heads of the national organization of dynamiters who have planned all the explosions since the outrages of the Xeres anarchists.

The police in Valencia and Madrid have received notices to arrest the men referred to in Pallas' papers and to take as many of their confederates as possible. Pallas when informed of this action today, protests that he had no confederates and stood in no near relations to other Spanish anarchists. He said that he made the two bombs himself and conceived alone the plot for the assassination of Campos.

The captain general is making satisfactory progress toward recovery. Two places of meeting besides Pallas' lodgings have been raided, and 19 anarchists have been arrested. In a cellar frequented by Pallas and his colleagues seven conical bombs loaded with dynamite were found. In the other place a great quantity of lead tubing and chemicals used for the manufacture of explosives was found.

A dozen bundles of anarchist manifestos, tracts and pamphlets of instruction for bomb makers have been collected by the police from the lodgings of the men under arrest. Many anarchists are believed to have fled to other cities to escape arrest and the local police have been notified to watch for them. The search in Sans and the lower parts of this city is still in progress and more arrests are expected before long.

TO STOP "HOLD UPS."

Railroad Men Will Be Supplied With Rifles and Revolvers.

CHICAGO, Sept. 26.—Orders were issued by the president of the Michigan Central railroad yesterday that every train man should be supplied with a couple of revolvers and a Winchester repeating rifle. This only refers to those who travel with the trains hauling American express or mail cars.

"We have determined to put a stop to 'hold ups,'" said O. W. Ruggles, the general passenger agent, last night. "This scheme of flagging trains and then shooting at the trainmen has become too frequent to be pleasant. Not only are we resolved to protect our own men from injury, but we are fully determined to protect to the best of our ability the money that is entrusted to our care."

Every man on the Pennsylvania line will also be armed in a similar manner. "We intend to supply every trainman with a Winchester shotgun," said E. B. Wall of the Pennsylvania last night, "whenever the train carries any mail or mail car. The recent robberies have compelled us to take this action."

It is understood that the Rock Island, the Wabash, the Illinois Central and other roads will take the same precaution immediately.

GAS EXPLOSION

Blows the Roof of an Attleboro Building into the Street.

ATTLEBORO, Mass., Sept. 26.—About 10 o'clock this morning, as Henry Claflin and a gang of men were examining the gas pipes at the jewelry factory of W. H. Wilmarth & Co. for a leak, one of the men lighted a match. There was an immediate explosion, and the side of the shop over the front steps was blown into the street.

The employes were much alarmed, and some of them left the building. There was no one badly injured. Mr. Claflin's eyebrows were burned, and one of the workmen inhaled some of the flames.

LACROSSE, Wis., Sept. 26.—The United States grand jury has returned an indictment against Rev. Dr. W. D. The freight will be taken on the Plymouth, reaching New York tonight or tomorrow morning.

Three More Anarchists.

LONDON, Sept. 26.—A Vienna dispatch says that three anarchists were arrested in Berlin yesterday on the charge of being concerned in the plot discovered by the Vienna police. The arrests were made at the request of the Austrian authorities.

A Needlewoman.

She works upon the tidy white
In manner strangely neat
The figures which the damask light
Are picturesquely sweet.

She makes a peaceful lamb or two
A-frisking on the hill,
And flowers red and gold and blue,
Beside a wayside rill.

The silken dove she does with taste
In tones of pearl and rose,
And vines that softly twine in chaste
Arcadian repose.

And yet it makes her husband rave
To think his darling wife
A button can't sew on to save
Her sweet and precious life.
—R. K. M. in Life.

NOT IN THE BOOK.

I was sitting in a tiny shoeshop, perched high and dry on the sea wall, watching my friend, the "cap'n," stitch shoes—little children's shoes. I called him "cap'n" by way of compliment, this queer old fellow with his bald pate and oily, mackerel face. Truth to tell, I doubt his having arrived even to the dignity of mate, and it was many a long year since his desertion of the Mary Lib and her crew for the safer but less lucrative occupation of making shoes.

The bay before us glinted and sparkled beneath the pale, sunlit sky like a monster diamond, and away to the left stretched the green waters of the Atlantic, mysterious and enchanting.

"Did yeh know thet some summer folks had bought the islun?" casually remarked the cap'n as he paused to rewax and roll his thread.

"Which island?" I proceeded to inquire, for there were some half dozen rock heaps dotting the bay.

"Why-er, the one alongside of Jilly's pint, with the diss [illegible] trees on et. See 'em?"

"Oh, you mean 'Pirate's Isle'?"

"Wall, I never heerd et called thet."

This was too much. I drew a yellow covered guidebook from my pocket and triumphantly read:

"Pirate's Isle." A small island off Jilly's point, noted for having been the resort of pirates before and after the Revolution. The house is still standing from which old Hichborn and his gang were routed by the government inspectors in 1789.

"Gurry, yeh don't say? Wery cur'ous, 'cause my gran'ther built thet house, 'nd he wasn't no pirate. Leastways, I never heerd of his bein. He only fished off the Gran banks." And the cap'n favored me with a prodigious wink—a wink of exultation at my defeat and delight at putting my book in the lie. It was not the first time he had done this, and in disgust I tossed the poor paper thing through the open window into the sea. Henceforth the cap'n should be my only guide.

A mighty wave, chancing to dash against the red brown rocks below, sent up a saucy wreath of spray to sprinkle our faces with salt drops. The cap'n looked up from his work and regarded admiringly his old time enemy, Father Ocean, and musing apostrophized:

Old ocean, ever in motion.
Restless sea, never still.

My friend was somewhat of a poet, be it known.

"Thet little islun!" he continued, turning to me an unusually grave face—"thet little islun is a dreadful place. Et's got blood on et, 'nd I wouldn't live there ef they'd give't to me. No, sir!"

"Then et doesn't belong to your family now?"

"No, et don't. We sold et a-many year ago, afore mother 'nd father died. I ain't set foot on 't for nigh on to 15 year. Not sence—but you don't want to hear about thet."

"Indeed I do, cap'n. What happened there? Tell me, do," I urged.

"Lord! you be the mos' cur'ous boy as ever I see. You'll cut yerself to pieces some day jes' to see how et'll feel. But mind, now, this ain't a pretty story. Et'll make yeh feel real bad—wuss than pirates 'nd hants 'nd such, 'cause et's true, ev'ry word of et."

"I'm waiting, cap'n," was the only response. And quietly at first, with many a pause for a long pull at his clay pipe, but with ever increasing emotion, he related the following story, which has haunted me ever since:

"Et were 10 year ago come this fall that a big feller, named Sam Weston, come ashore with wife 'nd little un. He were mate on the Breezy, a fishin wessel bound for the banks. He come to father 'nd said: 'Will yeh rent me thet little house o' yourn over on th' islun? Can't seem to fin no berth in the town.' He were wery jolly, 'nd father, he said: 'Aye! Take et 'nd welcome.' Mother, she took right a-hold 'nd helped the gal with 'er duds—she were al'ays helpin some un, mother was—'nd I painted up an ol' dory for 'em to row over 'nd back in.

"Well, bum-by, in 'bout a week the Breezy set sail, 'nd Sam Weston went along of 'er. The gal 'nd little feller were left alone on th' islun. She seemed a bit down hearted at fust, but she were too joyful a creatur' to stay that way long. 'Call me Jess,' she says to mother, 'cause I love ye a'ready. Call me Jess.'

"Lord, Lord! She were a delightful creatur'—tall 'nd slim, with black hair 'nd eyes the color of watrr. You sh'd hev' heered her laf. Mother used to say et made her feel young agin to hear that laf, et was so good 'nd hearty.

"Jess c'd pull a dory against any feller along shore, 'nd they all 'mired her after that big shoal o' herrin come in late, 'nd she helped pick the nets 'cause they was short o' hands 'nd dories. She saved ol' crazy Bill's life one day when his boat capsized in a squall. Bill never forgot that, cracked as he were. The little un, Neddy, too, how she did love 'im! He were a fat, solemn looking little feller, onstidy on his legs 'nd jes' beginnin to talk. Favored Sam, but hed her eyes—bootiful eyes!

"Well, one mild, bright day in winter, the Breezy agin dropped anchor in the harbor. She hed a fust rate haul o' fish aboard 'er, 'nd they'd been a wery easy trip.

"Sittin et suppe Peter (my brother that's dead) said the men aff the Breezy was raisin h—l with their money down to Jilly's. Si Jilly kep' the store then 'nd sold bad whisky in a back room. 'Yeh didn't see Sam Weston with 'em, did yeh?' mother asked, kinder anxious. She was very fond o' Jess, mother was. 'No,' said Peter. 'He must hev' steered straight home.' Mother give a sigh o' relief 'nd asked us not to go a-nigh Jilly 'nd his crew thet night. We humored 'er 'nd staid to home. I 'member Peter played on 'is 'cordion all the evenin. Lord, how he did make the thing work! It al'ays pleased mother 'nd father so.

"Long arter midnight, when we'd all turned in, I c'd hear the singin 'nd bowlin goin on down to Jilly's. Et must hev been 'bout 2 in the mornin thet a couple o' the devils come reelin by, yellin 'nd cussin. Then I fell asleep, 'nd the nex' thing I knew I was sittin straight up in bed a-list'nin. Et was a knock thet had woke me—a knock at our door. Quick I jumped into my clothes 'nd ran down below. A secon knock come, so very gentle thet et made me feel queer. I thought of the 'Moonfaced Lady' 'nd the 'Wisitin Cod.' Not thet I b'lieved them yarns—Lord, no! I didn't unbolt the door, but called out low: 'Who is it? What d'yeh want?'

"No answer. Then agin, a little louder: 'Who is et? Tell me what yeh want.' 'Nd a strange voice answered: 'It's me, Jess. Let me in.' 'Nd I threw open the door. In she walked with the boy in 'er arms. It were Jess, 'nd yit it warnt Jess. I didn't dare to speak. A fearful look was in 'er eye. Mother was up by this time 'nd in the room. The gal walked straight up to 'er 'nd put the boy in 'er arms. 'Mis' Jameson,' said she in thet cold, strange voice, 'Mis' Jameson, I've killed Sam. He wanted to strangle my baby. See! See! The black marks on his soft little neck. I drove a knife deep, deep, into the cruel heart,' 'nd with that she seemed to let go o' 'erself, fell right down on the floor screamin, 'nd et was all Peter 'nd I c'd do to keep 'er from banging 'erself to pieces.

"Neddy begun to cry. He were frightened, poor little feller! 'nd mother took 'im away, huggin 'im close. Father 'nd Jack Andrews pulled over to the islun 'nd come back lookin white 'nd skeered. 'She done et,' was all father c'd say, 'she done et.' Then come some black days—Jess carried off 'nd Sam buried. Et seemed the wagabond hed gone home thet night mad wi' the drink, 'nd he must have set out to strangle his boy. The marks were on 'im. * * * Some say Jess were a murd'ress, 'nd thet she ought t' hev been hung, but I can't see et in thet light. Anyway they let 'er be, 'nd et warn't long afore she lef' this world o' 'er own accord. Poor creatur'! Poor suff'rin creatur'!"

"And the little fellow, what became of him?" I ventured to ask, breaking the long pause that followed the cap'n's last words.

"The little feller?" repeated my friend, raising his bowed head and mechanically rolling a bit of thread. "Well, d'yeh see a green dory over by the lighthouse?"

"Yes, cap'n."

"And a fine, strappin boy in 'er settin a lobster trap?"

"Yes."

"That's the little feller."—Boston Transcript.

The Varied Value of Silver.

Silver, in its relative commercial value to gold, has varied greatly at different times since the two metals were first used for coins. In the days of Abraham the patriarch it was 8 to 1; B. C. 1000, it was 12 to 1; B. C. 500, 13 to 1, and at the beginning of the Christian era, about 9 to 1. In the year 500 A. D. it was 18 to 1, in 1100 it was 8 to 1, and at the time of the discovery of America only 7 to 1.

In the year 1600 gold was only six times more valuable than the precious white metal, and within the next 100 years two pounds of silver could be exchanged evenly for one of gold. In 1618 gold was again on the boom, being 10 times more valuable than its paler brother, and in 1733 it was 13 times more valuable than silver, just as it was 500 years B. C. At the beginning of the present century silver was at a lower figure than it had been at any time since the year 500 A. D.—viz, 15.96 to 1. In 1876 the ratio (commercial) of silver to gold was 20 to 1, and in 1893 it was at the lowest point it has ever reached since the discovery of America—24.24 to 1. The figures for the present year are wanting.—St. Louis Republic.

Fruit Good at Any Time.

All fruit is said to be most wholesome the first thing in the morning—and surely no fruit is so cleansing and refreshing and very little so delicious at that hour as a big juicy melon, cooled over night and almost cracking open and voluntarily expanding its red heart after the knife has gone partly through it. Such a melon, however, is just as good at other hours in the hot days, for which it seems to be especially provided as a refreshing dispensation, something more than the shadow of a great rock in a weary land. It is no wonder the southern darkies are so fond of watermelons. In these most trying days of the long summer of the south the melon is more refreshing than chill dewdrops on the early morning grass, and to the overheated, overwearied and thirsty soul a good juicy ripe one "comes home to the business and the bosoms" of darky and white man alike.—Hartford Times.

Easy Tests For Proving a Diamond.

It is an easy matter to detect the difference between a genuine diamond and an imitation. Take a tube of filtered water and drop the stone therein. If it is paste, it can be seen as it passes through the water, but if pure the eye is unable to see it at all. Another test is to place the stone upon a pencil dot made on a piece of white paper. If the dot is duplicated upon the facets you can rest assured that the stone is a fraud, but if not it is a good stone. The common belief that a stone can be tested by filing is erroneous, for the best diamond ever cut will splinter and break when rasped with this instrument.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Women Cashiers.

The new and magnificent Holland hotel on Fifth avenue, New York city, decided to employ a woman cashier. She worked so well that it lately secured another. The young ladies require seven different books for taking all their orders, and they must keep track of these and not get tangled up. They also have occasion to cash large checks at times and must know when these are genuine and when bogus. There is much responsibility attached to the place. The West Hotel, Minneapolis, has a woman cashier too.—Boston Woman's World.

FARM, FIELD AND GARDEN.

POPULAR PLYMOUTH ROCKS.

A Variety of Poultry Which Returns a Fair Profit.

Talking with Mr. Nesmith a few weeks ago about the egg season, he said he wished he had had twice as many breeding pens of Plymouth Rocks; that he had sold more than twice as many of their eggs as of any other variety and couldn't keep up with his orders for them. "In fact," said he, "I've a good mind to keep nothing but Plymouth Rocks hereafter. Everybody wants them, and the kind that everybody wants is the kind to keep."

The foregoing is from the pen of a contributor to Farm Poultry, who gives his own experience as follows: We have kept seven varieties of purebreds on our place this season and have been aware that the call for Plymouth Rock eggs was very loud, but were hardly prepared to give them such an astonishing lead as a comparative table of the season's orders gives them.

We began shipping eggs March 1 and shut down July 1, shipping in the four months over 800 sittings, as follows:

	Total sittings shipped.
Barred Plymouth Rocks	[illegible]
White Plymouth Rocks	[illegible]
Light Brahmas	[illegible]
Black Langshans	[illegible]
White Wyandottes	[illegible]
Silver Wyandottes	[illegible]
Golden Wyandottes	[illegible]

And that shows the Barred Plymouth Rocks to be more than twice as popular as any other variety we have offered.

We were surprised that the Light Brahmas should have come second on the list, but perhaps they would not have done so if we had not had two large orders for them from California, one of 12 and the other of 15 sittings, subtracting which would put Light Brahmas in fourth place.

White Wyandottes should be in second place, and would be easily if we had been able to fill the orders sent us. We returned the money for some 20 sittings of that variety, and 15 to 20 more sittings were transferred to other varieties when the customers were told they would have to wait five or six weeks for the eggs, we being sold that much ahead on that variety most of the season.

This is an instructive table and well worthy the careful consideration of those of our readers who are thinking of offering stock or eggs to would be buyers.

Partly Capped Sections of Honey.

A few sections partly finished mixed in with a nice lot of honey will hurt the sale of the whole. That which lacks a very little of being finished can be sorted into a lot by itself and sold for a lower price. There are two ways to proceed with those unfinished sections that you do not want to sell, says The American Bee Journal. One way is to extract the honey out of them, the other is to let the bees rob it out. In either case let the bees do the finishing, for a section is not fit to be used the following season that has not been thoroughly cleaned out by the bees. Pile the supers of sections where the bees can get at them, protecting them from the rain and allowing entrance for only one or two bees at a time. If you allow the bees free access by a large entrance, you will very likely find the sections torn to pieces by the bees.

If your unfinished sections have been kept nice and clean and have been thoroughly cleaned out by the bees, they will be valuable for "bait" next season. Indeed, if you have enough of them for your whole crop, your crop should be larger, on the same principle that you can get more extracted than comb honey.

Pumpkins.

When the pastures begin to fail in late summer, The Western Farmer advises that the pumpkin crop be drawn on for a supplemental ration. It is not necessary to wait until they ripen, as they seem about as valuable when green as when ripe and will do much to keep up the flow of milk in the dairy. When beginning to feed the pigs new corn, also feed them liberally of the pumpkins. This will keep them in good condition, counteracting feverish inclination of the corn, aiding digestion and apparently, in a medicinal way, warding off disease, many claiming that a herd of pigs that can have all the pumpkins they will eat are safe from cholera or swine plague. While this may be too great a claim, it is undoubtedly true that they will not be so apt to contract disease. By a little care, such as covering the pile with straw or putting them into a warm corner of the barn, pumpkins may be kept quite up to the holidays in good feeding condition.

Poultry Points.

Select the best layers for the winter pens.

Supply the layers with bones, oyster shells and vegetables.

Kill the drones, for they eat the profit made by the good layers.

Get out as many chickens as possible in time for the early grass.

When properly managed, poultry and small fruits are said to be a paying combination.

Keep the layers, if possible, in a temperature where the drinking water will not freeze.

With proper care the cockerels should be fit for market in three to four months, and the pullets become layers in five to six months.

The laying stock should be supplied in winter with all the material necessary for making the eggs.

Flotsam and Jetsam.

How many farmers grow a few plants of sage for home use?

Australian farmers have sent a shipment of oat hay to England as an experiment. At home these farmers depend largely upon grain cut while green and cured like hay for stock food.

Who will pay you $1 per bushel for your wheat? W. & B. Leghorn, dealers in eggs, answers The Rural New Yorker.

Potatoes and onions are likely to be hop crops so far as prices go!

A muck bed on your farm? Lucky man. For centuries nature has been storing fertility there for you!

Michigan reports a full average crop of hay of excellent quality.

Reports of the second crop of grass in Great Britain and on the continent are times good, and a fairly good crop of hay is assured.

IN THE POTATO FIELD.

Relative Merits of Deep and Shallow Culture—Different Depths of Planting.

In experiments carried on at the experiment station of the Michigan state agricultural college with a view to ascertaining which method of planting—in hills or drills—gives the greater yield, the results favored drills. These experiments were conducted two seasons and in both clay and sand. These tests were also made with several varieties of potatoes and with different amounts of seed.

The object of another experiment were, 1. To test the relative merits of deep and shallow culture. 2. To secure comparative results of the different depths of planting. The plat on which the experiments were conducted is a sandy loam. Three varieties of potatoes were used—namely, Burbank's Seedling, Lee's Favorite and Thorburn, in order that the eccentricity of any particular variety might be guarded against as influencing the entire experiment.

The potatoes were planted at the depth of two, three, four, five and six inches. The cultivation was performed with a Goodyear cultivator, set at about 1½ inches for the shallow culture, and at about five inches for the deep culture.

There was little difference in time of appearance between those planted two, three, four and five inches deep. In nearly all cases the three and four inch plants were a trifle more advanced than the two and five.

In ripening, little difference was noted between those planted six and five inches deep, either in point of advancement or in time of ripening. Those planted two and three inches deep were very slightly further advanced than the others.

Results gained made it appear that out of 45 experiments the total yield in 29 cases was greatest with the deep culture and in 13 cases was in favor of shallow culture, while in three instances the yield was practically the same.

In the same experiments the yield of marketable potatoes was in 40 cases in favor of deep culture, while four cases showed a balance in favor of shallow culture. The amount of sunburned potatoes was in 36 cases greatest in shallow culture, in six cases in favor of deep culture, while in three instances the yield was the same. The amount of small potatoes was in 28 cases greatest with shallow culture, in 15 cases greatest with deep culture, while two instances were indecisive. Deep culture gives the best result both as to total yield and as to percentage of marketable to unmarketable. This holds true for all the different kinds of soil on the plat.

It was found that the potatoes planted three inches deep gave the largest yield and that those planted five inches deep gave the largest amount of marketable potatoes. The potatoes planted two inches deep gave the smallest amount of marketable potatoes.

Self Hiving Arrangements.

The practicability of self hiving arrangements for swarms remains a question in the minds of many apiarists. Dadant thinks there is too much to get out of order in these contrivances. Professor A. J. Cook doesn't believe they have come to stay. Mrs. Atchley of Texas says in The American Bee Journal: "I believe in progression, but I am now of the opinion that swarm catchers will soon be a thing of the past, like the patent moth catcher. I may be wrong."

W. M. Barnum is, on the contrary, convinced of the practicability of this new arrangement. But the apiarist who is continually with his bees does not need it. To those who are at certain times obliged to be away it is, in his opinion, well worthy the expense. J. E. Pond does not believe in it.

G. W. Demaree says: "When I want a swarm, I want a swarm that can work with profitable results, and that means a strong swarm. No 'self hiver' will catch a full sized swarm half of the time, and that is not practicability."

Cautious C. C. Miller remarks that opinions differ, and it is perhaps too early yet to know exactly the truth about the matter.

B. F. Holtermann says: "I believe—yes, I am firmly convinced—that the self hiver has a great future before it—not for the specialist in his own apiary, but for those who have not enough bees to afford watching them."

Belonging to the Chicken Louse Family.

The red mites found on the poultry, and in the nests, and on the roosts belong to the louse family, and while they are not as destructive as the large gray louse they still take the snap out of both the fowls and the chicks by their continual worry, explains The Fanciers' Journal, which advises that roosts and nests be treated each week to a soaking of kerosene, and air slacked lime should be liberally strewn about the buildings. The tiny white mite which is frequently found on the eggs in the incubators does not, strictly speaking, belong to the louse family. They are what are known as "moisture mites," produced by an oversupply of moisture during the hatch. As they are of no particular damage, it is hardly necessary to fight them. We mention them here as they are so often taken for chicken lice.

Depended Upon the Decision.

Judge D. P. Dennison was once arguing a case before Judge Roger S. Greene, and in the course of his remarks he kept constantly referring to "Browne on Statute of Frauds," always making two syllables of the word Browne and pronouncing it as if it were Brown-ee.

Judge Greene fidgeted around in his chair, stood the mispronunciation as long as he could and then blurted out:

"Judge, why do you say Brown-ee? You wouldn't call me Green-ee, would you?"

Judge Dennison slowly replied in a rather dry tone of voice:

"That depends on how your honor decides this case."—Germantown Telegraph.

Ivy a Foe to Dampness.

The growth of ivy on the walls of houses renders the walls entirely free from damp, the ivy extracting every particle of moisture from wood, brick or stones for its own sustenance by means of its tiny roots, which work their way into the hardest stone. The overlapping leaves of the ivy conduct water falling upon them from point to point until it reaches the ground without allowing the walls to receive any moisture whatever from the beating rain.—Detroit Free Press.

RILEY'S FAILING.

The Hoosier Poet Makes Confession of a Troublesome Weakness.

James Whitcomb Riley, the poet, describes himself as a train misser. A friend thus relates how the poet confesses his weakness:

I found him occupying an easy chair in a parlor car that was attached to a train leaving Chicago at 10:30 a. m. for Indianapolis. After the greetings, in that quaintly humorous strain that has made the man and his writing so popular, he described the trial he meets with as a traveler:

"I have been in the depot three hours waiting for this train to start for Indianapolis."

"Why did you come here three hours before traintime?—10:30 is the leaving time."

"Well, you know I am a train misser. I can't make a train. It doesn't make any difference what precautions I take, I miss it or take the wrong train. I got my ticket yesterday—bought it over the 'Monon route' because I knew it went right through without change. If I ever have to change cars, I'm lost. I am sure to miss the connection or take the wrong train. I had a messenger boy go with me to the ticket office. Never could have found it myself. When I got to the hotel after the entertainment last night, I asked the clerk what time the 'Monon' train left for Indianapolis.

"'Monon—Monon,' said he: 'hasn't that road got another name?'

"'It probably has. It would be just like these railroads to change the name immediately after I bought my ticket.' Then he looked at one of those brain splitting time cards and said:

"'Yes! yes! Monon route—that's the L., N. A. and A. C. railway, and it leaves at 8 a. m.'

"I left a call for 6:30, so I could have my breakfast and be at the depot at 7:30. I always go to the depot 30 minutes before the train leaves, and then I miss it oftener than I catch it. When I presented my ticket to the gatekeeper, he said: 'Your train leaves at 10:30.' That was so, and here I have been since 7:30.

"Bill Nye says that when my head was built they run out of gray matter when they came to fill my bump of location, and they filled it with mayonnaise dressing, and that's a pretty hard thing for a man to think with."—Detroit Free Press.

A Courageous Corporal.

When Lord Rawdon was in South Carolina, he had to send an express of great importance through a part of the country filled with continental troops.

A corporal of the Seventeenth dragoons, known for his courage and intelligence, was selected to escort it.

They had not proceeded far when they were fired upon, the express was killed and the corporal wounded in the side. Careless of his wound, he thought only of his duty. He snatched the dispatch from the dying man and rode on till, from the loss of blood, he fell. Then fearing the dispatch would be taken by his enemy, he thrust it into his wound until the wound closed upon it and concealed it. He was found next day by a British patrol, with a smile of honorable pride upon his countenance, and with life just sufficient to point to the fatal depository of his secret.

In searching the body the cause of his death was found, for the surgeon declared that the wound in itself was not mortal, but was rendered so by the irritation of the paper.

Thus fell this patriot soldier—in rank a corporal, he was in mind a hero. His name was O'Lavery, and he came from the parish of Moira, in County Down, Ireland.—Youth's Companion.

Appearances May Deceive.

Should you happen to see a girl walking along the street with her face wreathed in placid smiles, don't take it for granted that she feels perfectly contented and happy. For the truth is that—

She may be having a nerve destroying argument with herself as to whether her skirt and waist meet properly in the back.

She may have a tiny hole in her shoe and be perfectly wretched over the thought of getting her silk stocking soiled.

She may be on the verge of insanity because she knows that the one pin with which she fastened her skirt is going to give way.

She may be conscious of a big chunk of soot that has found lodgment on the end of her nose.

She may remember that there is but one hairpin in her hair, and that it would be just her luck if it were all to tumble down.

She may hear a little snap and may know that her garter has broken. That, however, is simply too horrible for words.

AT THE BATTLE OF ATLANTA.

How Gen. Belknap Won His Commission For Conspicuous Gallantry.

I will never forget the appearance upon this field of Gen. Giles A. Smith and his adjutant general, Col C. Cadle, Jr. They came down through the brush and stopped with Col. Belknap, asking how the battle was going.

Smith had succeeded General Gresham, and had been sent from the 15th corps, much to our discontent, as we thought we had men in our own ranks who ought to command us. Smith and Cadle rode down through a very tempest of fire, stopped, and commenced talking to Colonel Belknap.

"General," said Belknap, "get off your horse, for they are shooting grape and canister up through here by the bucketful every minute, from cannon captured from us."

The faces of these brave men were as white as the paper upon which this is written, but they remained on their horses and talked about the battle as unconcernedly as I now write about it. It was an exhibition of nerve and coolness that I have never seen equaled.

During this fight, Gen. Belknap, then colonel of the Fifteenth Iowa, won his commission as brigadier general by personal bravery. He was in a very exposed position and urging his men to stand fast. The Forty fifth Alabama (confederate) charged upon Belknap's regiment. If any of them got away, we did not know it at that time. Lampley, colonel of the Forty-fifth, came clear up to our lines, and was hauled over the works by Gen. Belknap by the "scruff of the neck and the seat of the breeches."

This is a fact which can be proved by any man of the Crocker Iowa brigade present on that occasion, and by the fact that our 'Old Uncle Billy Sherman' made him a brigadier general a few days later for "conspicuous gallantry," although there were several officers in the brigade who ranked him, one of whom was so incensed that he immediately resigned.—[Blue and Gray for September.

HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA.

Rich Red Blood
is the natural result of taking Hood's Sarsaparilla. Mrs. Mary F. Tome, of Mystic, Conn., author of a very beautiful volume of poems, entitled "Sacred Songs," says, "I find that for feeling of deadness of the limbs, constipation and poor circulation of the blood,
Hood's Sarsaparilla
has no rival. I have been troubled severely with a fibroid tumor, besides seven fatty tumors on my left arm. My blood was in very poor condition, watery and deficient in color. Since taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I have good, rich, red blood, and do not bloat as I used to.
Hood's Sarsaparilla Cures
Hood's Sarsaparilla has proved its merit to me as it will to all who take it fairly."

LAID AWAY.

The effort of Senator Platt to draw the line for debate in the senate by a resolution of cloture has ended, as every republican act for public good may be expected to end during the present congress, in the dark pigeon holes of a democratic committee room. No one expects the committee on rules to do anything to hasten important legislation any more than they expect the committee on ways and means to be influenced in their revision of the tariff by the men who are qualified to tell them accurately the effects of their declared tariff policy.

The democrats are in favor of a compromise, and they are not at all sensitive concerning any delay which, by putting off the unconditional repeal of the silver bill, may embarrass the country.

The administration's "steering committee" either consider the ship of state becalmed, or else the rudder isn't working worth a cent.

THE NARRAGANSETTS' FORLORN HOPE.

The last of the Narragansett tribe, a motley crowd of a hundred or more men and women met Monday in Charlestown, R. I., a little ways from Westerly, to talk over the tribal claims against the state of Rhode Island, which they are in the habit of doing annually, with a decreasing prospect of ever realizing a penny upon lands which they estimate to be worth a million dollars. There is not a full blooded Narragansett Indian among them; and some of them resemble negroes more than Indians. They claim that they own a strip of land on the coast, ten rods wide from high water mark, reaching from the Pawcatuck to the Pawtuxet river, which was retained by Chief Ninegret for his people for fishing purposes. They have an old deed which shows this, but all evidence bearing upon it is traditional and of little account.

Over against their claim is the deed given by the council twelve years ago when the tribal form of government was abandoned and they sold their reservation to the state and became citizens, which says: "The Indian Council quit claim and release lands within the Indian reservation, and all their other tribal rights and claims of whatsoever name and nature and wherever situated."

There is not much doubt that they had this claim upon the coast when they sold out to the state, but the artful drawer of the deed for the Indian council did a cunning piece of work for the state. The Indians, apparently without knowing it, dispossessed themselves of this great inheritance, about which they meet to talk annually, but from which there is no ground for hope of realizing a dollar.

They are a quiet and contented people, have a pleasant time when they assemble, worship God after the form of the Second Adventists, gossip, eat hearty and lose no flesh because their claim is not recognized.

THE MAN BLAMED.

The railroad commissioners of the state of Massachusetts find Daniel Belville, the foreman of a gang of workmen, responsible for the Chester disaster. He is a man who has worked upon bridges, and he claims that he did the work at Chester the same as he has always done it elsewhere. Two freight trains passed over the bridge without mishap while the men were at dinner. He alleges he took his orders from Supt. Reed of the Hawkins iron works; and he still works for the company.

It is a new principle of equity to make criminals of men working in subordinate places and acting under orders when accidents occur of this kind, instead of looking to the directors or the men who maintain an old-fashioned bridge until it is out-of-date and dangerous. Any person who knows anything is aware that Daniel Belville cannot be alone responsible for the Chester disaster and the loss of fourteen lives.

He lives in Springfield, Mass., and when interviewed Sunday evening on Franklin street said:

"I live right there," pointing to the house, "with my wife and two children, and when anybody wants me and I ain't at home, my wife will tell them where I can be found. It seems to me as if they were putting the whole blame on me. I've read part of the railroad commissioners' report, and lots of people have spoken to me about it. But I had the men repair that bridge just as the work has been done ever since I had anything to do with it. Why it broke down I don't know, but it does not seem as if I was responsible for it. There is not a word in the testimony that I gave before the commissioners that I should care to change. I still work for the Hawkins iron works. If I am arrested I shall have to defend myself, and that's all there is to it."

The manner of the man as reported indicates that he is neither a fool or a sneak, and to take such a man, put him in prison and break up his home and family is not right if it does satisfy the demands of the law.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

The Richmond (Va) Dispatch says: Mr. Wall's plan for raising revenue would "perpetrate an unpardonable wrong on the tobacco states."

This country has a democratic president, a democratic congress, a democratic policy and democratic times, with hard fare and poor prospects thrown in.

Democratic revision of the tariff is an axe that every cautious business man is afraid of, but he is getting in his work while the workingmen walk the streets.

Dr. Parkhurst says: "If there is anything the American people desire more than a dollar, it is two dollars." Speaking in a worldly way that is undoubtedly so.

There is no truth to the report that the Navahoe has been challenged to defend the Brenton's reef cup in American waters next month by Lord Dunraven, the owner of the Valkyrie.

Republicans should bear in mind the caucus for the nomination of town officers this evening. An effort should be made to nominate the best men in the party for these offices and then to elect them. United action is all that is necessary for victory.

A Providence Journal reporter writes about immense boulders in that state "weighing 500 pounds." The only immense boulder hereabouts is at Montville, and that weighs 5000 tons. The average Connecticut boulder is larger than these Rhode Island "immensities."

The shrinkage in wool values in this country is estimated at one hundred and twenty millions of dollars, which equals almost the entire working capital of the manufacturers. The representatives of this crippled industry were given just thirty minutes to state their case before the ways and means committee.

The hosiery and knit goods industry increased nearly thirty per cent. between 1886 and 1893, under republican protection. The business is distributed through thirty-seven states, and grew from 721 establishments in 1882 to 926 at the close of Harrison's administration, an increase of 205. This business is now at a standstill.

The great yacht owners are odd this season and will not comply with the ideas of cultured Boston in spell or pronunciation. Mr. Phelps' yacht's name should be spelled Navajo, but he prefers to spell it as popularly pronounced. Dunraven doesn't care a snap about Scandinavian pronunciation, but pronounces Valkyrie as the common English people do. Sailors never care much for style except in their broad-brimmed hats, wide shirt collars, bell bottomed trousers, telling yarns and expectorating tobacco juice!

A Scotch divine, referring to the heresy-hunters who did not want to fellowship with him, said:—"We are told to love our enemies; but we are not told to like them. I don't like my enemies. I dislike them very much. But I love them, and I shall be ready to show my love for them by trying to get them severely punished, that they may be led to repent of their behavior towards me!" This is very ingenious although it will not be accepted as showing the true spirit of Christianity.

VOICE OF THE PRESS.

A Mistake!

The democratic committee on resolutions is mistaken. It is not the tariff issue that is closed; it is the factories, and among them are those of several eminent tariff reformers.—[Boston Journal.

Unanimous for Once!

"Vote, vote!" shout the democratic monometallist organs to the United States senate. "Vote, vote!" shouts the democratic majority in congress to the hoodlums and heelers of the country, as it anticipates the repeal of the federal elections law.—[N. Y. Press.

A Well Defined Difference.

The difference between the Czarism of Speaker Crisp and that of ex-Speaker Reed is the difference between tyranny inflicted by a narrow-minded and prejudiced man and the firmness of one whose mind is controlled by common sense, reason, truth and justice.—[N. Y. Tribune.

History Must Repeat Itself.

Every generation has to learn its own political lessons. It is just a generation ago that the democratic party was swept from power, after passing tariff laws which sent a large part of the population to the soup kitchens, and displaying a financial incompetency which almost wrecked the credit of the government.—[Boston Journal.

A Display of Candor!

Secretary Herbert has the candor to admit himself in the wrong as regards Captain Higginson, the former commander of the Atlanta, and has offered to assign him to duty on his own application. Next time the secretary will find it safe to assume that when a gallant captain asks for repairs on his ship before sailing in her, he probably knows what he is about.—[Boston Journal.

It is a Pity.

It is a pity that such an accomplished gentleman and true sportsman as Lord Dunraven doesn't recognize the only proper pronunciation of the name of his own yacht. "I call her the Val-ki-ry," he says, "with the accent on the ki, and so do all my friends. I do not know whether that is the proper pronunciation or not; I shall stick to it anyway." Of course Lord Dunraven ought to know that the name of his famous craft is of Scandinavian origin, and that the Norsemen pronounce it "Val kirry-ye." He has no more right to pronounce her name otherwise than he has to take any improper liberties with the language he speaks.—[Boston Herald.

A Wall of Discontent.

As a "democratic newspaper which stands flat-footed on the Chicago platform, on which the party won, and which, as a supporter and defender of democratic principles, is not less earnest than any newspaper in America, we insist, in the name and for the sake of the party, that something be done to give the people to understand that the democratic platform is to be redeemed, whether Wall street and the protected trusts of New England favor such action or not.

For God's sake, do something!—[Atlanta Constitution.

No Reason for Alarm.

The bill for the unconditional repeal of the purchasing clause of the Sherman act, unless conditions change materially within a few days will not pass the senate. Disappointing as all this must be to the business interests of the country there is really no cause for alarm. The money scare, or panic, has almost passed, and discussion has dispersed the cloud of ignorance with which it was enveloped by the one sided harangues against silver. The most threatening evils are the repeal of the Federal election laws and the repeal of the McKinley law. With those issues out of the way it will not be difficult to reach a satisfactory conclusion in regard to the currency; a conclusion that will consider alike gold and silver and that will be broad enough to comprehend the varied needs and interests of this rapidly developing republic.—[N. Y. Press.

THE WORLD'S FAIR.

A Few Things Every One Ought to See—Connecticut's Building and Exhibits—The State Motto.

CHICAGO, Ills., Sept. 22, 1893.

EDITOR BULLETIN: I write to say through THE BULLETIN (which speaks to all my friends at home), a few words about my visit to the World's fair.

I hesitated as to going, and felt a trepidation in the attempt. We found the ride on the Pullman car comfortable and pleasant.

At the Plymouth hotel (thanks to a friend's recommendation) we are comfortably and reasonably entertained. We walked two blocks to the entrance of the "White city," took the Intramural railway, which makes the circuit of the grounds upon a high elevation. This ride for ten cents affords the cheapest, grandest, and most beautiful ride in the world.

I will not attempt to describe anything. We have been looking around just three days in a superficial manner, have been nearly all around and through the fair. We have seen about a million objects of interest, but it occurs to me that there are about a dozen or twenty things that no one who desires freedom from life long annoyance of the question, "have you seen it," can omit a view of such exhibits as the "Ferris Wheel," "the cave dwellers," "the big tree," "the greatest slab of mahogany in the world," "the equestrian statue of California prunes," "the Iowa corn palace." Two dozen or more things one may remember that he has never seen, and may never see again.

Our Connecticut house is often criticised. It is not grand or expensive like New York's, Pennsylvania's or Illinois' palatial buildings; but it is finely proportioned, in good style and homelike. Everybody here finds ample accommodations and a courteous welcome. The Connecticut exhibit is good for its extent. No better corn, beans, potatoes and tobacco can be seen anywhere; but best of all is the prominent motto over the entrance:—

"Connecticut takes the greatest pride in her sons and daughters." W. R. A.

Matters of Local Interest

Rev. W. C. Norris of Willimantic preached to a large congregation at the church last Sunday, and gave his attentive hearers a strong sermon from these words: "Am I my brother's keeper?"

The Willimantic fair drew many from this place. C. S. Turner exhibited his herd of Devon cattle, working oxen and sheep, and was awarded a good share of premiums.

Miss Hattie Smith has commenced her school in Eastford.

Miss Mabel Lamphear teaches at Goshen.

Willie Neff has entered school at Mt. Hermon.

The Windham county fair will draw exhibitors and many visitors this week who take a lively interest each year in the fair.

Cutts Brothers, proprietors of the upper paper mill, are making extensive repairs since recently coming in possession of the property.

These complaints are nearly always caused by torpid liver and constipated bowels. Restore these organs to their proper functions and the trouble ceases. Carter's Little Liver Pills will do this every time. One pill a dose. Don't forget this. Price 25 cents.

"I have had catarrh for twenty years, and used all kinds of remedies without relief. Mr. Smith, druggist, of Little Falls, recommended Ely's Cream Balm. The effect of the first application was magical. It allayed the inflammation, and the next morning my head was as clear as a bell. I am convinced its use will effect a permanent cure. It is soothing and pleasant, and I strongly urge its use by all sufferers."—[Geo. Terry, Little Falls, N. Y.

Nervous Dyspepsia.

Senator James F. Pierce, of New York, writes:

"For the past two years I have suffered very much from an aggravated form of nervous dyspepsia. I have resorted to various remedial agents, deriving but little benefit. A few months since a friend of mine suggested the trial of ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS. Following the suggestion, I have been using the same with the happiest effects. To those similarly afflicted let me suggest the manner of their use. I place one over my stomach, one over the hepatic region, and one on my back. The effect is excellent. From the day I commenced their use have been slowly but surely improving, and am quite confident that by continuing I shall again be restored to my accustomed health."

The well known strengthening properties of IRON, combined with other tonics and a most perfect nervine, are found in Carter's Iron Pills, which strengthen the nerves and body, and improve the blood and complexion.

It cures Diarrhoea, regulates the Stomach and Bowels, cures Wind Colic, softens the Gums and reduces Inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for children teething is pleasant to the taste and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States. Price twenty-five cents a bottle. Sold by all druggists throughout the world. Be sure and ask for "MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP."

The Human Electrical Forces!

How They Control the Organs of the Body.

The electrical force of the human body, as the nerve fluid may be termed, is an especially attractive department of science, as it exerts so marked an influence on the health of the organs of the body. Nerve force is produced by the brain and conveyed by means of the nerves to the various organs of the body, thus supplying the latter with vitality necessary to insure their health. The pneumogastric nerve may be said to be the most important of the entire nerve system, as it supplies the heart, lungs, stomach, bowels, etc. The long nerve descending from the base of the brain and terminating in the bowels is the pneumogastric, while numerous little branches supply the heart, lungs and stomach with necessary vitality. When the brain becomes in any way disordered by irritability or exhaustion, the nerve force which it supplies is lessened, and the organs receiving the diminished supply are considerably weakened.

Physicians generally fail to recognize the importance of this fact, but treat the organ itself instead of the cause of the trouble. The noted specialist, Franklin Miles, M. D., LL. B., has given the greater part of his life to the study of this subject, and the principal discoveries concerning it are due to his efforts.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine, the unrivaled brain and nerve food, is prepared on the principle that all nervous and many other difficulties originate from disorders of the nerve centers. Its wonderful success in curing these disorders is testified to by thousands in every part of the land.

Restorative Nervine cures sleeplessness, nervous prostration, dizziness, hysteria, sexual debility, St. Vitus dance, epilepsy, etc. It is free from opiates or dangerous drugs. It is sold on a positive guarantee by all druggists, or sent direct by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid.

STILL CONFIDENT.

Anti-Silver Managers Sure Repeal Will Come.

SOME FEAR SILVER MEN TRICKY.

Vote Expected After Full Debate—Cloture Rule Not in Favor.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—The unanimous agreement in the senate to an extension of the hours of debate so as to avoid night sessions, and which, it was supposed, would expedite the debate on the silver repeal bill, has made a very unfavorable opening. The assent of the extreme silverites to the new rule, it was supposed, meant an honest carrying out of the terms of the agreement, but, instead, the silver wing, led by Mr. Stewart, is determined that the morning at least shall be consumed by meaningless resolutions upon which they propose to exhaust this additional time from 11 to 2 o'clock. Senator Voorhees and the administration managers are very much disgusted with the action of Senator Stewart and the other silver [illegible] who are behind him.

If the silverites persist in this course and waste the morning hour in dilatory debate, Senator Voorhees and the other administration managers will be compelled to insist upon night sessions. They are now inclined to believe that the silverites are not disposed to play fair and stand by any agreement which they may make on the silver question. When asked today what they meant by the course they were pursuing, they replied that they were simply debating the questions which were before the senate and intended continuing doing so, not only that, but they intend to insist upon the presence of a quorum at

All Stages of the Proceedings.

Notwithstanding this adverse condition of things the administration senators and all the Republicans who are co-operating with them, do not believe that these revolutionary senators can keep their present course indefinitely. They are of the opinion that when the general debate is closed and every senator has presented his views that the number of the obstructing senators will be so small that they will abandon the contest.

It was stated today on very good authority that after the debate was exhausted there would not be more than six or eight senators who would persist in opposing the will of the majority, and that these will represent the silver states alone. The free silver Democrats are not disposed to join this minority

Beyond the Point of Fair Discussion.

It is, therefore, still believed that a vote will be reached in the course of two or three weeks. The movements of Senators Platt and Hoar for a closure is not gaining strength. The impression prevails that the Republicans as a rule will permit this rule to be [illegible]. Senator Blackburn, who is chairman of the committee, is strongly opposed to adopting such a method of reaching a vote at this time. He and his Democratic colleagues express the opinion that such a question should be settled when there is nothing pending before the senate. That an attempt to pass an order or rule to compel a vote on any pending question would naturally result in an ugly feeling which would be more likely to retard than Facilitate the Present Controversy.

There are many senators on both sides of the chamber who are convinced that some standing rule should be adopted which will give the majority control of legislation in the senate. These attempts have never been made except to meet some emergency. The Republicans attempted it when the force bill was before that body, but they could not concentrate their own party upon the proposition. The Democrats, as a rule, do not believe in such methods. They regard unlimited debate as one of the safeguards of the minority. They, therefore, claim that they would not adopt it even if they knew that they would have absolute control of the senate for the next 10 or 15 years.

It has been sent out that Vice President Stevenson had intimated to the anti-silver senators that he would render them all the assistance he could from the chair, in repealing the silver-purchasing clause by recognizing Mr. Voorhees to present his different motions and declining to recognize the silverites in their Attempts at Factious Obstruction.

The vice-president stated to a correspondent that the duties of a vice-president are very simple. That they consist in presiding over the senate, preserving order, and when there should be a tie to give the casting vote, and that he had no power whatever and could not, if he desired, interfere with the parliamentary methods of the senate. The vice-president added, "during the entire history of the senate no vice-president has ever attempted to interfere with its deliberations. It has often been suggested, and the vice-president has been requested, to interpose in the interest of his party to control of the senate, but they have invariably stood aloof."

The last attempt was to induce Vice President Morton to aid in the passage of the force bill by undertaking to stop the dilatory and obstructive tactics of Senator Gorman and the other Democratic leaders. He emphatically declined to interfere in any manner whatever, remarking that the vice president is not a member of the senate, but simply its constitutional presiding officer, and any interference would be resented by the senate on both sides.

BIDDEFORD, Me., Sept. 26.—Eliakim Richard's shoe store was broken into last night and [illegible] worth of goods were taken.

DISCREPANCY DISCOVERED.

Unauthorized Purchase of Stock and Bonds by Old Colony Treasurer.

BOSTON, Sept. 26.—President Charles F. Choate sprang a small sized mine at the meeting of the Old Colony stockholders at the United States hotel this morning. He announced that since the printing and distribution of the annual report a discrepancy had been discovered in the accounts of the treasurer, John W. Washburn.

According to his report there was $96,000 in cash in the treasury. It was found instead that securities, stocks and bonds purchased by the company's money represented a part of this cash. The purchase was unauthorized. The treasurer's office has been vacated and the treasurer has made an assignment of all his outside property for the benefit of the corporation.

"It cannot be told," said Mr. Choate, "how much the loss will be. These securities are not all worth their nominal value, which was represented to be as much cash." It will not affect the property; it will not affect the dividends. The matter will be further investigated and pushed. In other respects the books of the treasurer are all right.

The following directors were elected unanimously: For Directors—Charles F. Choate, Southboro', Mass.; Thomas J. Borden, Fall River, Mass.; John S. Brayton, Fall River, Mass.; Charles P. Clark, New Haven, Conn.; Thomas Dunn, Newport, R. I.; George A. Gardner, Boston, Mass.; James R. Kendrick, Boston, Mass.; Charles L. Lovering, Taunton, Mass.; John J. Russell, Plymouth, Mass.; Joshua M. Sears, Boston, Mass.; Nathaniel Thayer, Lancaster, Mass.

President Clark of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad takes the place of the late F. L. Ames and the places made vacant by the deaths of Amory Lawrence and William J. Rotch are unfilled.

AGAINST THE EMBARGO.

Uncle Sam Will Again Protest [illegible]

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—A Washington special to The Herald says the state department people do not like the long silence of Minister Thompson. They do not hold him responsible, but they do the Brazilian government, and the protest recently made against the embargo placed upon commercial dispatches will likely be supplemented by another and more vigorous one against the censorship or whatever it may be that prevents this government communicating with its representatives in Brazil.

Not a word has been heard from Minister Thompson for more than a week, and all efforts to communicate with him have been unsuccessful.

At first the state department was disposed to place the responsibility with the cable companies, but since it appears that the Brazilian ministers in this and European countries have no difficulty in communicating with their government, there is a strong suspicion that the Brazilian government is responsible for the embargo placed on the messages for this government.

An investigation is now on foot to determine the real cause of the interception of government messages, and if the suspicions prove correct a vigorous protest will be made to the Peixoto government, which is the only authority that can be recognized pending the outcome of the present revolution.

The navy department is considering the advisability of sending the United States cruiser New York to Brazil for duty during the revolution. Captain Philip, the New York's commander, has requested the department to order his vessel to Rio, and it is said the idea meets with favor.

WOOD'S NOVEL DEFENSE.

Says His Wife Was [illegible] Had the Nightmare.

ATTLEBORO, Sept. 26.—Sanford Wood, who was arrested yesterday on suspicion of having attempted to chloroform his wife, will next Saturday put in a peculiar defense in the district court room. Wood admits that his wife screamed to him and that he and she searched the house for any possible intruder, but this, he claims, was done to allay any fear that might arise that he could be the guilty party.

He says, however, that the whole affair was due to an attack of nightmare on the part of his wife. When asked about the chloroform which was found, Wood said that he used it to allay pain in the side of his face, and that he had used the drug for some time.

Mrs. Wood now remembers that her husband was a long time coming to her assistance when she called him, and that she distinctly heard the sound of running water. This, she believes, is evidence that her husband washed his hands before he came to her assistance.

Mrs. Wood bit very hard on the finger of the man whose hands were in her mouth, applying the chloroform, and this fact may, or may not, clear her husband of the serious charge against him.

Deputy Sheriff Brown has obtained information that some of Wood's companions in Pawtucket have heard him say many times that if he could get rid of his wife in Attleboro he could live in Pawtucket.

Wood's mother, it is stated, will testify that Mrs. Wood has been having fits of nightmare.

GOVERNOR FLOWER.

Expects Officers to Stop Prize Fighting or Will Know Reason Why.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—A dispatch from Albany to The Tribune says that in conversation with a reporter last evening Governor Flower expressed his views on the proposed Corbett-Mitchell fight at Coney Island as follows:

The sheriff and district attorney of Kings county know the law relative to prize fighting and they have authority to act.

"I expect that these local officers will perform the duties for which they are sworn. They know that prize fighting is a violation of law, and I shall hold them to a strict accountability to enforce the statutes.

"I have been busy of late and have not given much attention to this coming prize fight, but you can say the law will be enforced or I will know the reason why."

Charlie Mitchell commenced training in earnest yesterday for his international contest. He has selected as headquarters Tabor's hotel at Far Rockaway. There are excellent roads in all directions and a splendid beach. Mitchell prefers the road exercise to hot water.

AGAIN BOMBARDED.

Brazilian Capital Much Damaged by Rebel Guns.

CLOSE BLOCKADE AT SANTOS.

Appeal to Patriotic Brazilians to Fight For Freedom.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—The Herald's Montevideo correspondent cables: The naval fleet which has been so long blockading the harbor of Rio Janeiro, again bombarded the city Sunday, under Admiral Mello's orders. The firing was very severe, and the damage done exceeds that of the first bombardment.

The extent of the damage and loss of life is not yet known, as no news is permitted by the government to be sent direct from Rio Janeiro.

Part of Mello's fleet is still keeping up a vigorous blockade of Santos. Copies of Admiral Mello's proclamation have been received here.

The leader of the revolution declares that President Peixoto, with the aid of corrupt members of the senate and venal deputies, has overridden the restrictions put upon their power by the constitution. Peixoto, he asserts, is trying to place Brazil under the Rule of an Absolute Tyranny.

"If, by my aid," the proclamation continues, "in making this stand for liberty, our cause shall triumph, I shall hand over the government to the charge of those honorable men who gave freedom to our nation before."

Four members of the Brazilian congress, on board the rebel cruiser Aquidaban, have signed an address to the public. They say President Peixoto and members of his cabinet have been stealing the public funds, destroying the autonomy of the states, and [illegible] a national war in order to serve their own personal ends.

These acts, the address says, together with the dictatorial conduct of both the president and vice president, compel the signers, as representatives of the national will, to make the Present Struggle Fight For Freedom.

They gave Admiral Mello command of their forces at this juncture, with a view to restoring peace, restoring law and re-establishing republican principles. The address closed with an appeal to all patriotic Brazilians to help their cause.

Confirmation of the report of the renewal of the blockade of Rio Grande by the revolters has been received. The Brazilian minister here is sending arms and horses to General Hipolyte. The state of Parana is in open revolt against Peixoto.

Plymouth County Convention.

BROCKTON, Mass., Sept. 26.—At the Plymouth county convention held here today William Rankin of Brockton was nominated by acclamation for county commissioner for three years, and John C. Sullivan of Middleboro was nominated in like manner for register of probate and insolvency. W. L. Danforth of Weymouth, E. S. Atwood of Whitman, W. B. O'Brien of Abington, Dr. George E. Freeman of Brockton and Cornelius Leonard of Middleboro were elected as county committee.

Pastor Resigns.

NEWTON, Mass., Sept. 26.—Rev. Henry L. Patrick, D. D., of the Second Congregational church, West Newton, tendered his resignation from the pastorate of that society, to the church committee today. The resignation is absolute and will undoubtedly be accepted. Mr. Patrick has occupied the pulpit of the West Newton church for almost 10 years.

Coal Elevator Burned.

FITCHBURG, Mass., Sept. 26.—Fire was discovered between 3 and 4 o'clock this morning in the coal elevator in the Fitchburg railroad yard at East Fitchburg. The building was 200 feet long, and contained 50 tons of coal and four cars partly loaded. The loss is total. The building cost about $6000. Fully insured. The fire was caused by the explosion of a lamp.

Village Wiped Out.

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 26.—A special to the News from Ionia, Mich., says: The village of Coral was completely wiped out by fire last night. Coral was a prosperous village in Montcalm county on the Detroit, Lansing and Northern railroad, with a population of between 400 and 500.

Jealous Husband's Work.

THE JEWELER.

A much needed novelty recently brought out is a silver rest for a tea ball.

A new mounting of pearls on a round brooch is on the end of gold spikes set closely together.

From Egypt comes little idols carved in lavalike stone. These are used as amulets. They pass for antiques.

Perforated silver receptacles are taking a new start, and are prettier than ever. Without being filigree, they approach its delicacy.

It is interesting to see the new ways silversmiths have of attaching handles to objects. Wherever it is possible to do so these are varied in their points of contact.

Sword chatelaines are exceedingly attractive. The chain on which the device is attached hangs as the officer's sword straps hang. The scabbard is bound and covered with repousse work.

A most curious fancy is the giving of gold safety pins as bridesmaids' and wedding presents in England. At a recent wedding gold safety pins with the bride's initial on them was her gift to the bridesmaids.

There is certainly a fancy for oriental jewelry among women of taste and fancy, for the two are distinct. The use of amulets in jewelry appeals to many women. A necklet was recently seen of pearl and gold beads from which were suspended five jade stones set with rubies and emeralds.—Jewelers' Circular.

PEN, PENCIL AND BRUSH.

Mr. Rider Haggard has a constant companion in his study in the form of a large pet rat named Jack. It is an intelligent and affectionate creature.

In summer General Lew Wallace likes to do most of his writing outdoors. He has a seat under an old tree in a wood adjoining his Crawfordsville home, and here he accomplishes a good deal of literary work with nature for inspiration.

Mlle. Aimee Rapin, an armless artist, who drew with her feet the pastel of the Duchess of York, is a young Genevoise of rare intelligence. The eldest daughter of a Swiss barrister, she as a child drew with her feet better than most people draw with their hands.

Sir John Everett Millais' first attempt at portrait painting was a picture of Charles Reade. Ruskin, whose opinion he asked as to its merits, said that it was not a failure, but a fiasco and in his anger kicked a hole through it, which, by the way, is still to be seen. Millais revenged himself by marrying Ruskin's divorced wife.

SNAKES.

D. Delashmutt killed a white rattlesnake in Bijou Basin, Ga., recently. It was 4 feet long and had seven rattles.

The best weapon to kill a really dangerous snake is a loaded shotgun. A club is too short, but a long, limber fishpole may answer.

A brave young colt in Lehigh has recently distinguished itself by killing a rattlesnake with its hoofs, but the colt was bitten in the fight and died.

In the Natural History museum at Paris there is a snake that climbs up the polished glass walls of its cage. The snake first disgorges from its glands an adhesive fluid, by the aid of which it draws its whole body up the cage.

Throughout Cochin China, in Tonquin and the extreme east, there is a very venomous snake called the "naja," whose venom causes death in from two to three hours. Every year this snake has been the cause of death to 15,000 persons.

THE STOCK MARKET.

Dealings In Leading Securities In Boston and New York.

BOSTON, Sept. 26.—In the outside market call money is quoted at 5 to 6 per cent, and time money is nominally 6 per cent.

Sterling exchange continued strong today and rates are now at a point where shipments of gold to either England or Germany could be made without loss. The reasons for this situation are perfectly obvious. The question is simply one of demand and supply. The movement of grain to Europe, though still large, has fallen below the exports of a few weeks ago. The cotton crop is three weeks behind its usual time, and planters, with the low prices prevailing and no pressing demand upon them, are not anxious to hasten to the market until the outlook is better. The result is a greatly reduced offering of bills.

On the other hand, the business men of this country were very large borrowers in London during the July and August panic here and these loans are now falling due. When these loans were made domestic interest rates were at an abnormal point, and now that they have fallen since, merchants prefer to pay these loans rather than to extend them. Further, during that crisis, Europe took largely of American securities at panic prices, which increased and accelerated the gold tide to these shores. The delay and pernicious filibustering of the senate, however disturbed and discouraged Europe as to the financial situation here, and so investors there have begun to part with these panic-accrued stocks and withdraw their money as rapidly as they can. These two factors, thus, have tended to increase the demand for exchange at the present moment, and, as it happens, at a moment when the normal factors which tend to [illegible] exchange are less effective.

London came weaker again this morning, the decline ranging between ¼ and ½. The further sale of long General Electric stock caused [illegible] to open at 43¼ against the final sale at 44, and in further weakness during the forenoon to 41⅞. Sugar Refining opened ½ off at [illegible] and subsequently sold to [illegible], while the preferred slumped from [illegible] to [illegible] on the opening and then rallied to [illegible]. Such railroad shares as were active likewise weakened, not so much under bear pressure as for lack of support. Atchison opened ⅛ down at [illegible]. Chicago, Burlington and Quincy steady at [illegible], but dropped to 79⅞, and Union Pacific 1 off to [illegible]. New England declined ½ to [illegible].

MISTAKES OF HISTORIANS.

Mucius Scaevola never put his hand in the fire. The story is a fabrication of a Roman historian hundreds of years after the supposed time.

Augustus was not the public benefactor he is represented. He was the most exacting tax collector the Roman world had up to his time ever seen.

There is no reason to believe that Tarquin insulted Lucretia. His power was overthrown in a popular tumult, which is the only basis for the story.

Columbus did not foretell an eclipse of the moon to frighten the natives of Jamaica into rendering him assistance. There was no eclipse of the moon at that time.

Alexander the Great did not weep for other worlds to conquer. There is reason to suspect that his army met with a serious reverse in India, a fact that induced him to retrace his steps.

Philip VI, after his defeat at Crecy, when he applied for shelter at the castle of Blois, did not respond to the sentinel "It is the fortune of France," but "It is I, the unfortunate king of France."

The immense burning glasses with which Archimedes burned the ships of the besiegers of Syracuse at 10 miles distance were never manufactured, and it is now known that they could not be.

Columbus did not make an egg stand on end to confuse his opponents. The feat was performed by Brunelleschi, the architect, to silence critics who asked him how he was going to support the dome of the cathedral of Florence.

The existence of the Colossus of Rhodes is considered by some historians as extremely doubtful. There is no evidence that the ancients were able to cast pieces of metal of such size as must have entered into its composition.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

BEHIND THE FOOTLIGHTS.

Violet Mascotte will head a company in a burlesque of "Sinbad the Sailor."

Augustus Balfour, late with James O'Neill, joins "A Fair Rebel" to play the leading heavy role.

It is said that Lillian Russell's agreement with Canary and Lederer calls for a weekly salary of $700 and half the profits.

Annie Russell Presbrey will join her husband in New York the latter part of October. She is now at Boothbay Harbor, Me.

It is announced that the new Drury Lane drama by Sir Augustus Harris and [illegible] Pettitt will bear the title, "A Life of Pleasure."

William Lloyd Bowron, leader of the orchestra of the Fourteenth Street theater, New York, is the oldest member of the Order of Elks.

Richard Henry has written a play called "Our Silver Honeymoon," which is to be produced in conjunction with "Don Juan" at the Gaiety theater, London.

William Morris has secured the play in which he will star next season. Whether or not it is a success, he will change the programme from time to time.

Hattie Harvey has a promising part in "Charlie's Aunt." She will star next season in all probability in the new play written for her by Fitzgerald Murphy.

"Carados" of the London Referee says it it is reported that William Terris has been approached by Augustin Daly with regard to a starring tour with Ada Rehan.

In addition to the charge of having derived his inspiration from Augier's "Le Mariage d'Olympe" in the writing of "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray," Mr. Pinero is accused of borrowing without credit from a German source.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

Place a ring of platinum around the lamp in a room where much smoking is going on.

The covers of lard pails may be utilized for placing under pots and saucepans when the stove is too hot.

There is no better paste for making scrapbooks than boiled starch. Flour and water is also a good paste when mucilage is not at hand.

Ice should never be simply laid in the refrigerator unless the ice is to be used in drinking water. In all other cases it should be wrapped in a piece of flannel, carpet or newspaper.

When buying wall paper, avoid getting the figure too small, and thus destroying the "character" of your room. Those experienced in decoration are very prompt to give the go by to a "weak" looking paper.

To keep black stockings from assuming a greenish look wash with soap that is free of soda and add a teaspoonful of vinegar to the rinsing water. Wring them out and clap them into shape, but do not iron, as the heat tends to destroy the color.

THE USES OF HAIRPINS.

There's nothing like them for untying [illegible]

For corkscrews, paper cutters and glove or shoe buttoners they are invaluable.

They will pin hats and veils as well as hair and are invaluable to mend wrecked garments temporarily.

A hairpin is excellent for opening letters, digging dimes out of a street car bottom or jabbing offending cockroaches.

With a hairpin straightened out and one end bent into a hook you can pick a trunk lock or fish a wedding ring out of the waste pipe of a washbowl.

One end of a straightened hairpin jabbed into a candle and the other end into the window sill makes a very fair candlestick in continental hotels where they charge extra for "bougies."

If women could only teach men the use of hairpins and men could teach women the necessity of pockets, the gray dawn of the millennium would begin to tinge the waiting east.—New York Recorder.

Norwich, Wednesday, September 27 1893.

The Bulletin should be delivered everywhere in the city before Six a. m.

Subscribers who fail to receive it by that time will confer a favor by reporting the fact to the Bulletin Co.

The Norwich Weekly Courier is the best weekly newspaper in New England at 50c a year.

The Weather Today.

Indications for Connecticut: Generally fair, preceded by showers tonight or early Wednesday morning on the coast; slightly warmer.

NORWICH AND VICINITY.

CITY NEWS.

The balloon ascension, Martha Wilkes and dog Bonaparte are three attractions which will draw crowds to the fair this afternoon.

The Otis library subscription list has swelled to $,149.

Mr. James Wheeler of Niantic spent yesterday in town.

Mrs. Sanford Stoddard has returned from a visit to Boston.

The city banks will close their doors at 1 o'clock today, that employes may take in the fair.

Town Clerk Freeman registered eleven women yesterday, increasing the total to seventy-three.

Town officers will be nominated at the republican caucus to be held in the Town hall at 8 o'clock this evening.

Trotting dog Bonaparte astonished the spectators at the fair yesterday. He will be exhibited today in his [illegible] suity.

At 8 o'clock tonight in the Assembly hall of Broadway theater the board of trade will hold their regular monthly meeting.

John Flynn of Ballouville was locked up in the station house Tuesday, charged with [illegible]. He will be tried before Judge King of Preston this morning.

Mr. Daniel Holland has finished his work on the Laurel Hill extension of the electric road. Although he consumed one hundred pounds of dynamite, the residents have suffered no inconvenience.

Mr. James G. Maples of Preston has raised two unusually long snake beans on his Preston farm. One is twenty nine and the other thirty-six inches in length. They are interesting specimens.

Martha Wilkes, with a record of 2 08, will do an exhibition mile at the fair this afternoon. The horsemen will be out in numbers.

Sheriff Hawkins of New London was in Hartford yesterday. He will apply to Governor Morris for requisition papers to bring Simon Dunbar, who is now in custody in New York state, to Connecticut.

A regular tramp rendezvous exists beside the railroad between Westerly and Stonington. An old shirt is pinned on the bank wall adjoining, upon which is a placard reading as follows: "This is all that remains of Mr. Geer, who was always on the [illegible]." Another announcement reads: "All that is left of Mr. Geer is in this square hole." These statements and characters are, probably, in the tramp's dialect and well understood by the fraternity. The place is a regular hunting ground of tramps, and several are often congregated there.

The weather promises to be auspicious for the balloon ascension at the fair this afternoon. It will be an interesting aerial spectacle.

City Court—Holloway, Judge.

Francis O'Donnell of Greeneville was sent to jail for sixty days and ordered to pay $2.30 costs for breach of the peace, in the city court Tuesday morning.

James Chester was accused of abuse toward his wife. Judgment was suspended for sixty days.

The Regimental Shoot.

The Third regimental shoot was held at Hatchaug range in New London Tuesday. Co. I of New London won the regimental trophy, taking 401 points. Co. C of this city made 389 points.

Lieutenant John Hagberg of this city won the first individual prize, making twenty-three targets out of a possible twenty five at two hundred yards.

"A SOCIETY FREAK."

A Comedy Repeated With Every Manifestation of Pleasure.

Again last night did this highly interesting sensational comedy attract and please a goodly audience at the Broadway opera house. Again did each individual member of the company distinguish him or herself by a creditable interpretation of the different characters. Special credit is due to Harry Allen, Frank LeRandu, Percy Oblats, George W. Woods, Fred Raymond, Elsie Gladys and Ned Gilbert. The specialties introduced during the picnic in the woods, carried the house by storm and were recalled again and again. That one feature of the performance is well worth traveling a great distance to enjoy. Tonight the beautiful and picturesque comedy drama, "A Western Girl" will be presented, and in the hands of so capable a company will undoubtedly receive a careful interpretation. Special scenery will be introduced and a number of excellent specialties will assure all of an enjoyable evening.

PLEASED ITS PATRONS

"The Golden Wedding" Well Received at the Broadway Theater.

"The Golden Wedding" entertained a good-sized house in the Broadway theater Tuesday evening. As announced in the bills it is a "patchwork of nonsense and melody," but its humorous qualities are sterling, and the audience is kept so busy laughing that nobody cavils at the loose ends and inconsequent scraps of farce comedy which have a trick of appearing without any particular law of rhyme or reason. The company, which is headed by Dan Daly, includes Robert Evans, Walter Vanderlip, Chas. Burke, D. L. Dow, Grace Vaughn, and a generally pleasing aggregation.

Elsie Adair's butterfly, rainbow and kaleidoscope dances were received with repeated evidences of admiration and delight, and she was recalled again and again. The same was true in her burlesque rehearsal with Walter Vanderlip.

The company is elaborately costumed, and nothing is lacking to make its special line successful.

To Celebrate Their Twenty-fifth Anniversary.

Norwich lodge, No. 12, A. O. U. W., has voted to celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of the institution of the order, which occurs on Thursday, October 26. The exercises will be held in the Broadway theatre on the evening of that date, and William C. Richardson of St. Louis, the supreme medical examiner, will deliver an address.

STATE TEACHERS.

Annual Convention to Be Held in New Britain Next Month.

The forty-seventh annual convention of the Connecticut State Teachers' association will be held at New Britain Friday, October 20. The opening exercises will be held in the Methodist church in that city, beginning at 9 15 a. m. An address will be delivered by James McAllister of Philadelphia, who will discuss "The Real and the Ideal in Education."

After Dr. McAllister's address the convention will adjourn to the State Normal school, where all the model schools will be found in session, thus affording an opportunity to see in actual use the most modern and improved methods of instruction.

The afternoon session will be held in four sections, under the following leaders: Principal F. A. Bagnall, Stafford Springs, and Miss Helen C. Page, Willimantic, primary; Principal Charles A. Tucker, Norwalk, intermediate; Superintendent E. H. Forbes, Torrington, grammar; Principal F. H. Beede, Willimantic, High school.

Principal Beede of the Willimantic high school has been appointed a member of the board of school visitors in place of Professor A. B. Morrill, who has gone to New Haven. Superintendent Forbes of Torrington, who will have charge of the grammar department, was formerly principal of the west middle school in this city.

The speakers engaged for the convention include Principal Morrill of the New Haven Normal school, Mr. Phenix and Miss Adams of the Willimantic Normal school, and Miss Waters of Springfield, Mass.

The business meeting, election of officers, etc., will be held at 4 30 p. m., closing in season for teachers to take the evening trains from New Britain.

The present officers of the association are Messrs. Joseph R. French, New Haven, president; F. A. Brackett, Hartford, secretary; James F. Williams, Bristol, treasurer.

CANTERBURY.

A Satisfactory Ending of a Suit—Women Register.

The law case of Canterbury against ex-Selectmen Elderkin Waldo and Oscar Tuck for a malfeasance in office by which the town suffered loss and inconvenience was tried in Putnam in the superior court last week and occupied three and one half days' time. Lawyers Searles and Hunter appeared for the town and Wm. Jennings of Norwich for the defendants.

The case reached the jury Friday morning, and after a short deliberation they returned a verdict that the town recover $950 and their cost. The result as a whole is quite satisfactory to the taxpayers, though some think the damage should have been at least $600.

Seven women of this town have registered their names as electors, and will make their power visible in dictating school matters in the future.

Mr. Elliot Allen has been quite sick the past week, but is on the gain now.

Mr. Leyman N. Apply is out of town for a few weeks' visit among friends.

The largest fish known to science is the basking shark, an enormous but harmless variety.

Letter from the President to Governor Northen of Georgia.

A SAFE CURRENCY WANTED.

Astonished at the Opposition Manifested in the Senate.

ATLANTA, Ga., Sept. 27.—The Atlanta Constitution prints a letter from President Cleveland to Governor Northen, in reply to one written by Governor Northen on the 15th of September. The governor refuses to make his letter public, but it is known that it presented a graphic account of the political situation in Georgia and the south, and urged upon the president the expediency of a public utterance from him more comprehensive than his recent message, as to the proper policy to be pursued by congress relative to the stringency of the times and the needs of the people. It is evident that Governor Northen pointed out inroads being made on the democratic ranks by the populists by reason of the delay of the democratic majority in congress legislating on the line of the party platform and pledges. He dwelt especially upon the financial condition and political unrest of the farmers of the south, who constituted so great a proportion of the democracy.

The president's reply which was received this evening was as follows:

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 25.

The Hon. W. J. Northen:

My Dear Sir—I hardly know how to reply to your letter of the 15th instant. It seems to me that I am quite plainly on record concerning the financial question. My letter accepting the nomination to the presidency, when read in connection with the message lately sent to the congress in extraordinary session, appears to me to be very explicit. I want a currency that is stable and safe in the hands of our people. I will not knowingly be implicated in a condition that will justly make me in the least degree answerable to any laborer or farmer in the United States for a shrinkage in the purchasing power of the dollar he has received for a full dollar's worth of work, or for a good dollar's worth of the product of his toil. I only want our currency to be of such a character that all kinds of dollars will be equal in purchasing power at home, but I want it to be of such a character as will demonstrate abroad our wisdom and good faith, thus placing us upon a firm foundation and credit among the nations of the earth. I want our financial conditions and the laws relating to our currency safe and reassuring, so that those who have money will spend and invest it in new enterprises instead of hoarding it. You cannot cure fright by calling it foolish and unreasonable and you cannot prevent the frightened man from hoarding his money. I want good, sound and stable money and a condition of confidence that will keep it in use.

Within the limits of what I have written, I am a friend of silver, but I believe its proper place in our currency can only be fixed by a readjustment of our currency by legislation and the inauguration of a comprehensive financial scheme. I think such a thing can only be entered upon profitably and hopefully after the repeal of the law which is charged with all our financial woes. In the present state of the public mind, this law cannot be built upon or patched in such a way as to relieve the situation.

I am therefore opposed to the free and unlimited coinage of silver by this country, alone and independently, and I am in favor of the unconditional repeal of the purchasing clause of the Sherman silver law. I confess I am astonished by the opposition in the senate to such prompt action as would relieve the present unfortunate situation. My daily prayer is that the delay occasioned by such opposition may not be the cause of plunging the country into deeper depression than it has yet known, and the democratic party may not be justly held responsible for such a catastrophe. Yours very truly,

GROVER CLEVELAND.

KNOWS VAN ALEN WELL.

Secretary of the Navy Whitney Speaks for the Appointee.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—A letter from Secretary of the Navy W. C. Whitney to President Cleveland, dated today and bearing on the stories now in circulation in the public press, by which it is claimed Van Alen of Rhode Island bought the appointment of United States ambassador to Rome, was made public this morning.

In concluding his letter Secretary Whitney says:

I now break the silence I have heretofore maintained since the inauguration to say that I know Mr. Van Alen well, and that he is in my judgment in every way adapted to the position which he seeks, and that I sincerely hope that the malicious stories which have found their way into print will not affect him adversely.

There is no obligation upon you to appoint him to any office, but there is the additional reason for appointing him, that is the result of a very patriotic, generous and cordial support of the party in the late campaign, when friends were few and calls were great, he has been accused of dishonorable bargaining.

This, as you know, is the first time you have been approached by me on the subject of appointments. Very sincerely yours,

W. C. WHITNEY.

PENNSYLVANIA REPUBLICANS.

Clubs of the State League in Convention—Resolutions Adopted.

Muhlenburg of this city delivered a rousing address of welcome, in which he eulogized the protective principles of the republican party under which the country has grown strong and powerful and developed by the party's great leaders.

After the appointment of committees a recess was taken, and upon reassembling, resolutions were adopted reaffirming steadfast devotion to the principles of the republican party, protection and reciprocity, honest money and honest ballot; congratulating the republicans of the country upon the fact that once again the republicans of congress, although in a minority, saved the day for honest money; asserting that the democratic party is responsible for the closed factories, the broken banks, loss of confidence, and financial ills through which the nation is passing; affirming that the belief that the democratic party will strike down the industries of the country paralyzes trade; declaring that the endeavor of the democrats in congress, at this time, to repeal all laws preserving the sanctity of the ballot, is unpatriotic, un-American and a stab in the back of free institutions; and promising that Pennsylvania's loyal republican voters will prevent at the polls any attempt to tarnish the honor or quality of the reward due the patriotism of the soldiers of the late war.

AT THE BOTTOM OF SHAW'S COVE.

Consolidated Road Engine Plunges Through a Trestle.

THREE MEN IN THE CAB.

Badly Bruised and Cut in Their Efforts to Escape.

NEW LONDON, Sept. 27.—One of the Consolidated road's heavy freight engines tonight lies wrecked at the bottom of Shaw's cove in this city, and there are three men who tell the story of their wonderful escape from death.

At 9 o'clock this afternoon Engineer Fitch with Fireman Guile and Brakeman Carpett started for New Haven with engine 93, light. Approaching Shaw's cove bridge the engineer failed to notice that the derailing switch was set against him. The track is laid on trestles across the cove and the derailing switch is placed at the edge of the land foundation on a curve. The engine was travelling at a high rate of speed, tore the ties for twenty feet, and then, with a wild plunge, went into the cove. It carried with it a wide foot bridge that ran along the track. The three men were in the cab and had no time to jump, but made a scramble for the side of the cab farthest from the water. The engine landed on its side deep in the mud, with the tender half over the cab. The three men were badly bruised and cut in their efforts to escape. By climbing to the top of the tender they were enabled to reach the piles and then the bridge. The damage will be unknown till an examination of the engine and tender are made.

CHOLERA STRICKEN.

An Italian Emigrant Steamer Refused a Landing.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—Captain Black, of the steamer Hogarth, which arrived this morning from Santos, brings a distressing story. The captain states that while at Santos, Sept. 2, he was informed that the Italian steamer Vlasmo Flora, from Genoa Aug. 24, for Rio Janeiro, loaded with immigrants, and which had been refused admission to the ports of Brazil, owing to cholera aboard, had for some days been lying outside the harbor in a helpless condition. The deaths on board the plague stricken steamer were reported to be from 20 to 30 daily, and the bodies of the unfortunate victims, together with their clothing and bedding, were thrown overboard and washed ashore near Santos to the great consternation of the inhabitants in that vicinity. It was supposed that the steamer was without medical assistance or supplies, and had insufficient provisions or coal to proceed farther. The steamer had previously been refused permission to land at Rio Janeiro, the port to which she was bound, and at the island of Ilha Grande, 60 miles southwest of Rio, she had been not only refused permission to land, but had been ordered to put to sea without delay. The steamer then proceeded to Santos, where she was also refused permission to enter the port.

SPANISH STEAMER BURNED.

Terrible Fate of 150 Chinamen—Sharks and Flames.

LONDON, Sept. 27.—Particulars of the burning of the Spanish steamer Don Juan, off the coast of Manilla a fortnight ago, have just reached the consignees in the official report.

The vessel had on board nearly 300 Chinese passengers, while the cargo included 1,000 cases of kerosene. These became ignited, and the flames spread with terrible rapidity.

Hundreds of sharks, attracted by the light, made for the steamer, and numbers of the Mongolians, crazed by the heat, jumped into the water, only to be caught by the hungry man eaters and torn limb from limb. In several cases half a dozen sharks fought for a single body.

The only lifeboat that could be saved from the flames was lowed with thirty Chinamen, but it had hardly touched the water when it was overturned by the sharks.

Only the opportune appearance of the steamer San Antonio saved the officers and crew from a similar fate.

The total loss of life exceeded 150.

Worcester Music Festival.

WORCESTER, Mass., Sept. 27.—At the second festival concert today, the Boston Symphony orchestra played finely, Schumann's C major symphony Raff suite for strings and Goldmark's spring overture. Alwin Schroeder gave a splendid exhibition of cello playing in Davidoff's concerto. Miss Caroline Gardner Clark, the young soprano made another hit this time in songs by Schubert and Schumann and the Elijah aria "Hear ye Israel."

W. A. Rowland of the Bostonians delighted his fellow townsmen in "The Two Grenadiers." This evening the audience was electrified by a superb performance of Saint Saen's "Sampson and Delilah." Mechanics' hall was crowded at each performance today by enthusiastic audiences. Tomorrow afternoon the programme includes Beethoven's eighth symphony, Jules Jordan's dramatic scene "Jael" (first time), Nordica soloist and Jordan conductor, two contralto airs by Rosa Linde; Chopin's F minor piano concerto and several small pieces will be played by de Pachmann. In the evening Dr. Dvorak will conduct his 149th psalm and Hussite overture. The soloists will be Emil Fischer, Caroline Westberg, Katharine Fisk, W. H. Rieger, Raphael Diaz and Albertini, the Cuban violinist.

STATE BOARD OF CHARITIES.

Important Meeting—Mrs. Smith's Retention in Power Not Approved.

HARTFORD, Conn., Sept. 27.—The state board of charities held an important meeting at the capitol, this afternoon, all the members being present except Dr. Tracy.

The control and direction of the county homes, especially the one in this county, now located at Warehouse Point, constituted a subject of discussion and inquiry at the session of the charities' board this afternoon. Miss Hall has visited the home at Warehouse Point officially and was informed there by the matron, Mrs. Pitkin, that her instructions were to bring children to Hartford to Mrs. Virginia T. Smith, as was done prior to Mrs. Smith's retirement from the state board of charities. It is stated that Mrs. Smith has been appointed a regular visitor of the home by the county commissioners, who constitute the majority of the board of managers. Miss Hall has endeavored to discover the records in the case, but has not yet succeeded. The facts were reported at the meeting this afternoon.

One of the delinquencies at the home is the lack of discipline. The idea of sending criminal children to the county homes is not favorably regarded by the board. Miss Hall feels that it would be far preferable that such children should be sent to the reform schools.

There is serious objection in the board to the practice continued by Mrs. Smith, under the apparent approval of the county commissioners, of binding out the children. It is for this purpose, and the placing of them in homes by Mrs. Smith, that they are brought here by Mrs. Pitkin.

In Tolland county, where Mr. Whittlesey is the representative of the state charities board in the management of the county home, an attempt was made to have Mrs. Smith constituted an honorary member of the board. This course was objected to by Secretary Whittlesey, and failed of being carried out.

The reports of the board committees relative to the visits in different state institutions were submitted at the meeting. These reports included an account of the visit to the town house in Danbury. The county home discussion was the most important, however, and it is not unlikely that the governor may be requested to intervene officially in adjusting the difficulties that have arisen. It is doubted whether the county commissioners, acting alone, have the right to authorize Mrs. Smith to dispose of children from the home.

WOMEN IN POLITICS.

Took Part in Danbury Caucuses and Got What They Demanded.

DANBURY, Sept. 27.—The two big parties held their caucuses last night to nominate town officers. About forty women were in attendance at the republican convention and took an active part in the nomination of candidates for the school committee. They succeeded in placing a candidate on the republican ticket in the person of Miss Emily C. Hawley.

After the school committee were nominated the women left the hall and went downstairs. Then they sent in to the democratic caucus a committee to look after their interests there. The committee was cordially received, and before they left a woman was nominated on the democratic ticket. As a result there will be a woman on the school committee for the ensuing year. The coup d'etat is the cause of much amusement.

TIDINGS OF THE ALVO.

One of Her Lifeboats Picked Up Empty at Sea.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—News has at last been obtained of the missing Atlas line steamship Alvo. One of her lifeboats was picked up at sea, empty, by a passing steamer and taken to Montego bay, Jamaica. This is the first definite tidings received of the Alvo since the day, now nearly six weeks ago, when she steamed out of New York harbor, loaded with merchandise and bearing forty-eight persons. When she passed Sandy Hook that day she disappeared as if swallowed up. So far as is known, not a single human eye ever beheld her again.

The goods were roughly estimated to be worth $650,000 and were sold by order of Clarence Whitman & Co., for the account of Wilkesbarre Lace Manufacturing Co. Mr. Whitman said the sale was made necessary by the financial situation. Buyers were active and the prices were about 65 or 70 per cent. of the regular market figures.

TRAGEDY IN CHICAGO GRAIN PIT.

A Crazy Tramp in Gallery of Board of Trade

SHOOTS INTO THE CROWD.

Several Traders Hit—Insurance President Bennet Shot in the Neck.

CHICAGO, Sept. 27.—A tramp in the gallery of the board of trade at 11.40 this morning fired a number of shots down into the crowd surrounding the grain pits. Several of the traders were hit.

Ammi C. Bennet, president of an insurance company, was shot in the neck and probably killed.

The man who did the shooting refused for a time to give any name except "Chicago." Subsequently he gave the name of Charles Belden. Belden when taken to the police station made the following statement:

"I am a carriage painter and live at 135 LaSalle avenue. I've been under hypnotic influences for three years, but it is only lately that I have reached the exalted state. I was in the vulgar state for a long time. I have visited the Bolt quite frequently. It has been a struggle for bread with all of us, but when they began to sell my soul in the board of trade today, I resisted. Before they sold my soul they sold my two children, who are in Philadelphia. I saw these children sold in the board of trade once before and I could not bear to see it done. Now I figure it out that when a man is in bondage he has a right to help himself out if he can. I have a grievance. It is a struggle for bread. I see they sent me to Kankakee. That was several years ago. The asylum did me no good, but I have thought lately I would like to go to some asylum again. I went to the board of trade today because I thought they would put up my soul for sale. I bought a revolver on Clark street. I have a wife in Philadelphia and two children, but the latter have been sold in the board of trade. I belong to an invisible society, which demands $1 per week as a membership fee. How could I pay my fee with nothing to do so, and my soul being sold at the board of trade? The Bible and the laws of hypnotism say it is not right."

He is a stout, middle-aged man, poorly dressed, and is undoubtedly a lunatic. After his talk he was locked in a cell.

The Cholera.

NORWICH AND VICINITY.

WEDNESDAY DIDN'T COUNT.

The New London County Fair Postponed a Day—The Cattle Exhibit and Display in Agricultural Hall.

Nature was not in sympathy with the New London County Agricultural society Wednesday and dripping skies forced a postponement of the entire day's proceedings. This action had been anticipated by the rural communities, as was shown by the absence of disappointed spectators.

Wednesday's programme will be enacted in toto, including the balloon ascension, Martha Wilkes' speed exhibition, dog [illegible] famous trotting and fleet horse racing with displays of live stock, the feathered tribe, merchandise, fruits vegetables and fancy work sufficient to allure any one to the grounds.

The premises were sprinkled with knots of interested observers and deluded victims Wednesday wherever the game-proprietors held forth. The cattle stalls were centers of much attraction, and agricultural hall was filled most of the afternoon. The track was logy and black, but many of the trotters showed themselves for a few minutes' speeding.

The exhibits were as follows:

In Agricultural Hall.

At the left of the west entrance Mr. C. H. Trafton makes a meritorious display of Rembrandt portraits, the next exhibit being devoted to domestic manufactures and fancy goods, fine arts, etc. In the last department Mrs. Marshall Jewett has a handsome silk quilt and other products of her needle, Mrs. L. H. Platt of New London a fine screen, Miss Helen R. Buckingham handsome china, Miss Maud Buckingham elegantly embroidered table linen, Miss Nellie M. In the domain of fine arts Miss Nellie M. Wheeler, Gertrude E. Adams, a talented miss of 14, G. A. Grant, Mazie Moloney and Margaret Murphy have provided a varied and meritorious collection of oil paintings, flower pieces, plaques and panels.

Mrs. E. Curtis makes a showy and interesting exhibit of millinery, fancy pins, hair goods and patterns. Mr. S. H. Hall displays three handsome upright Shoninger pianos, and two organs in an enclosure surrounded by the national flag. On these Mr. F. C. Wight of New London plays at intervals for the pleasure of the crowd, while Mr. W. J. Day explains the merits of the instruments. The Prentice Furniture company exhibit the latest in handsome furnishings for a parlor or library. The rest of this space is devoted to a display of eleven handsome carriages and sleighs in charge of Mr. Joseph I. Lavoie of this city. Stock Exhibit.

The exhibit of stock this year is less than last, but for quality it is doubtful if the show was ever better. The first herd that catches the eye is the Holstein-Friesians of Lloyd P. Ayer of North Franklin, pretty creatures, in pure blood and grades. He also shows a few Jerseys, Swiss grades, etc. Mr. A. F. Reade of Jewett City exhibits a herd of Jerseys, with bull, that are fine specimens of this popular breed. The calves are as handsome as gazelles. Mr. James B. Palmer of Lisbon is there with his celebrated Guernsey herds, with pure-blooded bulls at their head. "Lord Lyman," the leader of them all, is the grandest creature of his race in this section of the country, and always carries off the prize. His hair is so short and fine that the managers of the New England fair required Mr. Palmer to take an oath that the animal had not been clipped. Mr. James A. Bill of Lyme is there with his pure blooded and grade Devons and Durhams in large herds, with fine bulls at their head. His stock is beautiful in color and ranks to A in all points of merit, carrying off many first premiums. Charles B. Chapman of Preston shows a fine herd of Durhams. Latham Hull of North Stonington, Russell N. Brown of Griswold and John R. Miner of Stonington and James B. Palmer show Jerseys. N. W. Wheeler of Norwich shows the only Swiss graded stock, and makes a good exhibit of Devons and Ayrshires. Egbert Storer of Norwich shows fine herds of Durhams and Ayrshires. Fred S. Fosdick of North Lyme makes a large show of Devons and Durhams. There is a splendid display of cattle and steers.

Sheep.

The show of sheep is about as usual representing the Cashmere, Shropshiredowns, Hampshiredowns, Southdowns, and other varieties. The exhibitors are James A. Bill of Lyme, Fred S. Fosdick of North Lyme, Williams and Lord of Stonington, Isaac G. Avery of Bozrahville, James B. Palmer of Lisbon, Isaac Williams of Stonington and John H. Manwaring of Montville.

Swine.

The show of swine is small. It comprises Chester whites, Poland, Cheshire, and Ohio improved. The exhibitors are J. Ely Beebe of North Lyme, N. W. Wheeler of Norwich, A. F. Reade of Jewett City, James B. Palmer of Griswold, Russell M. Brown of Griswold and C. S. Briggs of Lebanon.

Poultry.

There is a small exhibit of poultry. Richard P. Kessbey of New London exhibits black-breasted game bantams, white call ducks, brown Chinese geese and white fantail pigeons; L. F. Main of North Stonington geese, chicks and ducks; C. H. Norcross of Moosup Plymouth Rocks, and chicks, Houdan, Buff Cochins; and G. W. Rogers of Norwich white Plymouth Rocks.

Will Save the Foot.

Friends of Mr. William S. Cosgrove will learn with pleasure that it is the judgment of the best Chicago physicians that the entire foot will be saved. It is cheering intelligence, following the news of his sad accident.

Corner Stone to Be Laid.

The corner stone of the new Catholic church of Fitchville will be blessed and placed in position by the Rev. James Hughes of Hartford next Sunday at 3.30 p. m. The sermon on the occasion will be preached by the Rev. M. O'Sullivan of St. John's church, New Haven, formerly of Colchester. A large number of clergymen of this diocese will be present. This will be an occasion of rejoicing for the people of Fitchville who have laid the foundation of a church of their own and will enjoy the presence of friends from out of town to join them in their devotional exercises in connection with it.

Picnicked at Lantern Hill.

The Lantern Hill correspondent of The Westerly Sun writes: "A company of picnickers, numbering fifty-nine, from North Stonington and the adjoining towns of Preston, Norwich and Waterford, recently met at Lantern Hill, and enjoyed a day of rest and recreation. Each party came without any knowledge of the other's intent. Among those present was ex Superintendent James Brand of Norwich, and several students of the Free academy, and jolly Captain Burrows of Groton, whose voice echoed through the valleys and over the hills.

THE W. W. BACKUS HOSPITAL.

To Be Dedicated Oct. 4 and Opened for Public Inspection Oct. 5.

The W. W. Backus hospital will be dedicated next week, Wednesday, at 2.30 o'clock p. m. The invitations to the opening will be confined to the corporators, their families and friends, and to a limited number of invited guests, on account of limited room. The full programme of exercises has not yet been announced, but Dr. Lusk of New York, a native of Norwich, will make the dedicatory address.

The following day, Thursday, the institution will be thrown open for public inspection, and everybody in Norwich who feels interested enough to visit the hospital will have an opportunity to go through all the buildings.

The Norwich Weekly Courier is the best weekly newspaper in New England at 50c a year.

LISBON.

[illegible]

whose death was noticed in THE BULLETIN had spent the whole of his life, sixty-seven years in Lisbon. He was a member of the Congregational church over fifty years and one of its deacons for several years past. He was often called to fill places of trust in town, county and state, and was highly respected by all for his fidelity in performing all the duties thus laid upon him. Young and old, of all classes, found a warm place in his heart. His genial presence will be greatly missed in his family, in the church and in the neighborhood. The large company that gathered at his funeral, expressed their regard for his memory and their sympathy for his family.

The exercises, which were of an instructive and interesting nature, were conducted by Charles D. Hine, secretary of the state board of education, assisted by Mr. M. A. Warren of Collinsville, Miss Ella E. Carlisle of Norwich, and Mr. Charles B. Jennings of New London.

Rev. C. Grant Savage is very sick with typhoid fever.

RICH BUT UNHAPPY.

John H. Conrad Asks for Divorce from His Wife.

SAD SEQUEL TO THE GRAVES CASE.

Handsome Wife the Daughter of Late Widow Barnaby.

HELENA, Mont., Sept. 27.—John Howard Conrad, one of the wealthiest and most prominent men in this state, filed a suit yesterday for divorce from Mabel Barnaby Conrad. The latter is a daughter of the late Mrs. Josephine Barnaby of Providence. Mr. Conrad was prominently identified with the prosecution of Dr. Graves. Conrad comes of a prominent Virginia family, and has spent much of his life in Montana.

Mrs. Conrad is a handsome brunette, whose stylish turnouts always attract attention on the streets of Helena. Three correspondents are named in the complaint.

One is William S. Hopkins, the millionaire lumberman of St. Claire Springs, Mich., with whom Mrs. Conrad is alleged to have held improper relations in the autumn of 1893, at the Conrad residence.

Then in Chicago at the Richelieu hotel in 1890, and again at the Auditorium in 1892. The second correspondent named is Richard Bishop of Denver. Mrs. Conrad's alleged offenses with him of the Conrads in Helena in June, 1892, and at Denver during the preceding December.

The third correspondent is Joseph A. Baker of Great Falls, who is married to Conrad's sister, and who has been his associate for many years. The complaint charges improper relations at the Helena residence while Mr. Conrad was away from home. It is also claimed that Baker and Mrs. Conrad went to New York together. From there they went to Florida, where they occupied a cottage together for some time.

Mr. Conrad asks for the custody of their children, two girls and a boy, and the court granted an injunction to prevent Mrs. Conrad taking them out of the state. Conrad is said to have had a scene with his wife and servants on Monday night, after which he went to a lawyer's and made out the complaint.

ALL JAILS FILLED.

Result of Argentine's Extreme Measures Toward the Radicals.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—The Herald's Valparaiso correspondent cables as follows: It is reported from Buenos Ayres that the Argentine government has issued a decree ordering the imprisonment of Admiral Solier. Dr. Alem was also ordered to be arrested, but he took refuge in the German legation and thus escaped prison.

All the jails are filled with the lesser lights of the Radical party, who have been arrested by order of the authorities. The states in the northern part of the republic are now in open revolt against Pena's government. The larger number of the federal troops have been sent to put down the revolution in Santa Fe and other states which have gone over.

Rosario, one of the chief commercial towns of Argentine, is now in the hands of the revolters. A division of Pellegrini's forces, which went to the aid of the revolters at Rafaela, is now marching to the city of Santa Fe.

THOUSANDS HOMELESS.

Details of the Damage Done by the Floods in Japan.

VANCOUVER, B. C., Sept. 27.—Advices received by the Canadian Pacific Railway company's steamship Empress of India, which arrived from Hong Kong and Yokohama, are as follows:

Reports of the damage done by the floods at Gifu, Japan, state that 323 houses were swept away, 14,025 houses were flooded, 123 people killed and 24,325 people rendered houseless.

The floods were the most disastrous ever experienced there, the water rising five feet above the highest mark.

Dysentery is so severe in Kokobe that the crews of the Japanese warships are not allowed ashore.

The much talked of scheme of the Cotton Spinners' association to establish a steamship line between Japan and Bombay has fallen through, owing to internal dissensions.

REIGN OF TERROR.

White Cap Outrages of Nightly Occurrence in Mississippi.

MEMPHIS, Sept. 27.—A special to The Commercial from Meridian, Miss., says the white cap insurrection in central Mississippi has assumed such formidable proportions that it will become an armed rebellion unless the organization is broken up speedily. A reign of terror prevails in nearly every county in that section, and outrages by the outlaws are of nightly occurrence.

Every gin has been posted with a warning to the owners not to start their plants until the price of cotton reaches 10 cents a pound. Two gins were burned in Smith county because the owners disregarded the warnings of the white caps.

THIEF ROBBED THIEF.

One Dishonest Employe Steals From Another and Both Are Caught.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—John F. Collins, charged by the firm of Reinhard, Seidenberg & Co., cotton brokers of 73 Cotton Exchange building, by whom he was employed as cashier, with stealing from them, was yesterday morning arraigned before Police Justice Martin in the Tombs police court. Ernest Jennings Greene, the bookkeeper, was arraigned the day before, and a hearing of his case was postponed until yesterday. It was then decided to have both hearings today. Greene got away with about $4000. Collins managed to steal about $10,000. The two men worked independent of each other.

They had a very neat scheme, and but for the clumsiness of Collins neither would have been discovered and might have been stealing still. As it is, both have confessed. They are locked up at police headquarters. Detectives Heidelberg and Nugent traced the thefts and arrested the two men, both of whom are young and had the confidence of their employers.

Greene is 28 years old and unmarried. He lives at 719 Lexington avenue, Brooklyn, where he passed as a Wall street broker. Collins is 24 years old and lived at Scotch Plains, N. J. He had been in the employ of the firm for 11 years and had been cashier for four years.

Greene spent the money on horses, women and wine. Collins bought a horse and diamonds. Greene found out that Collins was stealing about a year ago. Collins's scheme was to draw checks for customers who had until recently large deposits, and then forge the names. Greene found it out and posed as George Dixon, a customer of the firm, and would draw on the firm for money. As bookkeeper he made out the checks for Mr. Dixon.

By the use of acids he would erase the name of George Dixon and substitute the word bearer, or if he did not use the acid he could add bearer after the name. By a fluke the thefts, as has been said, were run down. Collins stole $600 in his old way, placed the money in an envelope in his own name and put the money in the safe. Greene found out about it, and that night, after Collins had left, went to the safe and took the $600 which the other thief had taken.

The next morning Collins missed his $600 and complained to his employers that it had been stolen. The firm consulted Inspector McLaughlin and the detectives were put to work and they ran down both thieves. In the meantime Greene had confessed to Collins that he had stolen his $600 and the two shook hands and fell on each other's necks. Both hope by confessing to get off easily.

SITUATION SERIOUS.

Labor Troubles on Louisville and Nashville Railroad Reach a Crisis.

LOUISVILLE, Sept. 28.—The labor situation on the Louisville and Nashville railroad is more serious today than it has been at any time since the strike of the shopmen against the reduction of 10 per cent in their wages. All the switchmen employed in the local yards of the road struck last night.

The affiliated orders of conductors, engineers, firemen, brakemen and switchmen held an animated union meeting last night, having been in session from early in the afternoon until midnight, considering the question of a general strike. The result of the meeting is not yet known.

The strike of the switchmen was claimed to be on account of a new rule requiring them to carry passes to be submitted to the deputy sheriff guarding the shops and grounds before they could enter. It is generally believed, however, to have been caused by sympathy with the striking shopmen.

Officers of the road say they are satisfied that a general strike will be avoided. The strikers have been active in endeavoring to prevent new men being introduced into the shops. Of 30 or 40 brought from Chicago Monday not one was at work yesterday. The strikers are on the alert, watching for a trainload of men said to be coming from the east.

The railroad company has erected a high board fence around its shops and yards and has a force of 180 guards sworn in as deputy sheriffs.

DEATH ON THE RAIL.

Special Car On the Grand Trunk Demolished With Deadly Results.

BELLEVUE, Mich., Sept. 27.—A bad accident occurred on the Chicago and Grand Trunk railroad at the station here at 3 o'clock this morning.

Express train 5, west bound, which was two hours late, was standing at the station when it was run into by the Erie express, also west bound, demolishing a special car attached to train 5. The special car contained Cashier Meredith of the Chicago and Grand Trunk road, and his wife, Henry A. Newland and wife, father and mother of Mrs. Meredith, W. Costles, porter, and William Abernathy.

Mr. and Mrs. Newland were killed outright, Mr. and Mrs. Meredith are badly injured, William Costles is fatally hurt, but William Abernathy escaped with slight injuries. The fireman of the Erie express, named Jennison, is badly scalded.

The Newland party left Detroit last night for a ten days' visit to the World's fair. Mr. Newland was the senior member of the firm of Henry Newland & Co., fur dealers of Detroit. Mrs. Newland was a daughter of Hon. James F. Joy.

SUCCESSFUL SUICIDE.

Ties a Heavy Weight to His Leg and Jumps Into the River.

NEWBURYPORT, Mass., Sept. 27.—George B. Hoyt, a fisherman about 50 years old, committed suicide last night by drowning. At daylight this morning his body was discovered by Stephen Warner, a clammer, who was going down the river.

"Butcher" Hoyt, as he was familiarly called, made certain that his effort at self-destruction should be a success, for attached to his leg was a piece of iron weighing at least 50 pounds, fastened so that slipping off was out of the question. He was last seen alive about 11 o'clock last night. Hoyt had recently returned from a fishing voyage. He was not married.

RUSSELL THE MAN.

John E. of Leicester Named for Governor.

NOMINATED BY ACCLAMATION.

Mayor Matthews of Boston Presents His Name.

BOSTON, Sept. 27.—The Democratic state convention was called to order in Music hall at 11:30 by Josiah Quincy, chairman of the state committee. The increased membership of the convention was made painfully apparent to those who sought to reach the rooms of the state committee in the Tremont House this morning.

The swarm which descended on the rooms of the state committee to exchange credentials for delegate tickets made such a rush that it was difficult for one to elbow his way through the throng in the Tremont House. At 10:35 the delegates began to move in the direction of Music hall, and soon filled the body of the hall and the first gallery.

At 11:30 sharp Mr. Quincy's head appeared through the door at the side of the platform. His appearance was the signal for a storm of applause. Five minutes later, when as chairman of the state committee he rose to call the convention to order, the applause was renewed. Nat Robinson made his first appearance in convention as secretary of the state committee. He was handsomely applauded when he rose to read the call.

The Committees Were Then Appointed.

Resolutions—At large: Hon. Nathan Matthews, Jr., Boston; Hon. George Fred Williams, Dedham; Osborne Howes, Jr., Brookline; Hon. William L. Douglas, Brockton; Henry C. Thacher, Yarmouth; Hon. John F. Fitzgerald, Boston; Brooks Adams, Quincy; Hon. Josiah Quincy, Quincy. From congressional districts—1, Hon. James S. Grinnell, Greenfield; 2, Charles J. Bellamy, Springfield; 3, James H. Mellen, Worcester; 4, Lewis A. Wright, Gardner; 5, Dennis A. Sullivan, Lowell; 6, Daniel J. O'Brien, Salem; 7, Timothy J. Keefe, Chelsea; 8, General Charles H. Taylor, Boston; 9, Hon. James Donovan, Boston; 10, Hon. Henry F. Naphen, Boston; 11, Hon. Patrick Maguire, Boston; 12, Albert P. Worthem, Weymouth; 13, Hon. John W. Cummings, Fall River.

Credentials—John H. Cunningham, Boston, chairman. Permanent organization—John [illegible] Nichols, Somerville, chairman. On balance of state ticket—John H. Crane, Springfield, chairman. On members at large of state committee—Robert M. Burnet, Southboro, chairman.

The committee on credentials reported that 292 towns and 30 cities were represented by 1,192 delegates.

The committee on permanent organization reported in favor of Hon. Joseph H. O'Neil for chairman and Nathaniel G. Robbins and David F. Buckley as secretary.

These officials came promptly to the desk, Chairman O'Neil being very heartily received as he came forward to deliver his pointed address.

At the conclusion of Mr. O'Neil's speech, which was warmly received, it was voted to proceed to nomination of candidates for governor and lieutenant governor.

Hon. Nathan Matthews, Jr., then came forward and said:

MR. CHAIRMAN AND GENTLEMEN OF THE CONVENTION—The Democratic party meets in convention today to perform what has become its annual duty, to nominate the next governor of the commonwealth. We meet after repeated successes in our state elections, which have shown the confidence of the people in the Democratic party of this state, its principles, its methods and its candidates. We meet after a national victory which recorded, with overwhelming emphasis, the intention of the people of this country to rid themselves of the burden imposed and retained by the Republican party, of taxes levied on consumption for the benefit of special interests and particular classes.

We meet at a time when the statesmen of both parties are engaged, under the leadership of a Democratic president, in an effort, soon to be successful, to correct the vicious monetary legislation of the last Republican administration, which has brought upon the country a financial panic and industrial disaster. Under these circumstances, we assemble to perform our highest party duty—to nominate a successor to the long line of statesmen who, from Sullivan to Russell, have illustrated the principles of Democracy as governors of Massachusetts. We meet as delegates from the Democratic people of this state, charged simply with the obligation to select our best and strongest man as the party leader in the coming contest.

This convention is free from factions. Its members are uninfluenced by personal rivalries or local jealousy. No manufactured "booms" cast their malignant shadow over our deliberations. We are engaged in no acrimonious and unseemly struggle to secure a candidate by "hustling."

We Have No "Machine"

except to register and make effective the free and deliberative judgment of the party. We leave those methods to the convention which is to meet in this hall next week. We are met together as the unpledged and uninstructed delegates of the Democracy of Massachusetts, to select a candidate for governor in 1893; and, we approach that task with confidence in the justice of our cause, in the propriety of our methods, and in the success of our candidate.

Several gentlemen have been suggested for the honor of this nomination; they could all be relied upon to make an able canvass; but it seems to me that one among them stands forth by reason of his abilities and distinguished party service more conspicuous than all the rest. He is a statesman of national reputation—one of the few men in the history of our country to achieve that prominence in a single term in congress. He possesses that charm so dear to Democratic audiences—the gift of brilliant oratory. He has the respect of the business man, the affection of the farmer and the confidence of the wage-earner. He is held, as we all know, in high regard by our great national leader, President Cleveland. He has the love and admiration of the people. He is, I think, the spontaneous and unanimous choice of the Democratic masses. He will have the active and enthusiastic support of every politician in the party. And I now have the honor, Mr. President, to move the nomination by acclamation of Hon. John E. Russell of Leicester.

When the applause which greeted the final sentence of the remarks of Mr. Matthews had subsided John F. Fitzgerald seconded the nomination in a brief speech, closing by saying: With all my heart I second the nomination of the biggest apple in our barrel, one of the noblest types of American citizenship, the genial, whole-souled farmer, orator and statesman, John E. Russell of Leicester.

Mayor Coughlin of Fall River also seconded the nomination and the convention, without a dissenting vote, ratified the motion and nomination.

On motion of George M. Stearns of Chicopee, seconded by S. D. Charles of Boston, James B. Carroll was then nominated as candidate for lieutenant governor.

The candidate for governor then came into the hall and amid a tumult of cheers was presented to the convention, making a speech of acceptance.

The committee on the balance of the state ticket reported the nominations which were adopted without opposition:

For secretary of the commonwealth—James W. McDonald of Marlboro.

For treasurer and receiver general—Elisha Stevens of Dudley.

For attorney general—Charles S. Lilley of Lowell.

For auditor—John T. Wheelwright of Boston.

The Platform.

The Democratic party of Massachusetts, in convention assembled, reaffirms its support of the national Democratic platform of 1892, and congratulates the country upon the restoration of the national government, in all its branches, to Democratic control.

The people have full confidence in President Cleveland and his administration. Republican control of the government has left behind it vicious laws and practices which the Democratic party has already attacked and is pledged to remedy.

We heartily support President Cleveland and Secretary Carlisle in their firm attitude in favor of the immediate and unconditional repeal of the purchase clause of the Sherman law, which was essentially a protection measure which has brought financial and industrial disaster upon the country.

We congratulate the house of representatives upon its speedy and emphatic action in response to the president's message, and we call upon the senate to follow the action of the house without undue delay or obstruction of the popular will. The Democratic party of Massachusetts, in its platform of 1890, called attention to the danger that a panic would result from Republican financial policy, and again in its platform of 1891 it denounced the Sherman law as "a menace to the maintenance of a sound and stable currency."

While we recognize that the repeal of this law is not a partisan question, and welcome the co-operation of men of all parties in securing it, we cannot ignore the fact that no Democratic votes were cast for the passage of this act, while it would not have become a law without the votes of the Republican members of congress from this state, the full responsibility for the disasters which have resulted from its enactment and operation must therefore rest upon the Republican party.

The experience of the last few months has demonstrated with great force the lack of elasticity in our present banking system, and its incapacity under existing laws to adjust itself to the demands of trade. We demand as the surest protection against the issue of fiat money by the government, that, either through the reorganization of the national bank system or the reestablishment of state banks of issue under such federal restrictions as will make their notes as good as those of the national banks, the people of all sections of the country be enabled to supply themselves with the banking facilities enjoyed by other civilized nations.

We renew the declarations of former platforms in favor of a just and liberal pension system, including within its scope all needy and deserving veterans; but we recognize that congress, and not the pension bureau, must define the conditions under which pensions are to be granted, and we commend the efforts of the present administration to make the operation of the pension system conform to the plain terms of congressional enactments and to purge the pension roll of fraud.

We congratulate the people upon the complete overthrow of the doctrine of McKinleyism and the election of a government pledged in all its branches to inaugurate a genuine reform of the tariff for the benefit of all classes of American citizens and we look forward with confidence to the early passage of a well considered bill which shall reduce the tariff to a revenue basis.

We demand the election of United States senators by direct popular vote.

We favor the strict enforcement of the national civil service law and its further application in the public service.

We denounce the hypocrisy of the Republican party of this state in supporting in the Democratic city of Boston a wholesale ordinance prohibiting city employes from undue political activity, and in defeating in the last legislature a similar measure applicable throughout the state.

We are proud of the record made by the Democratic governor of this state for the past three years, and we confidently claim that the public benefits which have resulted from administration by a Democratic chief magistrate demand its continuance. Governor Russell has discharged the duties of his high office with credit to himself and his party, and with honor to the commonwealth. The Democratic party, which he has so well led in the past expresses its hearty appreciation of the ability he has displayed in the service of the people.

We renew the demand of former Democratic platforms for responsible executive government in this commonwealth. The executive council should be abolished, and the power of confirmation should be vested in the senate. The governor should appoint all purely executive officers and have full power of removal, so that such officers and members of commissions may be under his control, in order that coherent administration of state affairs and responsibility to the people may take the place of our present checks and irresponsible system.

We call attention to the subserviency of the Republican senate of the last legislature to corporate influences, and particularly to its refusal to prohibit corporations enjoying special franchises from issuing, directly or indirectly watered stock or other representatives of value, for which an insufficient equivalent has been paid in.

We demand a more rigid enforcement of existing laws relating to the capitalization of corporations, the enactment of further laws against stock watering, and the passage of measures tending to secure to the community a full return, by taxation or otherwise, for all special privileges or franchises.

We again insist on the right of cities and towns to enjoy local self government without undue interference from the state.

Our public school system should be generously supported, and an effort made to extend that system by the establishment of schools for industrial and manual training.

We reaffirm our sympathy with all well directed efforts to improve the condition of labor, and we pledge the Democratic party to continued effort in this direction.

We favor the adoption in this commonwealth of some plan of referendum by which important acts of the legislature can be submitted to popular vote.

We favor the adoption in this state of substantial taxes upon legacies and successions, both direct and collateral, similar to those in force in the state of New York.

Upon the foregoing platform of principles we again confidently appeal for the support of the voters of Massachusetts.

STEWART'S TIRADE.

Likely to Prove a Boomerang for Silver's Cause.

OTHER LEADERS REPUDIATE IT.

Have No Personal Feeling Against the President.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—The speeches of Senators Stewart and Cameron are being much discussed in both houses of congress, and as well among the politicians of both parties now in Washington. The administration senators say that one or two more speeches on the same line as that of Senator Stewart's would tend largely to insure the passage of the pending bill. Even the silverites on both sides of the chamber question the propriety or wisdom of such an arraignment of the president. One of the results has been to embitter the controversy.

The silver senators on the Democratic side, who are desirous of the general success of President Cleveland's administration, are surprised at Senator Stewart's course, as he has forced them to repudiate his utterances, as there is no feeling against the president involved in their position against his silver policy. The construction which Senator Stewart has put upon the utterances of the president on different occasions during the past four or five months, in their judgment

Is Entirely Unwarranted.

The speech of Senator Cameron, the silver advocates claim, has strengthened their position, and but for the Stewart episode they would feel that they had accomplished an important advantage. Senator Stewart did not consult any of his colleagues. He said today that he was alone responsible for the opinions he had expressed. There is no disguising the fact that Senators Teller, Wolcott, Dubois and Jones are not pleased with Senator Stewart's uncalled for remarks, and they fear that it may lose them several votes on the Democratic side. Nothing is more certain than the repeal of the Sherman act and the doom of free coinage, if the tactics of the gentleman from Nevada prevail.

A hint has been thrown out that the free silver senators on the Democratic side in the senate have been in conference with some of the Republican leaders of that body in reference to the defeat of tariff legislation when it reaches the senate. The story has been in circulation here for several days, and its purpose has been for the defeat of silver repeal. There are some Republicans who are disposed to take stock in these assertions; but a prominent southern senator remarked today that he did "not believe that there was a Democratic senator in the south who would dare to be a party to such a bargain. A large majority of the senators from that section have always been extreme free traders, and all that restrains them now from forcing their views upon legislation is the growing industrial activity of that section, and the fear of adverse political effect at this time."

The practicability of such a combination is out of the question. It is not probable, however, that such an ultra measure as proposed by the committee on ways and means, and which will pass the house, will pass the senate. Unless the silver question is settled, there will be no tariff legislation considered or adopted in the senate. The president and members of the administration are aware of this, and are, therefore, exerting every effort to secure the passage of the silver repeal bill.

Alix's 2:07¾ at Chicago recently is the fastest heat ever trotted in a race. Alix looks like a future turf queen.

Doble thinks Nancy Hanks' 2:06 at Chicago augurs well for her beating her record when she is ready for the effort.

Cora, the dam of Gonzales McGregor, 2:16¼, was raised by the Sac and Fox Indians in the territory and was an ordinary Indian pony.

THE CRANK.

There are associations in Great Britain which insure against elopement, matrimony and twins.

Among the head hunters of Borneo a man is not permitted to offer marriage to a woman of his tribe until he brings her the head of a man killed by himself.

Orthodox Turks shave the head with the exception of a tuft on the crown, which is left to insure a tight grip to the angel of resurrection when he comes to pull them out of the grave on the day of judgment.

A Chinaman buys his coffin often many years before his death and keeps it in his house as a most valuable article of furniture. The most cherished present a son can make to his father is a handsome coffin.

About three centuries ago a wealthy old maid in London left a legacy to the pigeons. It consisted in a bushel of grain a day to be thrown from the steeple of St. Martin's. Every day at noon it is thrown out, and thousands of pigeons assemble to share the old maid's bounty.

It is estimated that the average net earnings of the electric lamps in London is about 10 shillings each a year.

An Italian syndicate has purchased one of the electric launches in use at the World's fair and has an option on 30 more.

A German town council has postponed the erection of an electric light station for five years "because improvements may be made in that time."

Inventor Edison is bending all of his inventive faculties to the construction of a combined phonograph and kinetograph, which will show a man's every motion and action.

An electrical rocking chair has been brought out by Mr. C. E. Hartelius of Bay Ridge, N. Y. The chair is actuated by the current from a dynamo, and the sitter can at the same time receive gentle currents through the body either by grasping metal handles in the ordinary way or by resting the bare feet on metal pedals.

THE SNAKE BITE WAS FATAL.

And the Red Nosed Man Went on to Tell How the Venom Got in Its Work.

"It's all humbug, this talk about rattlesnakes being so deadly poison," said a red faced man in the smoking car. "I've lived among 'em. They used to be so thick out where I live that you had to be mighty careful where you put your feet down if you didn't want to hurt a rattler or two every time you stepped.

"My bed was never any more than big enough for me and the easy conscience I always slept with, but I've woke up more times than I've got fingers and toes and found that two or three rattlesnakes had managed to find room with us. They were plenty, I tell you, out where I live. But deadly? Pooh! Why, I've known scores and scores of people to be socked, and socked deep, by rattlers, and I never knew of but one instance where a rattler's bite was fatal; never but once out of more cases than there's pimples on a goose.

"Bill Bulger was the man that was bit that time—a great, big, rough scuff of a log chopper that didn't look as if a whole den of rattlers could raise as much as a flea bite on him. But he went to teasing a big buck rattlesnake that had come down to camp to look around one day, and the snake just threw his upper teeth against Bill a couple of times, and every drop of poison he had he emptied into Bill's wrist. Holler? Great jeeswax, how Bill did holler! We grabbed him and hustled him over to the Pig's Ear shebang on t'other side of the camp and began to decant rum into him, and it wasn't long before Bill looked as if he was glad he was bit.

"Everybody said he'd die, though, sure pop, because that buck rattler must have unloaded into Jim close on to three fingers of the best poison he had. Consequently folks were surprised more than you can think when they got around next morning and found Bill on deck as chipper as a red squirrel and sound as a white oak knot."

"What!" exclaimed the man in the next seat. "I thought you said that bite was fatal!"

"It was, sir," replied the red faced man. "Bill got blind, crazy drunk on the strength of that snake bite and killed the bartender!"—New York Sun.

Cosmetics Among the Romans.

All that had been previously done in the way of facial decoration was left far in the shade by the ancient Romans. All the Latin writers—historians, poets, naturalists and others—mention it in one way or another. It was the practice of Roman actors, as it has been of those of the profession since the theater has existed. Many of the emperors used paint more or less freely. Heliogabalus, one of the most eccentric, when he entered Rome for the first time, had his eyelashes painted black and his cheeks red and white. In the time of Augustus the custom was universal among women of fashion, details of which are given by Horace, Catullus, Tibullus, Ovid, Propertius and the rest. Martial speaks of the chalk of Fabulla that fears the rain, and the wax of Sabella that fears the sun.

Horace mentions red lead and carmine as among the articles employed. Juvenal in one of his satires describes a paste that covers the faces of wives and adheres with tenacity to the faces of husbands. Coquettes, according to Horace, used a paste prepared from beans, much like that used by some modern Frenchwomen, and were also given to the use of cummin. Mandragora is mentioned by Pliny, and poppies by Ovid.—San Francisco Chronicle.

A Powerful Antiseptic.

Extensive researches made upon corrosive sublimate by Dr. McClintock of London show though the substance is not a valuable germicide—germs withstanding its action for some time—it proves to possess, of all substances, the greatest antiseptic power, so that a germ treated with the article, unless perchance it gets into the blood or is exposed to very exceptional conditions, is powerless to grow—that is, it is probable that a spore of subtilis or anthrax treated with sublimate, 1 in 1,000, and then thrown on the soil or into water, will not germinate, owing to the fact that the capsule of sublimate surrounding it is not removed.

It is found that corrosive sublimate forms with cellulose, as cloth, filter paper, etc., with silk, with albuminous bodies, with some part of bacteria, probably the envelope, a chemical compound that cannot be removed with any amount of washing in water. Thus sublimate when acting on a germ forms a capsule around it that protects the germ for a time from the further action of the sublimate and in turn forms an impenetrable barrier to the growth of the organism unless removed. This barrier may be removed with salines.

Artificial Aurora.

Artificial miniature auroras of the borealis variety have been produced by both De la Rive, the French savant, and Lenstroim, the Swedish astronomer. In Professor Lenstrom's experiments, which were made in Finland, the peak of a high mountain was surrounded with a coil of wire, pointed at intervals with tin nibs. The wire was then charged with electricity, whereupon a brilliant aurora appeared above the mountain in which spectroscopic analysis revealed the greenish yellow rays so characteristic in nature's display of "northern lights."—Foreign Letter.

Our Other Self.

Each of us has two selves, the higher and the lower. When God seems out of reach, as is often the case, and our prayers return to us heavier and sadder than when they left our lips, it is a good plan to commune with that alter ego which is a shade nearer the divine, that part which longs to help and to overcome, but is held down by the infirmities of the lower nature. Ask it for strength and instruction, and by so doing help the whole man. God is so often beautifully found in such ways.—American Woman's Journal.

Realization.

I wished one day, with Burns, some power would gie
The gift by means of which myself I'd see
As to the watching world I seemed to be.

And as it chanced, some fairy came my way
And granted me the wish I'd made that day,
And, oh, it filled my soul with blank dismay!

For as I looked, ah, how my pride did fall,
Aghast I staggered back against the wall;
The world was not aware of me at all.

Look Out for Counterfeits!

Counterfeit $5 bills are in circulation in large numbers at Springfield and New Haven. If some of them have not already got to Norwich they are likely to. The bill is a silver certificate having the engraving of General Grant in the center, but the stamp which is on the genuine bills is missing. The engraving is poor and the paper lacks the silk threads which usually accompany the genuine bills. The money passed in Springfield is similar in every respect to the counterfeit bills for passing which two Italians were arrested in New Haven. Their trial is now pending.

A Main Street Runaway.

The horse of A. B. Watrous, the Laurel Hill mason, became frightened at the 6 o'clock electric car while standing in front of Welcome A. Smith's Main street grocery Wednesday evening, and ran wildly down into Water street. In front of Gardner & Reynolds' market the wagon attached collided with another vehicle, and the 5-year-old son of Mr. Watrous would have been endangered, had not the father rushed to the rescue and snatched him from the seat opportunely. The horse freed himself and ran to his barn. The wagon was somewhat injured.

The republicans of Norwich met in town hall Wednesday evening and held one of the most enthusiastic caucuses of recent years. Col. Carpenter called the meeting to order, and Charles E Dyer was nominated chairman.

On taking the chair Mr. Dyer said: "We are here tonight to place in nomination a ticket for town officers to be voted for on Monday next. This is distinctively a republican caucus, and any and all who participate in its doings should be and will be expected to be republican voters on election day. The name republican, as applied to the party which has borne it for a third of a century, is one of honor and of justifiable pride. Let us bear in mind that we are the representatives of principles which are higher and of more importance than those of a mere political machine. Whatever our likes or dislikes, they should be buried beyond resurrection; and we should use our franchises for patriotism, protection and progress rather than for the advancement of persons. Let our watchword be always:

"Our country and the right!—
For right is right and God is God—
And right the day will win.
To doubt would be disloyalty—
To falter, would be sin!"

Mr. Charles S. Holbrook and William W. Ives were chosen clerks.

The largest vote was cast for first selectman, 268, and two ballots each were required for the first assessor and the first and second selectmen.

The nominees for town clerk and registrar of voters were chosen by acclamation.

The ticket, as nominated, is as follows:

For Assessors—Richard T. Bushnell, Rescome Peckham.

For Board of Relief—Henry E Griswold, Abram Geer.

For Selectmen—Nathan Small, Aaron W Dickey.

For Town Clerk, Town Treasurer and Treasurer Town Deposit Fund—Charles [illegible]

For Collector of Taxes—George L. Griswold.

For Registrar of Voters—Joab B. Rogers.

On motion Charles J. Winters, Frank H. Smith, James Gilmour, Alba L. Hale and Joseph T. Rose were appointed a committee to nominate the remainder of the ticket. The committee reported the following officers:

For School Fund Treasurer—Costello Lippitt.

For Constables—John Reeves, David R. Kinney, David Smith, Charles R. Hazlehurst.

For Committee on Town Deposit Fund—John M. Johnson, Charles W. Gale, Henry M Durfey.

For School Visitors—Charles S. Bill, Thomas A. Perkins.

For Town Auditor—Charles E. Dyer.

For Grand Jurors—John C. Miller, John P. Cleves, E. H. Tibbits, W. W. Ives.

On motion of Judge Kellogg the report of the committee was accepted and the list presented adopted.

The town committee was authorized to fill any vacancies which may occur.

Capt. Hinckley in presenting the name of Capt. Small made a rousing speech which was cordially applauded and won for Mr. Small his place upon the ticket, a place for which he is eminently fitted.

PUTNAM.

The Republicans Nominate a Ticket.

A republican caucus was held in the opera house Wednesday to nominate town officers. S. H. Seward was chosen chairman and W. R. Bartlett secretary. The caucus was called to order by F. A. Seward, and the following ticket was nominated:

For Board of Relief—Frederick Cutter and Orrin Morse.

For Selectmen—Artemus H. Corbin and Charles L. Gerry.

For Town Clerk and Town Treasurer—J. W. Manning.

For Tax Collector—Charles L. Torry.

For Registrar and Treasurer Town Deposit Fund—Samuel A. Spalding.

For School Committee—L. H. Fuller, G. N. Morse, Charles L. Torry.

For Grand Jurors—John R. Cogswell, Hiram Perse.

For Registrar of Voters—Charles H. Brown.

For Constables—W. H. Langdon, H. G. Carver, M. G. Corbin, Frederick Franklin.

For School Visitor for Three Years—Mrs. [illegible]

The caucus then adjourned.

Worst Wreck in the History of the M. & N. O Division

TRAMPS KILLED.

Train Men Badly Injured—Miraculous Escape of Passengers.

MOBILE, Ala., Sept. 28.—A Gulfport, Miss., special to The Daily Register says: The worst wreck in the history of the Mobile & New Orleans division of the Louisville & Nashville railroad was that which occurred this morning at 11 o'clock. Passenger train No. 2 went into an open switch. The train was running forty-five miles an hour when the accident occurred.

Investigation by the railroad officials after the accident showed that the switch which had been properly set and locked, had been opened. The lock was burned off and thrown away. Three negro tramps riding on the blind baggage between the tender and the baggage car were killed. Another negro tramp was fatally injured. The engineer and fireman were dangerously injured, and two postal clerks, the express messenger and baggage-master were slightly injured.

The killed are: John Allison, George Anderson and Wm. Robinson, negro tramps.

Wounded: Frank Collis, engineer, serious internal injuries, face badly cut; Geo. Morgan, fireman, left foot amputated, severe scalp wounds; Louis Robinson, tramp, dangerous internal injuries; Joseph Hughes and E. C. Carro, postal clerks; Wm. Locke, express messenger, and Henry Kingston, baggageman, all slightly hurt.

The escape of the passengers from injury seems almost miraculous. When the engine struck the switch frog it jumped so that the flanges rode on top of the rail 30 or 40 yards, then left the track and plunged through an empty box car on the siding. The baggage and express car followed the engine and collapsed along side of it. The mail car left the track to the left and was shattered into splinters. The smoker and passenger coaches were also wrecked.

RECEIVERS APPOINTED

of the Jarvis-Conkling Mortgage Trust Company.

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—Judge Lacombe in the United States district court today appointed Samuel M. Jarvis of Kansas City and Roland R. Conklin of this city receivers of the Jarvis-Conklin Mortgage Trust company of 40 Wall street. The application was made by Benjamin N. Fowler and J. G. Cassidy, who hold 6 per cent debentures, the semi-annual dividend of which due Sept. 1 has not been paid. The receivers qualified in the sum of $50,000 each. The company has debenture bonds out to the amount of $8,098,171, paying 5 or 6 per cent.

Several companies have acted as trustees for the concern, having taken some of their bonds and sold them. To secure these they hold assets of the Jarvis-Conklin company. The trustees are the Mercantile Trust company, which holds $1,[illegible] of bonds, and holding as security $1,[illegible]; the [illegible] Safe Deposit and [illegible] company of [illegible], $1,[illegible] bonds, holding $1,[illegible] security; Boston Safe Deposit and Trust company, $210,000 in bonds, with $213,000 security; the Law Guaranty Trust society of England, $[illegible], holding $307,000 security, and the W. S. Lobeck company of London, $1,940,[illegible], holding $1,945,750 security.

The company is indebted to various banks and trust companies to the amount of $428,044, for which notes have been given. It has deposited to secure this amount $540,000 in bonds, the market value of which is $545,958. It is also indebted for money lent and received from depositors, for which certificates of deposit to the amount of $414,784 have been given.

Some of these certificates are due on October 10. The company has property said to aggregate over $4,800,000. The bill of complaint sets forth that under conditions of ordinary prosperity the company could meet its obligations, but owing to the financial stringency, it has for the first time failed to pay dividends. The company holds property in the states of New York, Missouri, Washington, Ohio, Kansas, Colorado, Indiana, Louisiana, Pennsylvania and Great Britain. The principal office is in this city.

STOLEN CLOTHING FOUND.

Part of a Stock Taken From New York Traced to New Britain.

NEW BRITAIN, Conn., Sept. 28.—Detective Reilly of New Haven came to New Britain, today, to find part of a stock of clothing that had been stolen from New York. The detective found the clothing in the store of N. E. Mag, the clothing merchant.

Mr. Mag stated that he purchased $236 worth of clothing from a drummer named Harris Comcale, and that he had no reason to suppose the articles was stolen.

The detective stated that some weeks ago bales of cloth were shipped to a New York tailor to be made into clothing. When the goods were finished they were left in cases at the Grand Central depot to be shipped. The cases were stolen from the depot.

The police authorities have traced the articles of clothing to Brooklyn, New Haven and Hoboken. From New Haven some of the articles were sent to Meriden and thence to New Britain.

The value of the articles stolen from the Grand Central depot is $2,500. The detective says that the authorities hope the developments in the case will lead to the discovery of a band of thieves from whose depredations many have suffered.

Car Shops at Vicksburg Burned.

VICKSBURG, Miss., Sept. 28.—The car departments of the Valley route shops at this city, comprising paint, freight, and passenger car shops, were destroyed by fire last night. The carpenter shop was partly destroyed, and nearly 100 cars were burned. The loss is estimated at $150,000; insured.

The Fuerst Bismarck Lowers Her Record.

LONDON, Sept. 28.—The steamer Fuerst Bismarck, from New York, passed the Needles, at the entrance of the Solent, at 6.10 a. m., beating the best previous eastward record, held by herself.

Her time was 6 days 11 hours 14 minutes. Her best previous time was 6 days 11 hours 39 minutes.

Fatal Dynamite Explosion.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Sept. 28.—Andrew Warren, colored, 27 years of age, belonging in Lynchburg, Va., was killed as the result of a premature dynamite explosion in a section of the Pawtucket sewer works this afternoon. Two others were badly injured.

IN SEARCH OF A FATHER.

A Pennsylvania Crank Visits the White House—Arrested by the Police.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—This morning shortly before 10 o'clock a white man about 28 years old in some unexplained way found his way into the lower regions of the White House, and meeting the colored cook, said to her: "I want to see father." "Who is your father?" the cook asked him.

"Mr. Cleveland, of course," was the response.

"Just then Policeman Heller appeared upon the scene and saw at a glance that the man was not altogether right, and so he dealt with him accordingly.

"Your father is out in the garden," said he. "Come with me and we'll find him."

The intruder went with the officer who took him to the watch box. There the officer asked the man what he wanted in the White house.

"I wanted that chair," was his response.

"What chair?"

"The president's chair."

"Don't you think the president fills it satisfactorily?"

"No, I don't" was his reply, "and I intend to get it by fair means or foul. Give us each a pistol and I'll show who will get it mighty quick."

When they got to the watch box they found Policeman Hible off duty. Before that officer knew what was going on the prisoner grabbed the policeman's black jack from his pocket, evidently thinking he was going to get a pistol. He tried to use the club on the officer, but both officers grabbed him and the struggle lasted but a few minutes before the man was overpowered.

The crank was conveyed to the police station where he gave the name of Joseph Washington, and said he came from Pennsylvania. A charge of being a suspicious character was filed against him.

ENGLISH PRESS OPINION

Of President Cleveland's Letter to Governor Northen.

LONDON, Sept. 28.—The Standard says of President Cleveland's letter to Governor Northen, concerning the repeal bill in the senate: No doubt Mr. Cleveland's letter will have the result in America which people here think and expect it ought to have. There is a refreshing downrightness about his utterances, but once or twice in his scorn of chicanery and double dealings he has forgotten to some extent the limits within which he can exert his influence over the lawmaker for good makes his utterances bear a curious resemblance to those of Emperor William. The form is different, but the essence is the same. The present letter is more likely to retard the repeal of the Sherman act than not. The senate will be more angry with Mr. Cleveland than ever, or pretend to be so. The letter seems, therefore, to be an error in tactics.

Moreover Mr. Cleveland fails to hint what could be done to lighten the stock of silver or avert a crisis. As matters stand, it would unquestionably pay the union better to go wholly over to silver. An honest silver dollar is more likely to restore confidence than a false gold one and Mr. Cleveland's gold dollar would be pinchbeck unless he could raise a large loan.

In the end there must be a compromise and it would be wiser to discuss a modus [illegible].

The Times says: Mr. Cleveland evidently intended to make a political manifesto. If the movement is somewhat ambiguous it is not altogether his fault. The president, like the English premier, is sometimes obliged to use language to disguise thought. Nothing can be clearer, however, than the general principle enunciated, but as a practical guide to legislation it leaves something to be desired.

We are surprised that Mr. Cleveland is capable of encouraging a delusion among some of his supporters by posing as a friend of silver. Nothing is to be gained by paltering with unworkable theories or by trying to "square" the friends of silver. The disaster resulting from the Sherman act have been brought about, as Mr. Herbert's report shows, by trying to compromise with an economic principle.

Nancy Hanks a Mile in 2.06 at Terre Haute.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., Sept. 28.—It was about 4 o'clock when Nancy Hanks, with Budd Doble holding the ribbons, came down past the grand stand and received a salvo of applause. The noted reinsman wore a haggard look, and while going around for an easy mile was seen to stop at the half as if too ill to drive the mare home. But, despite the warning of his physicians, he scored down for the word with the runner Artist on the wheel to urge the mare along. The first quarter was done in 31 seconds and when the half was gone in 1.04 a sigh went up from the big crowd. The third quarter was done in the same time as the first, but the mare not guided by the strong arm, was seen to falter in the stretch and the last quarter was finished in the slow time of 33¼ seconds, the mile being done in 2 06.

The 2.20 pace was the sensation of the year. The six fastest heats ever gone to harness were recorded. The race record for a mare so long held by Vinata and recently divided by Prima Donna was broken by May Marshall in the fourth heat. The event was finally captured by the favorite, Hal Braden.

Fully $10,000 was in the pools on this race. Harietta was a hot favorite in the 2.19 trot and she did not disappoint her backers. Her only competitor was Zombro and by an accident in colliding with Florida she was distanced. The free-for-all was a farce, as might have been expected when Roy Wilkes with not a sound foot was permitted to start. It was a walk-over for Manager.

Annual Meeting of the Builders of Warship Victoria.

LONDON, Sept. 28.—The annual meeting of the Armstrong & Mitchell company, ship builders, who constructed the warship Victoria, sunk in collision with the Camperdown, was held here today. In speaking of the collision Lord Armstrong contended that the arguments against building immense cruisers were unavailable.

The same arguments, he said, held as good, however, against gigantic battleships. The collision off Tripoli had certainly taught a valuable lesson. The strength and stability of the Camperdown's prow ram were quite insufficient to enable her to deliver an effective blow, without peril to herself. The same defect probably existed in the other rams. A big battleship was too unwieldy to give full effect to her ram.

Lord Armstrong advocated, therefore, the building of several vessels especially designed for ramming. The vessels should not be too large, he said, and should be kept free from the costly complications of battleships. Personal dash on the part of the commander will be the principal quality needed in handling such a rammer. The occasion of such an inexpensive vessel would be of small importance as compared with the loss of a great battleship like the Victoria.

TAMMANY WINS.

Defeats Lamplighter in a Mile and Quarter Race

AT GUTTENBURG.

Fifteen Thousand People See the Race—Another Will Be Run.

GUTTENBURG, Sept. 28.—The match race between Marcus Daly's colt Tammany and Walbaum's colt Lamplighter, took place at this track this afternoon in the presence of 15,000 people, for a purse of $2,500. Garrison strode Tammany and Taral was mounted on Lamplighter. The horses got a good start, and were off with the cheers of the thousands of spectators. Lamplighter moved off smoothly, going easily a length and a half in front, but Tammany loped along behind, in that long, easy stride, peculiar to him. Around the turn they swept, with no perceptible difference in the distance between them. Lamplighter's adherents were shouting as they went down the back stretch, but Garrison made no move with Tammany until the far turn was reached where he moved up to win a length of Lamplighter. Then they swept to the stretch. Here Garrison went to work on Tammany. In a twinkling he was on even terms with his opponent. Up went Taral's whip, and then it descended with cruel force on Lamplighter's quivering muscles. "Lamplighter's beaten!" roared 15,000 throats. Again and again the whip descended on Lamplighter, raising cruel welts on his glossy hide. Taral's spurs were driven with the energy born of despair. His efforts were futile, however. Tammany drew further and further away and fairly romped in an easy winner by three lengths, in the fast time of 2 08½. This time established a track record for the distance—one and one-quarter miles.

The official fractional time was as follows: eighth 12¼, quarter 24½, three-eighths 37, half 49¼, five-eighths 1 02, three-quarters 1 14½, seven-eighths 1.27¾, mile 1.40¼, mile and an eighth 1 53 and mile and quarter 2 08½. Tammany and Garrison received an ovation from the crowd. Another match for the same sum was arranged distance to be one and one-half miles.

YACHT VALKYRIE

Takes Her First Spin in American Waters in a Light Breeze.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—The English yacht Valkyrie left her anchorage off Bay Ridge at 10 30 a. m. in tow of the tug Lewis Pulver, and proceeded as far as Stapleton, adjusting her compass. Aboard of her were Lord Dunraven, H. Maitland Kersey and two other gentlemen. Captain Lyons, a Sandy Hook pilot, was also aboard, and will probably pilot her during the coming races.

The Valkyrie reached the quarantine dock near the Narrows at 11 20, and was hauled up into the wind by the tug. As soon as she got her head into the wind the sailors swarmed up the shrouds and began making a continuous procession to the masthead and down on the halyards of the mainsail. It was slow work getting the big spread of canvas up and it was not until 11 [illegible] that the [illegible] was in position. It set very well except the leech, where it shook badly in the wind and seemed to bag more than on any of the American boats. The jib and staysail which were up in the stops were shaken loose, and in a few minutes the big cutter came around and started on her first spin in American waters.

The yacht Valkyrie only went a short distance outside Sandy Hook, there not being sufficient wind. She passed [illegible] her return at 2 45 p. m.

Discontent Among Unemployed at Ansonia.

ANSONIA, Conn., Sept. 28.—Some of the unemployed men of the town are endeavoring to incite a strike among the laborers who are given work by the town during the hard times. The selectmen, in order to give work to many who were left without means to support their families by the closing of factories, voted to spend what money they had on hand in improving the roads giving employment to as many as possible at $1 a day. Some of those who did not take advantage of the offer and who are not inclined to work anyway are now trying to start a movement among the men to strike for $1 50 a day. Their efforts are causing much trouble and it is feared that the agitation will result in a free fight between the men at work and those who advocate a strike.

Valuable Paintings Destroyed by Fire.

PORT CHESTER, N. Y., Sept. 28.—The residence here of W. S. Lawson was destroyed by fire this morning. The loss on the building and contents which included a number of valuable paintings, is estimated at $90,000.

PUTNAM.

The Murphy Meetings—Superior Court—Various Matters.

Thomas E. Murphy, the famous temperance orator will be welcomed by a crowded house at the Opera house tonight. Mr. Murphy will lecture in Putnam three nights and will call out large and enthusiastic houses. It is probable that he will give lectures on Saturday and Sunday afternoons, although definite arrangements have not yet been made. Added seating capacity has been provided so some 1,200 or 1,500 people will be able to hear him. Mr. Murphy particularly desires that those who are addicted to drink should attend his lectures.

Before Judge Wheeler, in the superior court, on Tuesday, the case of James E. Hamlin of New Bedford against the Sterling Dyeing and Finishing company was called. The plaintiff sues for $4,000 for rent of a boiler since 1886. The testimony was concluded and the arguments made on Wednesday. Both sides were ably represented. Attorney Perkins of Hartford and Mr. Maloney of Willimantic appeared for the plaintiff, and Attorney Searles of Putnam and Colonel Tenny of Norwich for the defendant. The judge reserved his decision.

The next case called was that of Nathaniel Bowen vs. Thomas S. Harrison of Pomfret. The plaintiff sues for wages alleged to be due. The defendant denies the claim. Attorney Potter appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. Warner for the defendant. The court held an evening session and will resume the trial of the case this morning.

The mills in the upper village will run on full time with a reduction in wages hereafter.

Edgar M. Warner, Esq., was elected a member of the advisory board of the Connecticut Law and Order league at its last meeting in New Haven.

The Sheriff in Possession.

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—The sheriff has taken possession of the place of business of the Twin Tumbler Lock Co., at No. 46 Marion street, on an execution for $20,900 in favor of Charles E. Candee of St. Louis, the president and general manager of the concern, for advances and salary. The company was organized in October, 1891, with a capital stock of $300,000, which was afterwards changed to $1,000,000. Charles F. Ayer of Lowell, Mass., today entered judgment for $60,000 against the Richardson Mogan Co., grate manufacturers at 23 Beekman street, and of South Norwalk, Conn., for money advanced on notes.

World's Fair Ball.

CHICAGO, Sept. 28.—Massachusetts and Chicago society mingled with the World's fair commissioners from foreign countries tonight at a reception and ball given in their honor by the board of managers for Massachusetts in the John Hancock house. Commissioner John Covey was assisted in receiving the guests by Mrs. E. C. Covey, Alice Fremont and Miss Anne L. Dawes.

The reception room on the main floor was used for dancing and a majority of the company engaged. Half a dozen foreign nations were represented, and the highest officials of the fair attended. The house was decorated on the outside with chains of Chinese lanterns and the interior was resplendent with the flags of all nations, the stars and stripes predominating.

Astor's Yacht on the Rocks.

NEWBURGH, N. Y., Sept. 28.—Last night about ten o'clock the steam yacht owned by John Jacob Astor struck the reef at New Hamburgh, on the Hudson river, and stove a large hole amidships. To prevent her sinking she was run ashore on the flats north of New Hamburgh tunnel. She is in a very bad position, there being only five feet of water at her bow and twelve feet at her stern. The place where she is beached is a hard bar of sand. Her hold is full of water, though the pumps have been kept going all the time. Only the officers and crew were on board.

A $60,000 Defaulter.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Sept 28.—Frank Kendrick, assistant cashier in the Commercial bank, is a defaulter in the sum of $60,000. The discrepancy was discovered yesterday, when Bank Examiner Clark counted the cash. The Fidelity and Casualty company of New York city is on Kendrick's bond. He was arrested this afternoon and gave bail in the sum of $10,000 to appear before the grand jury. He pleaded not guilty. Kendrick is said to have been dealing extensively in stocks and this is thought to be the cause of his defalcation. He has always hitherto bore a good reputation.

Intended to Blow Up the Reichsrath.

LONDON, Sept. 28.—The Vienna correspondent of The Standard telegraphs that evidence has been secured which proves that the anarchists concerned in the conspiracy recently unearthed by the police intended to perpetrate further bomb outrages at the opening of the reichsrath on Oct. 10, when thousands of persons would have gathered in the vicinity of the parliament buildings. The correspondent further says that the connection of the anarchists engaged in the conspiracy with those in London, New York, Chicago, Paris and Berlin have been fully established.

OTTAWA, Sept. 28.—The minister of marine and fisheries has received an official report of the seal business to date made by the British Columbia fleet. Thirty vessels have obtained on the British Columbia coast 35,120 skins, and on the Japan and Russian side 25,343, or a total of 60,463. It is estimated the total number of skins taken this season will be about 60,000, which is 10,000 more than last year. The weather is reported as having been very stormy in Russian waters.

Spain Hunting Anarchists.

MADRID, Sept. 28.—The police throughout Spain are hunting anarchists. Arrests are being made daily, and it is believed all anarchists known to the police to be dangerous will soon be under lock and key. Among those wounded recently by the exploding bomb in Barcelona was General Clements. His condition has become worse, and at a consultation of physicians held today it was decided that one of his legs would have to be amputated.

A FALSE ALARM OF FIRE

In a Jewish Synagogue Followed by Fatal Results.

NINE PERSONS KILLED.

Fully One Hundred of the Congregation Badly Hurt.

WARSAW, Sept. 27.—A false alarm of fire was shouted in a synagogue in a small town near this place. The building was crowded with Jews at worship. All started at once for the two exits despite the shouts of the rabbi that there was no fire, and fought to get out. After a struggle of ten minutes two thirds of the congregation were still in the synagogue. As no fire had appeared, they became calmer and with the aid of the caretakers, the rabbi eventually restored quiet. Nine dead bodies were found near the exits and twenty persons lay unconscious and bleeding where they had been trampled upon by the throng. Fully one hundred are hurt, and fifteen are suffering from wounds likely to cause death.

Races at Mystic Park.

BOSTON, Sept. 28.—Over 5,000 persons saw the races at Mystic park this afternoon. The great attraction was the 2 30 stallion race, in which 16 horses started. Jahawker was favorite and he made a game fight, the finishes in the second and third heat being especially close and exciting. Early Bird proved a dangerous competitor and took the first two heats, and Jahawker secured the next two, and the race went over on account of the darkness.

In the 2 36 class, Gilcurry, who started in twelfth position, worked into second place at the finish in the first heat. In the next two he took the lead and held it throughout the race.

WORCESTER, Mass., Sept. 28.—The appearance of Dr. Anton Dvorak of New York, was the feature of the musical festival this evening. He was very enthusiastically received. He conducted his 148th Psalm and the Husitska overture. The soloists in miscellaneous pieces were Emil Fischer, Caroline Ostberg, Felix Winternitz, J. H. McKinley, Miss Katharine Fisk.

The concert closed with the Lachner sextet and Wagner's Kaiser-Marsch. In the afternoon Jules Jordan conducted his dramatic scene "Jael" with Nordica as soloist. De Pachman created a furore in Chopin's F minor concerto and smaller pieces, and Rose Linde made a good impression. Beethoven's 8th symphony and Mendelssohn's "Loreley" finished the programme. The festival closes tomorrow night.

LONDON, Sept. 28.—A dispatch from Rome to The Central News says that the Italian government has refused to grant exequaturs to all the Italian bishops nominated at the last papal consistory. AN INTIMATION

Of Certain Articles to Be Placed on the Free List.

TORONTO, Ont., Sept. 28.—The Globe today publishes a special dispatch from Washington intimating that the ways and means committee has decided to place certain articles on the free list, among which are wool, coal, eggs, vegetables, salt, binder twine, etc.

Commenting on the dispatch, the Globe says: The list of goods placed on the free list shows that outcries against the adjacent British colonies and British fiscal system can no longer induce the people of the republic to submit to taxation for the benefit of a dependent class. All along the border the placing of vegetables on the free list will be an advantage to the people of both countries. The egg market of the American public will be especially valuable to the Canadian farmers. This adoption of the principle of freedom is a triumph of common sense in commercial affairs. Our tariff could not long exist beside a people enjoying the advantages of commercial freedom, and the advocates of a sane commercial policy in the dominion are rejoiced at the prospect of such a situation."

SUCCESSFUL SECOND DAY.

Crowds Throng the New London County Fair Grounds—Fine Balloon Ascension—The Afternoon Races and other Events.

Nature changed her mood from gray to gay yesterday, and put on a winsome smile after her scowl of Wednesday that inveigled a good share of New London county's ruralists to the New London County fair grounds—7,000 as the officials announced at the close of the day's festivities. A gentle, refreshing breeze was wafted across the ample premises, the carpet of green herbage was steeped in clear September sunshine, and it is doubtful if ever conditions were more favorable for a successful second day's exhibition.

The programme of the morning opened at 10 o'clock with the examination of town teams and was followed half an hour later by the examination of private teams. At 11 came the examination of working oxen and at 11.30 the committees commenced the inspection of stock.

The races of the afternoon were unusually hotly contested, and entertained a large crowd. Martha Wilkes was sent around the course several times and attracted great admiration. Dog Bonaparte also trotted about for the delectation of the spectators.

Prof. Van Deer soared aloft in his air ship from a crowd of gaping spectators at 5 o'clock. Standing erect and in full view of the people, he ascended to a height of over a thousand feet, when his balloon veered to the south and the aeronaut landed safely on Indian hill, Mohegan.

Mr. E. D. Wiggins of Boston, owner of famous Martha Wilkes, was one of the judges in the trotting.

Mahomet Takes the 2.35 Race.

Wisteria drew the pole in the 2 35 class. Of the nine horses entered five came to the scratch. The scoring was long-drawn out, despite Judge Buckingham's injunctions. Mahomet led from the outset when they finally got away, somewhat pushed by Wisteria, who came in a close second. Daisy Ward was distanced, [illegible] ter. The race in her case was stubbornly fought, the horses coming by the stand in the order of the former heat.

There was breaking galore in the third heat. The first and second horses were set back, and the race given to Wisteria, who finished third.

The fourth and fifth heats were featureless, except in that they showed Mahomet's superior speed. He was an easy winner in both.

The summary is as follows:

2.35 class, trot, purse $400, in premiums of $150, $75, $45, $30. Nine entries, five starters.

Landmark Wins the 2.50 Race.

The first heat of the 2 50 class trot was called at 1 40 o'clock. There were five entries and three to start, Tuxedo, Storm and Lady Landmark, the latter horse securing the pole. "Go" was given on the second time down, and the three steeds were bunched to the first quarter, where Storm began a series of breaks and fell far to the rear. Tuxedo led Lady Landmark by two lengths to the three quarter pole, almost caught him on the home stretch, and both came almost together on a dead run under the wire. The heat was given to Tuxedo.

Misfortune overtook Lady Landmark in the second heat. At the first turn her driver, Bolsie of East Hartford, collided with Tuxedo's sulky and was tumbled to the ground, the slender spokes of his rubber-tired vehicle caving in in the encounter. Tuxedo led his competitor to the three-quarter pole, where he broke, was passed neatly and came in second best. By agreement of judges and driver Lady Landmark was allowed to contest in the rest of the race. Tuxedo's thill was cracked in the collision.

Lady Landmark took the lead at the first turn in the next heat; when the other two horses broke, and kept it to the end. Tuxedo struggled manfully for first place, but could not wrest it from Mr. James' popular mare. Storm just escaped being distanced.

Peter McNee, Country Boy's veteran driver, was put in Tuxedo's sulky the fourth heat, and brought his charge in first. Landmark led to the back stretch on the second round, when she broke and went to the rear. She finished second, but was put back for running.

The fifth heat was one of the prettiest of the day. Landmark led at the first half, but gave way to Tuxedo at the turn. The gelding broke on the back stretch and was passed by the mare again, who finished first under the wire, although hard pressed by Tuxedo, who broke as he passed by the stand.

The sixth and deciding heat was trotted in semi-darkness amid considerable excitement. Tuxedo took the lead, and increased it to a hundred feet at the three-quarter pole. Landmark made a noble spurt and passed her opponent on the home stretch. The victory was warmly applauded.

The summary:

2.50 class, pace or trot, purse $400, in premiums of $160, $80, $48, $32, six entries, three starters.

WHAT IT WOULD AMOUNT TO.

Enormous Sums the Bath Iron Works Men Would Spend Here.

Suppose it would take a cash expenditure by New Londoners of $300,000 to bring the Bath Iron works to New London, asks a citizen, how long before the money would be returned in trade?

The iron works employ from 750 to 1,000 men at present. If the works should come here it would be necessary to increase their capacity to about double what it now is, as the company would have an immense amount of patronage that it is now too far away to secure. The number of men employed would hardly be less than 1,300.

The wages of 1,300 men, at $2 a day each, is $2,600, and the total wages for a year of 300 working days would be $780,000.

The greater part of that three-quarters of a million dollars would go to the merchants. Real estate everywhere would advance greatly in value. When you think it all over $300,000 is not very much to give to secure such an industry as the Bath Iron works. The company might not come for that, it might come for less.—[New London Day.

The Windham County Fair.

The forty-fourth annual fair of the Windham County Agricultural society opened under rather unfavorable circumstances as the weather was anything but pleasant and therefore the attendance was small. Wednesday, the second day, was a repetition of the first and cold, but the attendance much better. The entries in some things are fully up to the record of former years while in others they fall far below.

The ladies deserve praise for the exhibit they have made in fancy articles and fine arts. There is quite a falling off in the exhibit of cattle, many that were entered failing to appear.

The list of entries in the races was in excess of any previous year.

QUEEN ALLIANCE.

Philadelphia Manufacturers to Join Silverites.

PLAN OF SETTLEMENT PROPOSED.

Silver Is to Be Retained as Money—Barker's Letter Endorsed.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 28.—A large number of Philadelphia manufacturers have determined to make an effort to protect their own interests by making an alliance with the friends of silver. To that end they have indorsed an open letter to the senate of the United States, written by Wharton Barker, which proposed a basis for the settlement of the silver question by which silver may be continued as a money metal.

The manufacturers who have inaugurated this movement do not attribute the present hard times to the Sherman law. They assert that it is due to the fear that the protective feature of the tariff is to be undermined. They hold that if assurance were given that the existing tariff laws would not be disturbed for the next two years, business would take an immediate boom, mills would start up in all parts of the country, and employment would be given to Thousands of Idle Workingmen.

While holding these views, they also believe that it would be a mistake to demonetize silver. These manufacturers believe that in many respects their interests are allied with the mine owners of the silver states. It was that belief which prompted the movement to give encouragement to the silver senators in their fight to continue the white metal as a part of the currency of the United States.

While the Manufacturers' club as an organization, has not committed itself to the movement, many of the leading members are interested in it. James Dobson is one of the prime movers, and his name is at the top of the list of signers of Mr. Barker's letter. He has also sent a letter, over his own name, to nearly all of the manufacturers in the city, asking them to read Mr. Barker's letter, which he enclosed, and if they approved of it to sign a blank slip and send their names to Mr. Barker.

SOUTHERN JUSTICE.

Prisoner Taken From the Officers and Riddled With Bullets.

COLUMBIA, S. C., Sept. 28.—Calvin Stewart, the negro who murdered a white man a short time since, was captured Tuesday in a swamp above Langley. That night a constable and a few friends started to bring the prisoner to Aiken. When they had left Langley about a mile in the rear they were surprised by a mob of 15 to 20 masked men. Before any resistance could be made the prisoner was taken from them and riddled with bullets.

Before being shot Stewart confessed to having murdered the man, and implicated Stephen Dunbar (colored), who, he claimed, had aided him in the murder. Dunbar was captured yesterday and lodged in Aiken jail, and so great is the danger of his being lynched that the governor wired Captain Oakley of the Palmetto rifles to hold his company in readiness to protect the prisoner if called upon by the sheriff. The whole country is stirred up about the affair.

Trial of George Thompson.

BOSTON, Sept. 28.—The trial of George Thompson, for manslaughter, for the killing of his wife was begun in the superior court today. The prisoner had no counsel, cross-questioning the witnesses himself, and the case will be quickly disposed of.

GLADSTONE'S SPEECH.

Comments of London Newspapers on the Strong Utterances.

LONDON, Sept. 28.—The Times, commenting upon Mr. Gladstone's speech at Edinburgh last evening, says the prime minister's indictment of the house of lords rests upon a series of the most audacious assumptions, and his conclusion is as lame and impotent as any ever put into words by the leader of a powerful party.

The Standard says the wildest demagogue could not have indulged in a more ridiculous diatribe against the peers.

The Daily News says: In the absence of definite proposals dealing with the claims of the house of lords, Mr. Gladstone's speech will be noted by the Tory journals as a sign of weakness, but nobody expected such suggestions from the premier. The time for such an extension of the struggle has not yet come; the position of the government is too strong for violent measures to be needed.

The Daily Chronicle says: "Mr. Gladstone never made a speech which more fully responded to public expectation. He not only shattered and pulverized the case which the house of lords attempted to set up for the rejection of home rule, but convicted that assembly of legislative incapacity which deprived them of any title to guide the policy of the country.

AYER CITY DRY.

Private Wells Affected by the Driven Wells That Supply Lowell.

LOWELL, Mass., Sept. 28.—The pumps at the driven wells on the city farm, from which the city will receive its entire water supply in a short time, were started about two weeks ago, and since then all the private wells in Ayer City have been more or less affected. Some of those above the level of the city wells have dried up altogether. Among those are the wells at the glue factory, and one at A. H. Abbott's, one-third of a mile away, a well which has given a good supply for 15 years, and was a popular stopping place for thirsty Sunday strollers.

When the new brewery was started in Ayer City, the excellent water supply was one of the chief things to recommend the site; but lately there have been fears that the city wells would cut off the supply at the brewery. It is thought, however, that when the private wells are sunk to the same depth as the city wells there will be enough water for all.

LOST THEIR VOTES.

Those Settling Claims in Cherokee Strip No Longer Live in Kansas.

TOPEKA, Sept. 28.—Attorney General Little rendered an opinion yesterday, declaring that all persons who made the race for claims in the Cherokee strip forfeited their residence in this state, and are consequently not entitled to vote at the coming election.

It is estimated that fully 20,000 voters went into the new country from Kansas, among them a large number of city and county officers, who by the ruling of the attorney general, forfeit their offices. Most of those who made the race will be in Kansas on election day, having either returned to remain or to conclude arrangements for taking up their residence in Oklahoma.

It is known that three Republican members of the legislature have taken claims in the strip, enough to destroy the Republican majority in the house.

I WANT TO KNOW.

She came from way down east, they said,
And being introduced she led
Me there to recapitulate
The city's pleasures up to date,
And when my full directory
I had retailed she said to me—
"I want to know?"

I told her everything I knew
That worthy was of interview;
Retailed to her each shopping mart,
The homes of drama, music, art,
The drives, menageries and parks.

Described with eloquent remarks
The watering places roundabout,
Enthused o'er each excursion route,
Talked till, in fact, my tongue grew weak,
Then heard again in accents meek—
"I want to know?"

Angels of mercy! Had I then
Obeyed the impulse born of men
And with warm maledictions hurled
That spinster to the lower world
From open window where I sat,
Would not the gods approved of that!
I want to know?

THE BOOMHOUSE MAN.

What appeals to me as my most interesting experience as a writer occurred a winter or two ago in a little lumber hamlet of the hill region of Kentucky. For a moment at least it was quite thrilling—rather too thrilling indeed to be useful as material to me with my straight and simple art standards. I have a groveling fondness for reproducing only the usual features of life, and this little episode, though it was pitifully commonplace in its setting, had about it something that was not only unusual, but nearly sublime.

I had gone down to the village in question with the ambitious design of seeing a "tide" in the river. Tides are peculiar to country months. They are useful to lumbermen and incidentally to writers, but they have their unpleasant features. My little hill hamlet, having doffed its green livery, was cowled in dark mud. Rain choked the air. The sun seemed to be submerged, and the roar of the river on the skirts of the town corroborated the innkeeper's assurance concerning the magnitude of the special "tide" which was in progress.

"She's booming for all that's in her," declared the innkeeper, an elderly man, who had enjoyed during the previous summer the happy privilege of being useful to me in many ways. "They look for the boom to bust tonight. Thousands of dollars afloat. You see that man by the stove? He's one of the big timber fellers from up north. Just come down. He'll lose heavy if she busts. Say, miss, take a look at that feller! You remember me telling you about the boomhouse man's daughter? Well, that feller—he was the man—he was Idy's beau."

I remembered the story. On a certain day in the previous June I was standing at the head of a mill chute looking down at the sunken river. Suddenly a dugout shot round the bend. The man in the rude thing seemed only half human. He was bent and shrunken, with a clay colored skin, matted red hair and such a woebegone vacuity of face as startled me. The innkeeper had related that this poor creature lived alone in the boomhouse, a shed on the river cliff, and that his duty was to cook for the loggers in time of tides.

"He's seen trouble," said the innkeeper. "Used to own a nice little farm up yonder and live well. He had an only daughter. Pretty as a peach, Idy was. Slim waisted, with kinky red hair and big eyes. He sat store by Idy. Nothing was too good for her. And one summer a son of one of the mill owners was down here settling up the mill books, and he took a fancy to Idy, and folks said it'd be a match. The boomhouse man was proud as a peafowl. And after the young feller went north again, why, Idy's paw he narrated around that the wedding was to come off on Christmas day and how't Idy was going up north to live in great style. But the young feller never came back. He never came back," repeated the innkeeper, with a graphic sort of pause. "And Idy—well, I always said if she'd of had a mother things would have been different. I always said she took the best way out of it. For 'bout the time tongues was beginning to wag Idy was missing one day, and they found her tangled up in the river drift yonder where the sandbar reaches across the shallows."

"And what did her father do?"

"Do? Oh, he acted like he'd got it between the eyes. Kind of daft. Ain't been just right ever since."

This tragic narrative, which the innkeeper related with the equanimity of an epic poet, recurred to me vividly as I observed the man by the stove.

He was middle aged. The story lay 15 years behind him, but he had a chin which made me believe the innkeeper an honest chronicler.

He was stolid and well fed. Apparently life had laid no heavy penalty upon him.

He seemed too vulgar and heavy a type of humanity to invite exceptional treatment of fate, yet I saw him that night in rather a notable situation.

Just after dark the inkeeper and his daughter and I set out across the cliff path to see the river in active operation. We walked in the wind's teeth, with a splitting rain in our faces. It was cold and bleak. Then in an instant the river flashed in sight. Its whole freshet swollen current flamed with red from countless fire baskets and lanterns. Long shafts of vermilion stabbed the packed timber in the boom, struck across the climbing banks and made fiery lances of the pike poles in the loggers's hands.

Men were leaping about on the logs. In a flare of crimson I saw on the wedged in float the man who had been Ida's lover. He was working sturdily as any logman about, handling the heavy cables and shouting directions.

It was worth seeing, that mountain stream as it mouthed at the straining timber in the boom. It was worth seeing, but the air was cold and wet, and in the second hour of our watching the innkeeper's daughter, being upheld by neither hospitality nor ambition, besought me to accompany her to the boomhouse for the purpose of getting "thored out."

The boomhouse showed its little red window just below us on the rocks.

The two tiny rooms of the place looked warm and bright as we opened the door.

Half a dozen men were drinking coffee around an oven at a table. The boomhouse man, apathetic as ever, with his ruinous looking hair in his pale eyes, was frying bacon in a great skillet.

The innkeeper joined the throng at the board. His daughter and I sat by the stove in the inner room.

I shall never forget that room. The pattern of the homespun coverlet on the boomhouse man's pallet is indelibly with me.

Soothed by the heat, the innkeeper's daughter dozed off, with her feet on the hearth. I remember observing with dreamy interest the yellowness of the teeth exhibited in the graceful abandon of her slumber. I thought of snuff. I think I had a drowsy moment myself.

Some one stamped noisily into the other room and asked for whisky. I glanced out. It was the mill man of Idy's infatuation. He flung himself at length on a bench behind the cook stove and lay with shut eyes. His clothes were dripping with thin mud, and an air of utter weariness pervaded his attitude.

"He had scarcely looked at the boomhouse man. I glanced at him, however, and became aware that his aspect had changed. Something like life shone in the pale eyes under that unkempt hair. He was standing still, just staring with a half blind gaze at the man on the bench.

Suddenly he stepped forward like a shadow.

"It's you, ain't it?" he said.

The man on the bench shot round a startled gaze. He saw the revolver in the lean hand leveled toward him. He must have recognized Idy's father in the figure standing over him, sternly poised as to a deed of necessary vengeance.

"I knowed God A'mighty 'd give you up to me soon or late," said the old man simply. "I waited. They ain't nothin to say. You know what you're dyin for."

The whole thing was singularly passionless and without any aspect of tragedy. On the stove a panful of meat crackled. Noises from outside came distinctly. The candle flickered and cast a thread of light on the lifted face of the man on the bench.

I myself had a sense of inability to move or speak. The innkeeper's girl slept on. Whatever consciousness I had seemed to be in the millman's frame, passively awaiting a sharp, metallic click. There was no chance at all for him. He seemed to see this and to take it calmly.

"Go on," he said. "I wronged you. I've got—a little daughter—myself. If you've any heart in you—don't say—why"——

His voice broke.

The briefest instant passed. And then there was a sound, but not the sound we waited for. The boomhouse man moved a little. The rigor left his form, and I saw his arm fall slowly against his side.

"I ain't going to kill you," he muttered. "You got a daughter. Go and see as no black hearted villain steals her from you."—Eva W. McGlasson.

He Was Out.

A singular adventure befell a Buffalo woman at a large hotel in Berlin. She was making the tour of Europe with her two small children and could speak no language but English. One night, having retired early with the little ones, she was awakened by a peculiar noise, which she soon became convinced was made by some one trying to open the door between her room and the one adjoining.

She "wasn't a bit scared"—people never are under such circumstances—but she got up quickly, turned on the electric light and rang the bell. The sound at the door ceased suddenly, and pretty soon a "Dutchman," as she called him, appeared in answer to the bell.

"Speak English?" asked the woman—the usual first question.

"I shpeaks beem a leetle," was the reply.

"There is some one in the next room trying to open my door."

"No. He is out," said the man.

"But there is some one there—a robber—a burglar—don't you understand?"

"He is out. He vill be oen at halluf past swelf."

"No—a robber! a burglar! a thief—a thief, I tell you—a thief in the next room!"

"Vell," meditatively. "I do not t'ink he oes a t'ief, but he oes oedt. He vill be oen at halluf past swelf, and I—vill—tell—heem—zat—you—want—to—see—heem."—Harper's Bazar.

Answered.

Agony of mind distorted her classic features.

Kneeling upon the tufted floor of the front parlor, she held her clasped hands aloft.

"What have I done," she moaned, "that I should be thus cursed?"

Then she went on to relate amid sobs how many young and eligible men had come to call on her, how they had uniformly shown symptoms of an acquaintance ripening into love, how they had suddenly become cold and left with a few perfunctory words of farewell.

"Heaven help me," she cried, with all the earnestness of a distracted soul.

And even as she spoke a breeze stole into the window and gently turned her cooking school diploma toward the wall.

Ere yet another month had passed the cards were out.—Detroit Tribune.

Farm Lands In Different States.

The value of farming lands in this country is greatest in New Jersey. In 1880 farming lands averaged in New Jersey $65; Massachusetts, $30; Ohio, $46; New York, $44; Vermont, $30; Maryland, $32; Wisconsin, $23, and in some western states less than $5 per acre.—Charleston News and Courier.

The Conductor's Large Acquaintance.

"When I was out in Chicago at the opening of the World's fair," said a friend of mine, "I had occasion to make a call on some old acquaintances on the West Side. The streets in that portion of the city had many of them the baptismal names of women, and as I lived there at one time the calling of them by the car conductor sounded familiar to me, although it seemed to puzzle an old countryman on board, who was doubtless visiting Chicago for the first time. There were a number of ladies among the passengers, and as the conductor called out 'Elizabeth' the car stopped, and one of them got off. A few squares farther and there was the call 'Ada,' followed by a stop and the exit of another lady.

"The old countryman began to look interested, and when the next call came, 'May,' and he saw a lady gather up her bundles and walk down the aisle, he had a puzzed air. In quick succession there came 'Paulina,' 'Roberta' and 'Augusta,' followed by the departure of a passenger. The old man could not stand it any longer. His eyes bulged out, and making a rush for the platform he said in a stage whisper to the conductor, 'Great snakes, mister, do you know the names of all the women folks in this big town?'

"He had been under the impression that each woman who left the car answered to the name that was called out."—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Interesting People.

"What makes a person interesting?" It cannot be intellectual brilliancy, for we have all known men whose minds were stored with the best thought of the world, yet wholly failed to interest us; women whose brains were developed by the widest culture, yet were unable to appear other than dry as dust catalogues of knowledge. Think of the people who interest you and study their qualities, and how few you find possessing just the same traits.

It is all a matter of magnetic soul currents possibly. Why not? We can hardly dispute that some human bodies convey electricity much more readily than others. In almost any gathering of a dozen persons at least one will be found who possesses this strange power, the touch of whose hand can cause a sensation like that of touching an electric battery.

Is there anything impossible in the theory that souls have their electric currents, which pass more or less freely to and fro according to the individual power as conductor? Then we have but to assume that the person who interests us is one whose soul current mingles freely with our own. This is perhaps a more satisfactory explanation than the more commonly received one of animal magnetism, a quality on a lower plane and infinitely less subtle in character.—Boston Advertiser.

Earthquake Phenomena.

The wild, untamed earthquake is a terrible thing to encounter. The "quaking," the rending of the earth's surface and the other incidental [illegible] usually described are only a tithe of the real terrors of a seismic shock. To some the noise which precedes the real shock is more terror inspiring than the "quake" itself. Father Kircher describes these subterranean rumblings as "a horrid sound resembling that of an infinite number of chariots driven fiercely forward, mingled with the noise of cracking whips, neighing of horses and the cries of victory and despair on the part of the charioteers."

The sounds which preceded the great Lisbon earthquake are said to have resembled "the rumbling of empty omnibuses, chariots and barrels, the noise increasing in volume until it equaled the roar of a thousand cannons." Another peculiarity is the gyratory motion that is frequently imparted to sections of earth of greater or lesser area. At Colares in 1755 several stone houses in the lower quarters of the city were turned completely around, this, too, without rendering them uninhabitable.—St. Louis Republic.

Where Frank R. Stockton Lives.

Follow the Morristown road, past one country seat after another, for a quarter of a mile, and you come to Kitchell avenue. You are in Morristown now, but in reality nearer Madison. Turn to the left, and the first place you come to is surrounded by a low stone wall. Through iron gates a graveled roadway leisurely turns, and passing beneath huge evergreens reaches a yellow and white frame house, with a veranda in front and a tower at the farther end. Opposite the doorway, beneath the great trees, is a rustic seat and a rustic table.

Between two of the trees is swung a hammock, and in pleasant weather Frank R. Stockton lies in the hammock dictating his fanciful tales to his wife, who sits on the rustic settee. It is an ideal home for an author, situated upon an eminence commanding miles of country, removed from the main road and surrounded by a grove.—Newark Advertiser.

A New Crater In the Moon.

In a bulletin of the Astronomical society of the Pacific Professor Weinek, director of the observatory of Prague, who is a specialist in the study of the moon and to whom have been sent copies of the Lick negatives of the moon, has discovered in one of the Lick photographs a crater which is not to be found on Schmidt's map. This object, which is estimated to be about a quarter of a mile in diameter, is of sufficient size to have been seen by Schmidt, and it is difficult to imagine that the distinguished selenographer overlooked it.

Why He Didn't Shoot.

A man with a wife who has her own ways about doing things catches her now and then.

"My dear," he said the other morning as he was dressing, "I think you were right when you told me last night that there were burglars in the house."

"Why?" she asked nervously.

"Because all the money that was in my pockets when I went to bed is gone."

"Well," she said, with an I-told-you so air, "if you had been brave and got up and shot the wretch, you would have had your money this morning."

"Possibly, my dear, possibly," he said gingerly, "but I would have been a widower."

She laughed softly then and gave half of it back to him.—London Tit-Bits.

THE SIAMESE HAREM.

A COMPLETE CITY WHEREIN WOMAN'S REIGN IS ABSOLUTE.

Its Government, Amusements and Romances—The Elopement of a Beautiful Princess Leads to a Trial For Witchcraft. A Slave's Heroic Devotion.

Extremely interesting are the stories of harem life in Siam told by Mrs. A. H. Leonowens, an English woman who spent six years at the courts of the late king. She was employed as a governess for the king's children, 63 in number, the present king being one of her best pupils. Her description of the city of Nang Harm, or Veiled Women, is full of interest. The 9,000 inhabitants of this city, which is inclosed by the inner of two parallel walls around the royal palace, are all women and children. No man, save the king and the priests, dare ever enter its precincts. Here live the royal princesses, the wives, concubines and female relatives of the king, with their numerous slaves and attendants.

Connecting the city with the two palaces are covered entrances for the women. At the end of each of these passages is a bas-relief representing the head of a sphynx with a sword through his mouth and bearing this inscription, "Better that a sword be thrust through thy mouth than that thou utter a word against him who ruleth on high." Not far off are the barracks of the amazons, the women's hall of justice and the dungeons, where female justices daily administer justice to the inhabitants of this woman's city.

There is also a temple, a gymnasium and a theater, where the great ladies assemble in the afternoon to gossip, play games or watch the dancing girls. In this city live also the mechanical slaves, who ply their trades for the benefit of their mistresses. It is, in fact, a city. It has its own laws, its judges, police, guards, prisons, executioners, markets, merchants, brokers, teachers and mechanics. Every function is exercised by women and by women only.

The women of the harem amuse themselves in the early and late hours of the day by gathering flowers in the palace gardens, feeding the birds and goldfishes, twining garlands for the heads of the children, listening to reading by slaves and especially in bathing. When the heat is not oppressive, they plunge into the pretty, retired lakes, swimming and diving like flocks of brown water fowl. They play at chess, cards and dice, and some of them are decidedly skillful.

Mrs. Leonowens describes a trial for witchcraft which occurred while she was at the palace. It seems that during the king's absence a beautiful princess disappeared from the harem, and in her place remained only a deaf and dumb slave girl. The day of the trial three women, half stupefied by the foul air of the damp cell in which they had been imprisoned, were conducted to the great court hall of the temple, where the trial for witchcraft was to take place. A procession of astrologers, wizards and witches, who receive handsome salaries from the king, filed into the temple and took their places.

Then came the chief judge of the supreme court and his secretary to report the trial to the king. The prisoners, when brought in, proved to be May-Peah, who was the deaf and dumb changeling, and the two handmaidens of the princess. They were guarded by 50 amazons. The crowd, who looked upon May-Peah as a veritable witch, was breathless with expectation. Conch shells were now blown to summon the holy man of the woods, who soon appeared on the opposite bank of the river, plunged into it and came and took his place beside the prisoners. This strange mortal, who lived the life of an orang outang, had a remarkably fine, sensitive face and was always called to aid the court in its spiritual examinations.

At the command of the judge the two amazons who were on duty on the night of the abduction testified that a tall, dark figure, with a dagger in one hand and a ponderous bunch of keys in the other, had entered the hall. They saw her go to the cell of the princess, open it with one of the mysterious keys and lead her forth. As they were paralyzed and unable to move from the spot, the strange figure reappeared, passed by them quickly into the cell and closed the door. To the questions of the wizards May-Peah returned no answer.

At a signal an alarm gong was struck immediately behind her, and being taken by surprise she turned to see whence the sound came. The wily judges then shouted, "It is plain that you can speak, for you are not deaf." She was forthwith condemned to all the tortures of the rack. The holy man of the woods on hearing this uttered a wild cry of "Yah" (forbear) and declared that she was powerless to speak because under the influence of witchcraft. One of the wise women suggested that some magic water should be poured into her mouth. On opening it they fell back with horror and cried: "Brahma! Brahma! An evil fiend has torn out her tongue."

Immediately the unhappy woman became the object of pity and even adoration. The ceremony of exorcism was gone through, and she and her companions were fully acquitted of any complicity with the devil, each receiving a sum of money and being set at liberty.

May-Peah's friends afterward told Mrs. Leonowens that it was she who had terrified the amazons, released the princess and led her to a boat in which were the lover prince and two friends. As there was not room for all, May-Peah refused to leave the companions of her beloved mistress, and, full of terror lest by the dreadful torture which she knew awaited her she might be forced to betray those who were dearer to her than her own life, she with one stroke of her dagger deprived herself of the power of ever uttering an intelligible sound.

The Whistling Tree.

A species of acacia, which grows very abundantly in Nubia and the Soudan, is also called the "whistling tree" by the natives. Its shoots are frequently, by the agency of the larvæ of insects, distorted in shape and swollen into a globular bladder from 1 to 2 inches in diameter. After the insect has emerged from a circular hole in the side of this swelling, the opening, played upon by the wind, becomes a musical instrument nearly equal in sound to a sweet toned flute.—New York Telegram.

Kant's Relaxations.

The only relaxation Kant, the celebrated German philosopher, allowed himself was a walk, which he invariably took during his life at Koenigsberg at about the same hour every afternoon. His usual stroll was along the banks of the Pregel toward the Freidrich's fort, and in these walks he was always a careful observer of the phenomena of nature. He told his friends one day how, as he passed a certain building in his daily walk, he had noticed several young swallows lying dead upon the ground.

On looking up he discovered, as he fancied, that the old birds were actually throwing their young ones out of the nests. It was a season remarkable for the scarcity of insects, and the birds were apparently sacrificing some of their progeny to save the rest. "At this," added Kant, "my intellect was hushed. The only thing to do here was to fall down and worship."

Another great philosopher, Bishop Butler, used to take his recreation, according to one of his chaplains, in a somewhat singular manner. He would walk for hours in the little garden behind his palace at Bristol "in the darkest night which the time of the year could afford."—Chambers' Journal.

The Little Red Schoolhouse.

The essential value of teaching, from the district school up to the university, lies, I believe, in the contact of mind and character between the teacher and taught, and if this be so, then the little red schoolhouse, with its single teacher and few pupils, is a better institution than the big schoolhouse, with 50 or more scholars to the teacher and occasional visits from other skilled instructors. Were I a school committee man or an overseer of Harvard college, I would ransack heaven and earth, if possible, to find teachers with some originality of intellect and with that force and virility of character which impress themselves upon the plastic minds and hearts of young people. And, having found them, I should trouble myself very little about "courses" and textbooks and laboratory implements.

I venture to state this as a general proposition: Wherever teaching has been recognized as peculiarly successful, whether in schools or universities, the success has been due to the ability of the instructor and not to the excellence of the system under which or to the richness of the appliances through which he worked.—Outlook.

French Politeness.

Suppose French politeness is a myth, it is one to be cultivated the world over. Even the humblest peasant in the smallest province is endowed with an all conquering courtesy that is brought into play in the most commonplace matters. If our men could only be taught some of it, how much more easily would run the wheels of life's machinery! Business is business, of course. The rush and worry of money getting dwarf the real nature, yet at the same time stocks would act no more irregularly, bills would be no less ready to be paid, panics would occur no more frequently if the arbitrators of great affairs would but remember to bring into their business life a little more of the softening influence of refined courtesies that are the flowers in a meadow of rank weeds.—New York World.

The Best Language For Telephoning.

The French language, it appears, is better adapted to the purpose of the telephone than the English. It is stated that the large number of sibilant or hiss syllables in English renders it a less easy and accurate means of communication. Some English words are especially difficult of transmission by telephone. The word "soldier" is cited as one of these. Proper names frequently occur in the midst of an otherwise perfectly audible and intelligent conversation which the ear cannot possibly catch. These must be spelled out, involving delay.—Electricity.

Considerable Mutuality.

Mrs. Lakeside—You are Mr. Porkchop's second wife, are you not?

Mrs. Porkchop—Yes, he was married once before.

"That's unpleasant. Whenever you have a little row, he can bring up his first wife and brag about her goodness."

"He never tried it but once, and then I told him about what nice men my three other husbands were."—Texas Siftings.

An Illustration.

"There," said Miss Frances E. Willard, closing her fist and presenting it as an object lesson to her interested audience, "is union—and that"—suddenly letting every separate finger fly limply apart, "is diversity. Which is the stronger?"

THE NOMINEES FOR SELECTMEN.

The republican nominees for selectmen are worthy the united support of the party. Capt. Nathan Small is a man of honor and integrity, a staunch republican and by service upon the board of selectmen is qualified by experience to assume the duties for which he has been selected by his party. He has been honored with positions of responsibility and trust repeatedly and always performed the duties of office to the satisfaction of the people. If character, ability and experience find favor with the people he is the man for the place.

Mr. A. W. Dickey is a well-known, live and capable business man; and his temperament and training make him a desirable man for the second place on the ticket. He is highly respected as a citizen and possesses every qualification to make a first-class official.

Both candidates are to the manor born, have a just sense of the public needs and may be relied upon to conduct the affairs of the town with as much enterprise and economy as any two men who can be selected for these offices in the town.

We hope the republicans of the city will take a lively interest in Monday's meeting and show by the total vote that they did all they could to return the party to power. If every republican will give his attention to the contest there is no question as to the result.

Norwich in 1893 should be again placed in the ranks with her sister republican towns.

THE PUBLIC LIBRARY.

The trustees of the public library will come before the electors of the town on Monday and ask for an appropriation to continue the Otis library as a free public institution. Since its enlargement and rearrangement under the supervision of Librarian Trumbull it has taken a shape of which the people should feel proud. In its attractiveness and convenience it compares favorably with the best public libraries of this state, and the utmost courtesy is extended to every patron, and the reading room is a resort to which every citizen is welcomed.

The library is doing as much business in proportion to the population of the town as the libraries of Providence or Hartford. The average output of books is about two hundred daily, and a spirit of appreciation is everywhere manifested in the institution and its work. It affords a good opportunity for the public to procure entertaining and edifying books, for the pupils of the schools to consult standard works; and it is the intention of the management to place upon its shelves books suitable for apprentices and mechanics who desire to make progress in the branch of manufacture in which they are engaged.

It is one of the most useful institutions in the city, affords an unending amount of entertainment and information, and there is no doubt that a sufficient appropriation will be voted Monday to make it a model institution, both in what it contains and the way in which it is to be conducted.

EMPLOYMENT REGISTRATION.

The Springfield, Mass., board of trade has established a bureau of employment registration for the unemployed, and the plan is being resorted to in other places. Speaking of this new enterprise The Springfield Union says: "It is gratifying to note the readiness with which the employment registration bureau of the board of trade is being made use of by local men and women who are out of work. Over 100 registered in the first three days the books were open, and the entries continue to come in rapidly. All kinds of occupations are represented, and the list includes a considerable number of skilled workmen, whose misfortune has deprived temporarily of paying situations. The city clerk of Northampton has opened a similar bureau for labor applicants, and he reports the number of entries as surprisingly large. He suggests that it will be wise for the Meadow City to make all necessary public changes and repairs during this period of business depression, thus giving employment to some of the most needy applicants. This policy is being adopted in many New England towns with good results, and there can be no objection to it so long as care is taken to avoid extravagance in public matters.

What must be done in the way of public work may best be done now, and it should be done as far as possible by the men and women who have suffered most in the business reverses. It is most important, however, that business men who are in want of help should turn to the public employment bureaus and make use of this new organization system in selecting their employes. Unless this becomes the general practice of manufacturers and merchants, there can be little permanent advantage derived from the registration system."

THERE IS HOPE.

The good-road agitation has opened the eyes of the democratic selectmen of Norwich, and the mass of evidence showing the advantages to property and to business of good and permanent roads, and the cheapness of their maintenance, have prompted them to address the electors of the town upon the important matter of highways as follows:

"We would call attention to the fact that during the past thirty years a sum approaching $400 000 has been expended on the highways outside the limits of the city. The sum so expended is sufficient to macadamize the entire road mileage, but it has produced no enduring roads."

Here is cause for hope and congratulation, for the policy of the past three decades is hereby condemned, and the adoption of a new and better policy foreshadowed.

It is a shame to have to confess that four hundred thousand dollars have been spent upon the town roads without a permanent mile of road to show for it; but with this Columbian year a new era for improved highways has dawned. But the democratic method of accomplishing it should be disapproved. The selectmen [illegible] as an economical measure that all the principal highways be macadamized and the payment of such improvements be provided for by the issuance of bonds payable in twenty or thirty years at a low rate of interest.

The republican party disapproves of this scheme for increasing the town's debt, and have against it a scheme to build sections of macadamized roads from appropriations made for them each year.

This public improvement should be commenced to help the men who are idle and dependent the present winter, if the necessities of labor require it, but no debt should be incurred.

The Gilder and White Episode.

Two more of them have emerged. Two more "close personal friends." Never was statesman so blessed with "close personal friends" as President Cleveland.

Only a few weeks ago, when the country was greatly disturbed over a report that the president had undergone an operation on his jaw, at a time when the American people would have cheerfully swapped off the jaws of a dozen senators for one of the president's wisdom teeth, Mr. Elias Cornelius Benedict, of Broad Street, in this city, came forward in a self-sacrificing way which the voters of Connecticut will doubtless remember at the next election of governor in that state, and administered relief to the public anxiety by a statement which with great reluctance he permitted to be accompanied by a portrait of himself as a guarantee of good faith, that the president had only had two teeth pulled, that they were pulled one at a time and not tumultuously and that he played cribbage with his usual luck the same evening. The president was saved from the annoyance of having to talk about his teeth publicly by the prompt and self-sacrificing action of his "close personal friend."

And now two more of them are on deck. Mr. Richard Watson Gilder and Mr. Horace White have waltzed in, hand in hand. One a poet, the other a political economist. Both earnest advocates of reform and "close personal friends" of the president. One indulges in fancies, the other attends very closely to facts. One writes short verses, the other long essays. The reader of Mr. Gilder's verses as they appear in his printed books is struck by the extent of the margins, and by the fact that after starting in, as it were, so suddenly, they seem to stop so quick; the first thought of the reader is, "Where's the rest of it?" Mr. White's essays, on the contrary, do not start with any such suddenness; nor do they end in anywhere near the same time as Gilder's verses. When White gets through, the subject is exhausted. So also is the reader. It is not known whether Mr. Gilder ever read any of his verses to Mr. Cleveland—from the continuance of their friendly relations it is thought not—but he was quite frequent on the porch at Buzzard's Bay, and it was intimated at one time that he had a sure thing for a foreign mission. The fact that the president has not sent him out of the country seems pretty positive proof that Gilder has not yet read any of his verses to him. . . . .

It appears that the two were sitting together one night last April in the City club. The millennium had been under way about a month and was not working well. Both were sad. They had heard that somebody was going to get a foreign mission who had paid $50,000 to the Cleveland campaign fund, and as "close personal friends" of the president they felt that something ought to be done about it to prevent his disgracing himself and creating scandal. . . . . He mustn't be appointed. We must give him back his money and save the president's good name." "I'll give $1,000 myself toward it." "And I another," responded White. So they started out for the $50,000 to pay back to the bad man who was buying an office and bringing the president into disgrace; and presently they had it all subscribed and became momentarily cheerful. Then a difficulty arose. The bad man would not take back the $50,000. He treated the poet and political economist with such disdain that if one should write a scorching satire on him five lines long that "on the stretched forefinger of all time" should "sparkle forever," and the other should give him a twenty five column essay crammed with facts and fortified with statistics, nobody could blame them. It is believed that he told them to "get out." What was still worse, the president, when waited upon by the poet Gilder, after receiving three letters apiece on the subject in rapid succession from the two close friends, gave the poet to understand that he had got in over his head and had better swim out.—[N. Y. Tribune.

The new combination of Smart Weed and Belladonna, as used in Carter's Backache Plasters, has proved to be one of the best that could be made. Try one of these popular plasters in any case of weak or lame back, backache, rheumatism, neuralgia, soreness of the chest or lungs, and you will be surprised and pleased by the prompt relief. In bad cases of chronic dyspepsia, a plaster over the pit of the stomach stops the pain at once. Ask for Carter's Smart Weed and Belladonna Backache Plasters. Price 25 cents.

For Over Fifty Years

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used by millions of mothers for their children while teething. If disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of Cutting Teeth, send at once and get a bottle of "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for Children Teething. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures Diarrhœa, regulates the Stomach and Bowels, cures Wind Colic, softens the Gums and reduces Inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for children teething is pleasant to the taste and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States. Price twenty-five cents a bottle. Sold by all druggists throughout the world. Be sure and ask for "MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP."

If sick headache is misery, what are Carter's Little Liver Pills if they will positively cure it? People who have used them speak frankly of their worth. They are small and easy to take.

I have had catarrh for twenty years, and used all kinds of remedies without relief. Mr. Smith, druggist, of Little Falls, recommended Ely's Cream Balm. The effect of the first application was magical. It allayed the inflammation, and the next morning my head was as clear as a bell. I am convinced its use will effect a permanent cure. It is soothing and pleasant, and I strongly urge its use by all sufferers.—[Geo. Terry, Little Falls, N. Y.

Nervous Dyspepsia.

Senator James F. Pierce, of New York, writes:

"For the past two years I have suffered very much from an aggravated form of nervous dyspepsia. I have resorted to various remedial agents, deriving but little benefit. A few months since a friend of mine suggested the trial of ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS. Following the suggestion, I have been using the same with the happiest effects. To those similarly afflicted let me suggest the manner of their use. I place one over my stomach, one over the hepatic region, and one on my back. The effect is excellent. From the day I commenced their use have been slowly but surely improving, and am quite confident that by continuing I shall again be restored to my accustomed health."

There is no one article in the line of medicines that gives so large a return for the money as a good porous strengthening plaster, such as Carter's Smart Weed and Belladonna Backache Plasters.

A Retired Business Woman

A Page From Her History.

The important experiences of others are interesting. The following is no exception: "I had been troubled with heart disease 26 years, much of that time very seriously. For five years I was treated by one physician continuously. I was in business, but obliged to retire on account of my health. A physician told my friends that I could not live a month. My feet and limbs were badly swollen, and I was indeed in a serious condition when a gentleman directed my attention to Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, and said that his sister, who had been afflicted with heart disease, had been cured by the remedy, and was again a strong healthy woman. I purchased a bottle of the Heart Cure, and in less than an hour after taking the first dose I could feel a decided improvement in the circulation of my blood. When I had taken three doses I could move my ankles, something I had not done for months, and my limbs had been swollen so long that they seemed almost putrified. Before I had taken one bottle of the New Heart Cure the swelling had all gone down, and I was so much better that I did my own work. On my recommendation six others are taking this valuable remedy."—Mrs Morgan, [illegible] W. Harrison St., Chicago, Ill.

Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, a discovery of an eminent specialist in heart disease, is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid. It is positively free from all opiates or dangerous drugs.

END APPEARS NIGH.

Silver Battle Said to Be Drawing to a Close.

STEWART'S ATTACK AIDS REPEAL.

Free Silver Democrats Will Not Aid Obstruction.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—The persistent attacks of Senator Stewart upon the president has at last drawn the lines between the free silver Democrats and the silver state Republicans. The former have been quietly conferring among themselves, and have decided not to follow any further the extreme course pursued by Senator Stewart and his associates on that side of the chamber. The defense of the president by Senator Morgan, who is one of the strongest advocates of free silver, represents the position of about every silver Democrat. The attitude which the free silver Democrats propose to take in the future has been communicated to the president. They have made it known that they will not permit themselves to be used for the obstruction and delay of a vote after a full and general debate.

The new conditions produced by Stewart's wanton and ill-advised assaults upon the president have greatly strengthened the administration position by reducing the advocates of obstruction to the senators representing the silver states. This will leave

A Very Small Minority,

composed of Stewart and Jones of Nevada, Teller and Wolcott of Colorado, Dubois and Shoup of Idaho, Power of Montana, and Pettigrew of South Dakota, who propose to carry on the fight to the bitter end. There are a few allies, like Kyle of South Dakota, Allen of Nebraska, and Peffer of Kansas who will co-operate with the obstructionists. This will give the free silver forces but 11 votes in the senate, which would not be sufficient to enable them to call the ayes and nays, as it requires one-fifth of the senators present for that purpose. This parliamentary condition would prevent them from using the roll call to carry out their dilatory tactics. They can resort, however, to what they are pursuing—a demand every day for the presence of a quorum. When the closing stage of the parliamentary battle is fairly over, they will not have this motion to fall back upon, as the friends of repeal propose to have

A Quorum on Hand at all Times.

The administration managers in the senate have canvassed every possible phase of the remaining stages of this controversy. It assumes the majority against the extreme silver men in favor of taking a vote will be so overwhelming that they will not be able to stand out very long and will be finally forced to submit. This is a consensus of opinion among the entire body of the Republican and Democratic senators, exclusive of the 11 ultra-silver men. The talking power of the 11 irreconcilables is stated to possess wonderful qualities of endurance, but if it continues to be as weak and rambling as that exhibited by Senator Stewart it is believed that it will soon exhaust itself. The contest is now assuming a form which the managers think points to

To the Beginning of the End.

There remain about 10 or 12 senators who wish to address the senate on the pending question. There are also several resolutions which the silverites propose to discuss during the morning hour.

Senator Voorhees said today that if good progress be made during the balance of the week in the general debate the present order would be continued into next week, but if the obstruction senators persisted in injecting dilatory propositions for the purpose of consuming time the administration managers would feel compelled to ask for a further extension of the time of debate from seven to 10 hours thereafter. He did not wish to extend the sessions beyond 6 o'clock, as many of the senators did not wish to return for night sessions. If, however, it be found necessary in order to advance the debate, he felt confident that the senators would submit to this inconvenience.

VAN ALEN TALKS.

Says He is an American Citizen and Repudiates Charges Against Him.

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 28.—James J. Van Alen has been interviewed here by a correspondent. Mr. Van Alen said he knew no cause for the libellous attacks made upon him. He was asked if it was true that he had given $50,000 for the election of Grover Cleveland, with the promise that he was to be appointed minister to Italy. He answered that he knew Mr Whitney personally, and that in October, 1892, that gentleman asked him to help the "cause."

He responded, being a Democrat and a believer in the principles of Mr. Cleveland's tariff views, and he also sent several checks in addition. At that time Mr. Van Alen never dreamed either of the Italian or any other mission. Mr. Cleveland was elected and Mr. Whitney told Mr. Van Alen that he was entitled to recognition, and he suggested the Italian mission, a position he said he was competent to fill. This was agreeable to Mr. Van Alen, and here the matter rested.

Mr. Van Alen repudiates the charge that he said America was not suitable for ladies and gentlemen to reside in. "Why," said Mr. Van Alen, "if I entertained such views I would not have erected this villa and spent the fortune I have in furnishing it. I am 48 years old, and I have spent two-thirds of my life in this country. My father, the late General J. H. Van Alen, was a typical American. He was a resident of New York, where I was born, and I am not ashamed of his public or private career in the metropolis.

"Deny, please, that I am a graduate of Oxford college, and also say that all my investments are in America, the land of my birth, where I receive a better return than I would if I had invested abroad. I graduated from no college. I believe that the greatest heritage I have is the fact that I am an American citizen, entitled to protection as such from vile assaults upon my character as a man and as an American citizen."

HELPING THE UNDER DOG.

Is it the Duty of a Man Witnessing a Dog Fight to Interfere?

BOSTON, Sept. 28.—Is it the duty of a man who witnesses a dog fight to attempt to separate the beasts? That is a question that the full bench of the supreme judicial court has been called upon to answer in a case argued before it this week.

The plaintiff in the case saw two dogs fighting in the street. Being something of a humanitarian, he stepped in in behalf of the under dog, who rewarded him by transferring his grip from his antagonist to his would-be rescuer. The plaintiff who was severely bitten then turned about and brought a suit against the owner of the dog, and to the surprise of the defendant, who thought he had a sure thing in defense, recovered a verdict of over $300.

The defendant asked for rulings which the superior court refused, and the case went to the supreme court, who will decide as to a by-stander's duty in the premises. The defendant's claim is that the plaintiff was a trespasser from the very instant he took hold of the dogs, and cannot, under the correct rules of law, recover.

FREE FROM DEBT.

All Indebtedness of the World's Fair to Be Paid Oct. 9.

CHICAGO, Sept. 28.—On Chicago day, Oct. 9, the exposition will be free from debt, excepting, of course, the stock subscriptions, which are not a legal liability. The finance committee has carefully estimated the probable income of the exposition prior to Oct. 9, and has unanimously recommended to the executive committee that the remaining 30 per cent corporation bonds be paid on that date. The floating indebtedness on contracts and the payroll will be cleaned up that day also. The committee estimates that $1,500,000 will be required to accomplish this purpose.

The executive committee of the board of directors, at its meeting last night, concurred in this recommendation.

GERMANY'S NAVY

Will be Increased to Enable That Country to Assume the Offensive.

BERLIN, Sept. 28.—It is the intention of the government to increase the navy, with a view to enabling Germany to assume the offensive in the event of war.

The naval authorities have decided to adopt a new system of preparing and launching torpedoes from swinging turrets, which makes possible the discharge of torpedoes regardless of the course on which the vessel from which they are fired is sailing. Hitherto the direction of the torpedoes has depended upon the vessel's course.

Husband and Wife Found Dead.

SANFORD, Fla., Sept. 28.—The bodies of J. H. Balsley and his wife were found in their residence at Paola station yesterday. Balsley had been dead longer than his wife by 36 to 48 hours. A note in the wife's handwriting was found. It said: "I can't stand anything more." The couple who were well to do, had lived very unhappily together.

Noted Shoe Manufacturer Dead.

NORTH ADAMS, Mass., Sept. 28.—Calvin T. Sampson, one of the most noted shoe manufacturers in the country, died this morning at his home, after a lingering illness. He was born in Stamford, Vt., Oct. 2, 1826, and was a descendant of Abraham Sampson, who came to Plymouth in 1629.

Prize Fighters Punished.

PORTLAND, Or., Sept. 28.—Twelve persons, indicted for participating in or arranging for prize fights in this city, have pleaded guilty, and each has been sentenced to pay a fine of $1000 or imprisonment in the state penitentiary for 500 days. This was the lightest sentence provided by the law.

Died at the Hospital.

LAWRENCE, Mass., Sept. 28.—Sanford W. Brown, who was struck by a train at South Lawrence last evening, died at the hospital this morning. He was 38 years old and leaves a widow and two sons.

ORDER OF PENTE

Cannot Meet Maturing Obligations—Certificate Holders Will Lose.

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 28.—It has recently developed that the Order of Pente will not be able to meet all of its maturing certificates, and some of the certificate holders will lose by their investment.

The order is one belonging to the same family as the Iron Hall, and has only been in existence for a few years. The certificates were for $500 each, and matured in five years. It was organized on the assessment plan, and was authorized to make assessments without limit, according to the necessities of the order.

During the past year there have been levied something like 168 assessments, which will cause a loss of about $40 to each certificate holder who became a member during the first year of the order, and probably a loss of the same amount to those who entered the second year. The officers of the order cannot tell at this time just what effect the loss will have upon the order.

KANSAS COURT.

Declares the Eight Hours a Day's Labor Law Unconstitutional.

WICHITA, Kan., Sept. 28.—In the district court yesterday Judge Reed declared the state law constituting eight hours labor a day's "unconstitutional." He is the first district judge to pass on this act. He holds the law contrary to both the state and federal constitutions and declares it a restraint on the liberty of action guaranteed by both, which permits the making of a lawful contract in a lawful way.

Claims aggregating hundreds of thousands of dollars for overtime under this act are pending against every county and city in the state.

CUT OFF BY FLAMES.

Several Small Villages Destroyed and Many Families Missing.

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—A special from Durango, Mex., says: "Disastrous forest fires, attended by heavy loss of life, have been raging in the Sierra Madre mountains, 150 miles southwest of here, for several days.

Thousands of acres of timber and grass have been destroyed, and several small villages swept away. Many families are reported missing, and they are believed to have been cut off and to have perished in the flames.

ONE SHIP EACH MONTH.

Heavy Shipments of Grain From the Port of San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 28.—Grain vessels are receiving good dispatch at this port. There have been 28 wheat vessels cleared this month up to date, and there are four vessels in the stream waiting for clearance papers.

There is no other port in this country that is sending out so many grain ships. And it is the first month since January, 1892, that San Francisco has averaged a grain ship for every day in the month.

PHILOSOPHICAL COGITATIONS.

Never lose sight of an honorable enemy—he will make a good friend.

Character gives splendor to youth and awe to wrinkled skin and gray hair.

The surest and shortest way to prove a work possible is strenuously to set about it.

We are always complaining that our days are few and acting as though there would be no end of them.

Circumstances form the character; but, like petrifying waters, they too often harden while they form.

Nature has written a letter of credit upon some men's faces which is honored almost wherever presented.

If you have great sorrows, keep them to yourself unless you have some bosom friend that will listen to you with a sympathetic ear.

The talent of success is nothing more than doing what you can do well, and doing well whatever you do without a thought of fame.—Montreal Star.

THEY HAVE NO COAL.

Women and Children on the Verge of Starvation.

SAD EFFECT OF MINERS' STRIKE.

Sufferings of the Collier and Factory Workers Becoming Intense.

LONDON, Sept. 28.—The scarcity of coal, due to the miners' strike, has led to a further rise of 1 shilling per ton on the London coal exchange. The demand is strong, but business is trifling, as virtually no stocks are offering. Holders of inland coal refuse to sell, preferring to await a further advance, which many believe is certain to come by Friday next.

Merchants yesterday readily bought the poorest quality of Scotch coal at 1 guinea per ton, and doubtless they will retail it at 30 shillings per ton. Only seaborne coal is available. The decline in the traffic receipts of the various railways owing to the strike is very great.

Meanwhile the sufferings of the collier and factory workers are becoming intense. It is computed that there are 20,000 women and children

On the Verge of Starvation.

Many of these subsist on raw vegetables, having no coal with which to cook their food. Several pawnbrokers in the strike districts have given up business, because they have not enough capital to enable them to advance money to sufferers on chattels.

In the Castleford district a relief committee is vainly trying to feed 2000 families, rendered destitute by the stopping of the strike pay. Meetings of Federation miners were held in a number of the strike districts yesterday to appoint and instruct delegates to the strikers' conference to be held in Derby on Friday.

At all of these meetings resolutions were adopted in favor of resuming work in all collieries whose owners will allow the old rate of wages, provided the owners promise not to interfere with the levy for funds to be made by the federation officials on all members. These resolutions were not, however, supported unanimously. Moreover, it is not likely that the mine owners will accede to the federation conditions.

The striking coal miners in Warwickshire balloted yesterday on a proposal to resume work at 5 per cent reduction in January. The feeling among the men will be known when it is stated that, out of the 2200 men who voted on the proposal, only two cast their ballots in its favor.

The Gas Turned On.

BOSTON, Sept. 28.—David F. Williams, 45 years of age, from San Francisco, who has been stopping at the Coolidge House on Court street, near Bowdoin square, committed suicide some time last night at that house. His body was discovered this morning lying on the outside of the bed in his room and both burners of the gas jets were wide open.

Trefethen's Trial Ended.

BOSTON, Sept. 28.—In the Trefethen trial today his counsel ex-Governor Long consumed the forenoon in concluding his argument. At 2 o'clock the attorney general began his summing up for the state making an effective presentation of the points against the prisoner. The jury will, it is expected, get the case at a late hour this afternoon.

Warden Harper Discharged.

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 28.—Thomas R. Harper, who was charged with altering the returns in the March municipal election in ward 1 and who has been on trial for the past three days, was formally discharged this morning, the jury having disagreed. The Democrats are jubilant.

THE SCIENTIST.

Petroleum, which is popularly supposed to be derived from coal, is, according to advanced science, more probably the result of the action of water on metal.

The results of calculations show that for a given tank capacity and carbonic acid and air stored at the same pressure, the liquefied carbonic acid is capable of developing four to five times more power than compressed air.

THE STOCK MARKET.

Dealings In Leading Securities In Boston and New York.

BOSTON, Sept. 28.—In the outside market call money is quoted at 5 to 6 per cent, and time money is nominally 6 per cent.

Today's stock market was characterized by at least one novelty. That was the rather noticeable increase in the number of commission orders at the opening. The result was an early rally in some of the more active stocks, a rally still further assisted by London, which came from ½ to ¾ above the close here. London has it from some source that the senators in favor of repeal are going to force the silver minority in a test of physical endurance, and so actually tire them into a vote. It regards that as favorable. But the long-suffering public on this side unfortunately knows that in any such contest the minority would be at a decided advantage. They would only have to retain some one of their members on the spot to keep the rattle going while the majority would have to tend out in full numbers in order to maintain a quorum.

The only comfort that could be extracted out of the Washington situation today was the president's letter; and that was but a reiteration of what he had said before. It suggests no new course of action. It hints at no latent authority over recalcitrant members of his party. In the meantime the reports of business depression which came to the street grew more serious under delay. Merchants and manufacturers are having greater difficulty in placing their paper. Bankers are becoming more conservative again. People who think it is only the speculators who are clamoring should visit the offices of the leading bankers.

Sugar Refining was the most active stock on the local list. It opened ⅝ up to 83½ and advanced during the morning to 87¾, while the preferred held steadily at 85. General Electric, under heavy selling by J. S. Bache & Co. of New York, said to be for Boston parties, dropped to 39¾, but subsequently advanced to 41. Atchison recovered the loss suffered through its decrease in earnings, opening ¼ up at 19¼ and strengthening to 19¾, while Chicago, Burlington and Quincy advanced from 79⅞ to 81⅛. The announcement that the New York, New England and Northern location had been allowed, gave another impetus to New England, and after opening at 25¾ it rose to 27¾.

Sarasate has had thirty-two watches given him at various times, several in the shape of violins.

The surface of man's lungs is estimated at 150 square feet, ten times the surface of his external body.

The first English school in America was opened in Massachusetts in 1635, with six pupils. Now the public schools of this country have 369,000 teachers, 13,000,000 scholars, and cost last year $145,734,867.

Some of the steamship companies employ more men than are enlisted in the second class navies of Europe.

There was recently given in Denmark a concert that may be regarded as absolutely unique as regards the instruments used. The instruments included two horns from the bronze age, which are believed to be at least 2,500 years old.

An Anecdote of Lord Lytton.

Many years ago when the elder Bulwer was in his prime a laborer on the estate was engaged to do a certain job of hard work. At the end of a week he carried his account to the bailiff, who said a week's work was worth 8 shillings and 6 pence. The man insisted that this was not enough and refused to settle, and every time he met the bailiff he would stop him and ask him for his money. Finally the bailiff became angry, discharged the man and refused to allow any farmer on the estate to hire him.

The man was forced to leave the neighborhood, but he was too poor to move any great distance, so that he was still within the circuit of the bailiff's ill will. Wherever he went this pursued him, and his life in consequence was a hard one. But all the time he kept telling his family and his friends that some day he would get the money which the Bulwer Lytton estate owed him.

He was well on in years, when one day he met a man in the road. It was the some time poet Owen Meredith, now come to the title, and English ambassador to France, at home on a visit.

"You are Lord Lytton, I believe," he said respectfully.

"Yes."

"Then, if you please, I should like you to pay an account which has been due me for a long time."

Lord Lytton looked at the account, and at his request the man told the whole story. The poet was very much affected and disturbed. Then he said:

"Well, I will do what I can to make it up to you."

He was as good as his word. He built a house at the gates of the park, put the man and his family into it, and gave it to them rent free, with other perquisites, so that he was entirely comfortable for the remainder of his days.—Hartford Courant.

The Wily Chinee.

A German Jew who keeps a pawnbroker's shop in Sydney is blessed with one daughter, who now and then keeps shop while her father attends sales on the lookout for bargains. During the temporary absence of old Moses recently a meek looking Chinaman walked into the shop and asked Rachel to show him some "wally good watchee."

Rachel handed down four from the shelf at the end of the counter marked respectively, "$50 watch," "$40 watch," "$30 watch" and "$10 watch," and arranged them in a line on the counter in the order of their value.

John inspected them, and taking advantage of Rachel's momentary inattention slipped the $10 watch into the place occupied by the $40 watch and handed over a $10 note saying:

"I takee cheapee watchee."

Shortly afterward Rachel detected the swindle and sought refuge in tears. On the return of old Moses she related the misadventure with many protestations of concern.

"Never mind, mine tear," said the father, with a dry chuckle, "dose vatches were all de same brice—$6—but vat a scoundrel dot Shinaman must pe, don't it?"—London Tit-Bits.

The Cause of Geysers.

Bunsen has explained the periodical eruption of geysers in such a satisfactory manner that doubt is no longer possible. A cavern filled with water lies deep in the earth under the geyser, and the water in this cavern is heated by the earth's internal heat far above 212 degrees, since there is a heavy hydrostatic pressure upon it arising from the weight of water in the passage or natural standpipe that leads from the subterranean chamber of the surface of the earth.

After a time the temperature of the water below rises, so that steam is given off in spite of the pressure, and the column in the exit tube is gradually forced upward. The release of pressure and the disturbance of the water then cause the contents of the subterranean chamber to flash into steam and expel the contents of the exit pipe violently. These eruptions may also be provoked by throwing stones or clods of turf into the basin of the geyser. The water in the cavern below is disturbed by this means.—Great Divide.

A Folding Bridge.

There is a peculiar folding bridge at Canal street, Chicago, at a place where the Chicago river is too narrow to permit the use of a swing bridge with a pier in the middle of the stream. It consists of a movable roadway which divides in the center over the middle of the stream. Each half of the bridge is hinged at about one-third of its length from the shore. This permits the parts overhanging the river to drop down in front of the abutments, while the shorter hinged portions rise, forming a gate which intercepts the passage of teams or pedestrians. The two halves of the bridge are supported by heavy bars reaching down from steel towers about 50 feet high.

The whole bridge is 177 feet long, the movable part 100 feet and the actual span over the Chicago river 80 feet. The roadway is 21 feet wide, and there is a seven foot passage on each side. The whole structure is built of steel and weighs 130 tons. It is operated by a 10 horsepower engine on each side of the river, aided by a system of counter weights, the machinery being below the level of the bridge. It is operated very quickly, and the span has been opened or closed in 15 seconds. The structure cost but about $40,000, including the masonry abutments, and is very strong, a 20 ton steam roller passing over it without serious deflection.—Exchange.

Indian Simplicity.

An amusing story comes from the Wabigoon Lake Indian reserve, Canada. It seems that white men, regardless of treaty stipulations, have been poaching upon the preserves of the Indians. The red man resented this, but were at a loss what to do about the matter, as the white men paid no heed to their objections.

After [illegible] debate among themselves they concluded to carry their case to the highest authority. The chief went to Barclay station, therefore, and sent the following cable message:

> To Prince of Wales, London:
> White men cutting timber on Eagle lake. Would you kindly come and settle matter? This was given to us. Please advise.
> KAH KIWAKAH, Chief Wabigoon Lake.

We may smile at the Indian's simplicity, but his confidence and his wrongs certainly deserve some consideration.—Youth's Companion.

Valuable Dyes for Cotton.

Recent discoveries have resulted in fast Diamond Dyes for cotton, pink, purple, orange, turkey-red, etc., that are absolutely non-fading colors. Washing with soap will not hurt the colors made by these dyes. A ten cent package makes a rich color on one pound of goods or lighter shades on from two to ten pounds. For coloring yarns, carpet rags, etc., they are the only reliable dyes. sep29d

The schooner-yacht Priscilla, which went ashore at Watch Hill in August, was floated Wednesday.

The steamer Summer Girl brought a party of Mystic people to the fair here yesterday. She is expected again today.

All the telephones except one at Watch Hill have been taken out—a sure sign that the season has ended and winter is at hand.

Today is known in the church calendar as the festival of St. Michael and All Angels. The services at Christ church are: Holy Eucharist at 11 a. m., and evening prayer at 4 p. m.

The New London Day says: "All but two of the local medical men have registered, as requested by law, at the town clerk's office. These two men have but two days more in which to make up their minds whether they expect to practice here next year or not." Doctors in all parts of Eastern Connecticut should register today or tomorrow if they expect to practice after Oct. 1.

The trolley poles along Laurel Hill avenue were painted Thursday afternoon. The guard wires were also stretched along the route. Mr. Seymour's men had finished their work on the rails, so that there was thought of running a trial car during the afternoon. This plan was not carried out, however, and the first car will run today. A stretch of concrete walk is being laid along the Bridge hill portion of the route.

It is reported that under the new management of the New York & New England road, the express freights are to be run through to New London by their locomotives; and when there is no steamer at Norwich the afternoon freight known as "the nigger freight" is to be run through to New London by a New York & New England engine, instead of being drawn to their destination by New London Northern locomotives as heretofore.

License Question in Stonington.

There is going to be a lively fight in the town of Stonington on the license question this year. Last year the town was carried for license by eight votes. The temperance people have investigated and find that 800 out of the 1,700 voters in the town did not vote on the license question last year, and they are going to get the delinquents up to the polls, if possible.

"A Life Sentence."

Tonight "The Lightning Patrol" will be produced. A meritorious production is promised.

A CHURCH WEDDING.

Haley—Wilcox.

A large number of people gathered at the church at Norwich Town Thursday at 6 30 p. m. to witness the marriage of Miss Elizabeth Kenyon Wilcox of this city to Mr. Francis Raymond Haley of Nova Scotia.

The wedding proved a noticeable and pleasant social event in every particular. The ceremony was impressively performed by the Rev. Asher H. Wilcox, father of the bride, assisted by the Rev. Chas. A. Northrop. Miss George Barker Gibbs acted as bridesmaid, and Mr. Alfred L. Aiken as best man. The ushers were Mr. J. S. Thatcher and Mr. C. P. Coggswell, Jr., of New Haven and Mr. W. S. Allis and Mr. Chas. A. Johnson of this city. Mr. Fred. Lester presided at the organ.

The novel and artistic decorations of golden rod arranged under the direction of Miss Day and Miss Gibbs formed a beautiful setting for the wedding scene.

A small reception was held at the residence of Mr. Wilcox, after which Mr. and Mrs. Haley started on their wedding trip with the heartiest good wishes of their many friends.

They will make their future home in Nova Scotia, where Mr. Haley has an appointment as professor in Acadia college.

GOOD POLICE WORK.

A Lost Watch Returned to the Owner.

Officer Cullen of New London was instrumental Thursday morning in securing for a lady temporarily residing there an elegant gold watch which she accidentally dropped as she was crossing the street in front of the Winthrop hotel, in a hurry to catch the 7 10 train over the Stonington road.

Officer Cullen made a hasty examination, but to no avail. Just then it occurred to a party that he had noticed a painter jump from an open wagon on which he was riding down street, pick up something from the ground and start for the ferry house on his way to Groton.

When the officer learned this he was not long in making up his mind what course to pursue. He promptly confronted the suspected man and told him he wanted the watch. The fellow at first denied finding anything, but the officer threatened him with arrest unless he gave up the property, and this was effective. Officer Cullen returned the watch to the lady, who overwhelmed him with thanks.

The Black Diamond, published in Carbon, Wyoming, on Sept. 21st, says: "Last Thursday evening Mr. Thomas Buckley and Miss Polly Sanders were married at the residence of Mr. Ben Buckley, Rev. Mr. Smith performing the ceremony. A great many friends of the contracting parties were present. The groom is one of Carbon's best known and most popular young men. The bride is a stranger to most people here, yet her pleasant face and cultivated, lady like ways are a sufficient passport. After the ceremonies at the house the band escorted the happy couple and their friends to Milliken's hall, where they were joined by many others, and a big free dance was indulged in till a late hour. The Black Diamond extends congratulations!"

Railroad Officials Deny the Report of a "Hold Up."

CONNELLSVILLE, Pa., Sept. 28.—It is reported here that an attempt was made last night to hold up the midnight express on the Baltimore & Ohio soon after the train left McKeesport. The report is denied by the officials of the company, but there was considerable excitement on the train when it arrived here half an hour late. One of the passengers said that soon after the train pulled out from McKeesport and had attained a good speed it was suddenly stopped. The train men rushed to the front and kept the passengers in the cars. It is supposed that part of the band of train robbers failed to carry out their part in the work, and those who stopped the train made good their escape. The train was filled with passengers returning from Chicago. In the express car was $82,000 in cash.

FIFTY MINERS ENTOMBED.

Awful Situation of Workmen in a Michigan Mine.

ONLY THREE SAVED.

Victims are Married Men—Rescuing Parties Hard at Work.

ISHPEMING, Mich., Sept. 29.—A heavy fall of ground occurred at the Mansfield mine, near Crystal Falls, this morning, entombing 50 men. The water at this mine rises fast, the ore being soft, and the chances of rescuing any of the unfortunates alive are very poor. The situation is awful and the scene around the large cave-in is heartrending. A rescuing party is doing everything possible to reach the poor fellows.

A dispatch from Iron Mountain says Fifty men were working at the mine and only three were saved. The buried men were all married. The mine was being worked by Corrigan, Ives & Co., of Cleveland.

MARQUETTE, Mich., Sept. 29.—A dispatch from Crystal Falls states that the Mansfield is seven miles east of that village on the Menominee range. The main shaft of the mine extends under the Michigamme river, and when the cave-in occurred it turned the stream into the mine, flooding it almost instantly. There were sixty men working in the mine when the disaster occurred, and of this number fifteen made their escape. It is not thought possible that any of the remaining forty men can be rescued alive.

Another Account.

IRON MOUNTAIN, Mich., Sept. 29.—With a terrible rush the Michigamme river broke through a bed weakened by mining into the Mansfield mine, six miles from here, between 9 and 10 o'clock last night, drowning twenty-eight men, who were at work directly under the cave-in. There were forty-six men in the mine when the accident occurred, but eighteen, who were working in the lower levels, managed to escape.

None of the bodies have been recovered and it is believed it will be necessary to divert the channel of the river before they can be secured. It is thought to be the worst mining disaster that ever happened in the Lake Superior district.

Already talk of suits for damages against the operators by relatives of the dead men is being heard. The mine was being operated by the receiver of Corrigan, Ives & Co., of Cleveland. The money loss will be $600,000. It is reported that the disaster was caused by taking down some layers of ore on the upper levels that should have been left to support the roof. The mine inspector of Iron county will conduct a rigid investigation into the cause of the disaster.

BANK TAX REPEAL.

Hearing on Mr. Oates' Bill Before the Banking Committee.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—The house committee on banking and currency had a hearing this morning on Mr. Oates' bill for the repeal of the 10 per cent. tax on state banks.

This bill varies from others in that it simply "suspends" the tax as to all notes issued to circulate as money, provided there shall first be deposited with the state treasurer or other safe depository an amount of lawful money of the United States or solvent bonds at par value of the state or municipalities equal to the aggregate amount of notes proposed to be issued, which shall be held as security, and provided, also, that the aggregate amount of such state bank issues shall in no case exceed $5 per capita of the population of the state.

Col. Oates made an elaborate argument in favor of his bill, which he said maintained federal supervision, with a limitation of what had been declared by the courts to be a lawful federal tax. He was in favor of the absolute repeal of the law, but there were members honestly opposed to that, and he would rather have a partial relief than be denied it altogether. He would have no objection to the deposit of the securities with the treasury department of the United States.

Oates admitted that it might extend somewhat the national bank system of examination to these banks. The advantage to be derived was the development of the local institutions in parts of the country where national banks were not numerous, thus affording an easy and constant local flow of money by preventing the present tendency of sending to congested centres what money there was in the country. Mr. Oates recognized the taxing power of the government, but said that the state bank tax grew out of the exigencies of the time when the act was passed.

In answer to a question from Mr. Hugen, Mr. Oates said that in his opinion no combination of private banks and bankers could have the power, under any conditions, that the national banks possess.

Chairman Springer called the attention of Mr. Oates to the fact that the limitation in his bill restricting state banks to a circulation of $5 per capita of population would add but $350,000,000 to the currency of the country even if the largest possible amount was issued, and asked if he (Mr. Oates) thought that was enough.

Mr. Oates said he had based that upon a calculation regarding his own state and thought it would be sufficient. "The people will get sufficient money some way," he concluded.

The committee then adjourned until tomorrow morning, at which time Representative McLaurin of South Carolina will advocate favorable consideration of his bill to add $125,000,000 of treasury notes to the outstanding currency.

RAILROAD QUESTION.

Consolidation of N. Y., N. H. & H. With Old Colony.

BOSTON, Sept. 29.—A bill was filed today in the clerk's office of the supreme court, which, when it comes to trial, will make a most interesting case. The decision will settle the question whether or not two railway corporations can become one or, in other words, whether one road has the power to lease to another without a special act of legislature, the whole or any portion of its own road provided they are not connecting lines. The question to be decided is whether the supreme court will ratify the consolidation of the Old Colony and the Consolidated.

The court is asked to set aside the consolidation of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railway with the Old Colony railway, and require the former to return to the stockholders of the Old Colony all the property and leases now held by the New York, New Haven & Hartford, which at the time of the consolidation were the property of the Old Colony. The bill is brought by Theodore R. Glover of Milton, in behalf of himself and such other shareholders of the New York, New Haven & Hartford as may care to join hereafter against the New York, New Haven & Hartford and the Old Colony corporations.

In his bill of complaint Mr. Glover says that the Old Colony railway company is a Massachusetts corporation; that the New York, New Haven and Hartford road is a Connecticut corporation and that he is and has been for many years the owner of 50 shares of the capital stock of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railway company. He declares that the public statutes have been violated and urges that the New York, New Haven and Hartford be restrained from paying any further sums on account of the rent or dividends or otherwise in performance of the lease.

Fierce Colliery Fire Raging.

MAHANOY PLANE, Pa., Sept. 29.—A fierce colliery fire is raging at the Boston Run workings of the Reading company, located near St. Nicholas, in the Mahanoy valley. The officials took prompt steps as soon as the fire was discovered, a few days ago, and expects to have it extinguished in a day or so. The matter has been kept quiet by the company and very few of the employes knew until last evening that the mine in which they were working was on fire. The workings are very deep, and if the fire gets a good start on the veins it would prove very disastrous.

Water Famine in Mexico.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Sept. 29.—A special to The St. Louis Globe-Democrat from San Luis Potosi, Mexico, says that city and surrounding country are suffering from a severe water famine, and the poor people are perishing for want of the life giving fluid. The scenes around the public fountains are extremely pitiful. The fountains are almost dry, and women wait hours in the sun for their turn to fill their water jars, and then have to go off with a few mouthfuls given them out of charity by some professional water carriers, and often the gift is half mud.

Wants $15,000 Damages.

WATERBURY, Conn., Sept. 29.—Geo. A. Driggs, who has sued for divorce, naming Lieutenant Colonel Burpee of the Second regiment as co-respondent, has also served papers on Colonel Burpee in a suit for the alienation of his wife's affections, placing damages at $15,000. The best legal talent in the state will be employed to defend the case. Colonel Burpee's friends assert the suit is merely a matter of spite. Colonel Burpee was Mrs. Driggs' legal adviser.

The Week's Failures.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: A complete statement of failures for the quarter which will close tonight is not possible, but the aggregate of liabilities, about $156,000,000, greatly surpassing the record of any previous quarter. For the past week the failures have been 329 in the United States against 177 last year, and in Canada 34 against 31 last year.

No Change in Repeal Programme.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—The leaders of the administration forces conducting the repeal programme in the senate have determined to make no change in the present programme during next week. The senate will continue to meet at 11 a. m., and adjourn at 6. There will be no night sessions.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Sept. 29.—The Hon. John J. Phelan, secretary of state, has been sick since Monday at his home in this city with intermittent fever. Dr. Fitzgerald, his attending physician, said today that he is doing well. Mr. Phelan recently returned from a trip to Chicago as a delegate to the Catholic congress.

Dropped Dead at Danbury.

DANBURY, Conn., Sept. 29.—George Little, aged 58, dropped dead at his home on Main street this afternoon. He complained of feeling unwell a few minutes before his death and asked for a glass of water. Just as his wife handed it to him he fell over dead.

Yellow Fever Patients Discharged.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—Surgeon General Wyman, this morning, received a telegram from Surgeon Geddings, in charge of the detention camp at Brunswick, Ga., saying that he had discharged all but fifty-nine of the yellow fever patients detained there.

BRUNSWICK, Ga., Sept. 29.—Thirteen cases of yellow fever and eleven deaths were reported today.

The Situation in a Nutshell.

High wages cannot be paid in this country if manufactured products have to be sold in competition with those made in countries where the scale of wages is considerably lower. It is the uncertainty that the manufacturers may have to sell their goods in competition with those made abroad by cheap labor and admitted duty free, or at a nominal tariff, that is responsible for the greatest part of the present industrial stagnation. This is the whole situation in a nutshell.—[Fitchburg Sentinel.

JAMES TREFETHEN NOT GUILTY.

Charged With the Murder of Tena Davis Last May.

HIS SECOND TRIAL.

The Prisoner Overcome With Emotion at the Verdict.

BOSTON, Sept. 29.—In the case of James Trefethen, charged with the murder of Tena Davis, the jury at 5 o'clock this afternoon returned a verdict of "not guilty." The prisoner was then discharged by the court, and the court adjourned. Trefethen was almost overcome with emotion, when the verdict was announced, but he thanked the jury for their action. Trefethen was immediately surrounded by a crowd of friends, among the first to shake his hand being Attorney General Pillsbury. Trefethen said in conversation to the newspaper man: "I am innocent. I have felt everything more for my poor old mother's sake than I have for my own. I do not blame the police officers for what they have done, as they believed they were performing their duty. I have nothing further to say now for publication. There is another side of this case that will come out at the proper time when I have an opportunity to consult my counsel." About 5.30 p. m. Trefethen left the court house and was greeted with cheers by an immense crowd that lined his path.

Trefethen on May 12, 1893, was convicted of the murder of Tena Davis, her body being found in the Mystic river a few days before. A brother-in-law of Trefethen was tried at the same time for complicity in the crime, but was acquitted. Subsequently defendant's counsel moved for a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence. The new evidence was chiefly that of Boston clairvoyants, who testified that two or three days before the alleged murder a girl tallying with Miss Davis, called on them and announced her intention of committing suicide. No evidence has been introduced to prove conclusively that Trefethen was with the girl on the night of Dec. 22, 1891, but evidence was given to show that he was in Dorchester during the afternoon, came home early in the evening, then took his horse and delivery wagon and delivered goods in Charlestown; returned home soon after 10, and with his mother spent two or three hours in decorating his store for Christmas.

FRIDAY'S STORM.

Mercury Dropped Ten Degrees at Wallingford—Rain, Hail and Thunder.

WALLINGFORD, Conn., Sept. 29.—A peculiar storm passed over this town at an early hour this morning. Rain, accompanied by heavy thunder, was followed by a sharp hail storm, lasting five minutes. The appearance of the sky with the strangest kind of lights made inhabitants who recalled the fearful tornado of 1878 apprehensive. Shortly after 7 o'clock the storm cleared and the sun came out. The thermometer fell ten degrees.

Hailstones Like Peas.

ANSONIA, Conn., Sept. 29.—People here were awakened at 5 a. m. by a terrific thunder storm. Early risers found the ground white with hailstones as large as peas. Half an hour later another storm followed, this time of rain, which quickly melted the hail.

Bismarck and the Emperor.

BERLIN, Sept. 29.—The Zukunft, a periodical of Bismarckian tendencies, edited by Maximilian Harden, publishes an article concerning Bismarck and the emperor. The writer speaks of "The collapse of the hopes of a reconciliation" and closes thus: "The words exchanged by the emperor and Prince Bismarck in their last official interview continue to indicate the relations between them." In that interview, the emperor said: 'You refuse then even, if your master commands?' Bismarck replied: 'My master's power ends at the threshold of my wife's drawing room.' Harden has had several interviews with Prince Bismarck in the last two years and is supposed to receive inspiration occasionally. It is not believed, however, that in this case, he speaks with authority.

IN CONGRESS.

The Senate.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—Mr. Cameron, rep., of Pennsylvania, presented a petition in the senate today, signed by Mr. Wharton Barker of Philadelphia and many business firms of that city, asking senators to legislate so as to preserve the protective character of the tariff and the integrity of silver as a money metal; and he asked that it be read and printed in The Record.

Objection was made to that request, and then it was ordered that the petition be printed as a document.

The repeal bill was then taken up, and Mr. Harris, democrat of Tennessee, addressed the senate, contending that the Sherman act had nothing to do with business troubles. The repeal of that act, he said, meant that there should be no more legal tender silver dollars, and that hereafter silver shall be used only as fractional currency. It meant practical demonetization of silver, monometallism and a gold standard.

The House.

After routine business the house resumed the consideration of the federal elections repeal bill, and was addressed by Mr. Lacy, republican of Iowa.

Liabilities of failures thus far have run up to the unprecedented total of $324,087,000, about four times what like debts were last year and 54 per cent. more than the total indebtedness of nine months' of business failures in 1884, the next preceding in severity. The aggregate assets are 70 per cent. of the total liabilities, an unprecedented showing. The next highest proportion for nine months on record was 55 per cent in 1884.

In the unfinished 2 30 stallion race of yesterday, Jahawker took one heat and the race today, never being headed.

The 2.22 trotting class and the 2 27 class trotting were well split up and gave good sport. Darkness caused their postponement till tomorrow. The two-year-old race was easily won by Altonear.

BOMB THROWER PALLAS IN COURT.

Declares He is Sorry General Campos Was Not Killed.

DENIES INSANITY.

Would Repeat the Act a Hundred Times Had He a Chance.

BARCELONA, Sept. 29.—The anarchist Pallas, who threw the two bombs at Capt. Gen. Martinez de Campos Saturday, was courtmartialled today. He was brought into court with his hands tied behind his back, but the president of the court ordered that the ropes be cut. Pallas was apparently unconcerned as to his fate. His appearance indicated a small amount of intellect. His hands showed no trace of manual labor. Pallas declared loudly that he would commit the same crime a hundred times over.

He was alone in his responsibility for the deed. He was sorry that he had not killed Campos, whom he hated ever since the captain general defeated the republicans in 1874.

Pallas would not make any further statement. His insolent behavior when questioned caused the president to have him removed from the room. Pallas was brought back, however, to hear the prosecutor's address. When the prosecutor demanded, "in the name of outraged society and for the sake of civilization," that the prisoner be sentenced to be shot, Pallas shouted: "Agreed! There are thousands to work!"

His counsel appealed for clemency on the ground that the prisoner's mind had been deranged by demoralizing literature and evil companions. Pallas shook his head decidedly to deny this imputation on his sanity.

The court adjourned immediately after Pallas' counsel finished his address to consider the sentence. The decision probably will be announced tomorrow.

No witnesses were called today to testify for or against Pallas. His detailed confession, however, was read. It states that he could not manage the bombs alone in the crowd, and so got an Italian anarchist to help him. It asserts that the bombs were well wrapped in cloth and the Italian did not know what they were.

SUCCESSFUL FAIR CLOSED.

Spirited Races End the Thirty-Eighth Annual Exhibition of the New London County Agricultural Society—Martha Wilkes' Mile—Foot Race and Other Events.

The thirty-eighth annual New London county fair ended somewhat abruptly in a downpour of rain at 3.45 o'clock Friday afternoon. It has been a well conducted and successful fair.

The horse races were the principal attractions of the day. The cattle stalls were deserted in the morning hours, and exhibitors in agricultural hall withdrew most of their exhibits early in the day. The fakirs, too, evidently did not anticipate a fertile pasture, and were not nearly so numerous as on the preceding day.

Martha Wilkes, the 2 08 trotter, made a mile under very adverse circumstances at 3 30 in the afternoon. The track was wet, sloppy and slippery, and the mare broke at the turns. Her time was 2 19¾, which beats the track record by four seconds and one-half. The quarters were covered in .35, 1.08¼, 1.43.

The balloon ascension was as successful as its predecessor of the day before. The balloon mounted gracefully and slowly skyward with its intrepid passenger to a height of 3,000 feet, and then floated to the southeast till the big air ship looked to the far away gazer like a twenty-eight inch umbrella with a natural wood handle. The aeronaut opened the valve and the affair was dimly discerned as it sailed slowly to terra firma behind the wood-capped hills.

There were eight starters in the half mile foot race, and four succeeded in making the circuit in the following order: John Gleason, John W. Street, Thomas Hogan and Joseph Simon. The quarter was done in 1 07 and the half mile in 2 22.

Little Sport, Mr. C. P. Williams of Stonington's handsome gelding, carried off [illegible] for all race, a [illegible] the seven horses [illegible] Rockwell Boy's and Happy Doctor's drivers were fined $5 apiece for too precipitant scoring. Rockwell Boy took the lead as the "go" was given by Judge Buckingham, and kept it to the three-quarters pole, where he was overtaken by Little Sport. The two animals came down the home stretch neck and neck. Just below the distance stand, the gray horse broke and ran one hundred and fifty feet, coming in second with Happy Doctor a length behind and Country Boy in the rear.

Rockwell Boy assumed the lead again in the second heat, and was hard pushed by Little Sport to the home stretch, where he broke and was passed in a wink. Country Boy got third place by a head.

The two last heats were duplicates of the first, with a change of place of the two leading horses. The finishes were both close, with Little Sport in advance each time. Happy Doctor got third money.

The summary:

Free for all race; purse $300, in premiums of $150, $75, $45 and $30. Seven entries and four starters.

The 2.32 class race was settled off the track. The rain was falling so determinedly when the fifth heat was due that the contestants made a settlement of the purse. In the fourth heat, the drivers of G. O. and General Kossack were removed, and their positions manned by new men. Driver Bolsie of General Kossack was fined $25 for his course in the preceding heat, it being claimed that he voluntarily made the heat a tie. Peter Manns's mare Celia C. won the first two heats without special effort, but broke badly in the next two.

The summary:

BUILDING A NEW RANGE.

Third Regimental Teams to Practice on Poquonoc Plains.

Workmen are now engaged in putting up a rifle range on the Morgan farm near Poquonoc plains. It will be used by the team of the Third regiment for practice in preparation for the brigade shoot at Hartford, next Thursday.

Ever since an injunction was secured restraining the members of the New London battalion from using the range back of the almshouse, which had been established at multiple expense and trouble, the boys have been put at their wits' end to obtain a good place for target practice. At times they have exercised on the range belonging to the Put Trumbull men and again they found a place on the Lewis farm, near the Norwich road.

Neither of these two places seem to possess the advantages that the men desired. Especially was this true when they wished to practice at 500 or 1,000 yards. So for some time back they have been looking around for an available location.

The new grounds at Poquonoc possess all the advantages desired. The land is level and the butts can be stationed 1,000, or for that matter 2,000, yards from the firing point. The lot is only a few minutes walk from the station, and there is a likelihood that the place may in time be selected as the site for the annual brigade shoot each year.

The Norwich Weekly Courier is the best weekly newspaper in New England at 50c a year.

CAMERON'S COURSE

Surprised Many Republicans in Both Houses.

REVIVED MEMORIES OF OLD DAYS.

Senator Cameron Was an Old Time Man-ipulator.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—The bold announcement of Senator Cameron in favor of the repeal of the 10 per cent tax on state bank circulation surprised a great many Republicans in both houses of congress. The Democrats, however, were not so much startled, as many of the leaders like, Butler, Vest, Ransom and Blackburn who are his constant companions, knew of his peculiar alignment on free coinage wildcat banks and other anti-Republican heresies. Senator Cameron derived these wildcat notions many years ago from his father. A distinguished Pennsylvanian who is now in this city, speaking today of Mr. Cameron's remarkable course, said that it revived memories of the old wildcat system of banking which was carried on in many of the states, but more particularly in Pennsylvania before the war and in which the senator's father figured very conspicuously.

This gentleman said, "The Old Middletown bank located near Harrisburg was one of the most notorious institutions of the kind in the United States. Simon Cameron was a large owner and manipulator of this bank. Its circulating notes

Were Scattered In Every Direction

throughout Pennsylvania and other states where they could be handled. Middletown was the terminus of raft navigation on the Susquehanna and its branches in that day. Millions of feet of lumber were rafted down this vast water system from the extensive forest regions of southern New York and northern Pennsylvania. This lumber was generally banked at Middletown where the lumbermen remained, sometimes, for weeks, until sales were made. When these men were unable to dispose of their lumber and were hard pressed, the agents of the Middletown bank usually appeared and took the lumber off their hands and paid them in Middletown bank notes. By this means thousands and tens of thousands of dollars of the circulating medium of this bank were distributed throughout this vast lumber region where the notes remained for a long period until the wild-cat system went to pieces. The farmers, storekeepers and others lost every dollar of their holdings, while the Bank Officers Had Grown Rich."

This same gentleman gave an amusing description of how this wild-cat system was carried on throughout the state. The Pennsylvania banking system worked up by a parcel of scheming ring politicians in and out of the legislature, enabled a few unscrupulous persons with small means to establish any number of banks and issue any amount of notes without any [illegible] or responsibility. One of the methods by which they gulled the people in that early day was to secure $25,000 in silver, which was packed in kegs. When a bank was to be started in any country [illegible] an advance agent was sent to the place and quarters were secured. Then followed the officers, who [illegible] thither in the old [illegible] coach with the opulent and weighty kegs of silver. The population, in the meantime, was thoroughly aroused and flocked up to the place. With shouting and dreams of an abundance of money and prosperous times the kegs were rolled into the bank. The institution at once commenced the issuing and shoving of

An Independent Quantity of Notes.

After the public furore had worn off and the confidence was fully established, these kegs of silver were mysteriously abstracted from the bank and a few days after a similar demonstration was witnessed in an adjoining county where the same kegs went through the same process.

In the particular case referred to by this gentleman, the same kegs of silver were utilized in establishing five banks and through which several hundred thousand dollars of notes were shoved among the farmers and business men of the locality. When the [illegible] came and the infuriated duped note holders compelled an examination, it was found that the mysterious kegs of silver which had been paraded with so much joy among the people, had disappeared and in their stead in the vaults the inquisitive people found kegs, which upon being opened as assets were discovered to contain nails and old iron. The bank officers to escape the storm had fled and several committed suicide rather than face the indignant people.

To restore this worthless system Senator Cameron proposes to repeal all restrictions on state banks by repealing the existing 10 per cent tax, which has wiped out the last vestige of these defrauding institutions, and allow the present most perfect and secure system to the people and mercantile transactions to be superseded by a carnival of rotten

Wildcat Banks and Unscrupulous Officers.

The nomination of Mr. Preston to be director of the mint opens another phase of the silver question. The silverites on both sides of the senate are indignant at the course of the president and Secretary Carlisle at the promotion of this officer, who, they claim, has been using all his influence and authority to antagonize the use of silver. They claim that it was through his efforts in the main that the silver purchases have been kept down to a minimum. They allege that in several cases, in the absence of Secretary Carlisle, he refused to accept the offers of silver when the price was at its market value, thus taking technical advantage of the provisions of the act to accept bids or not.

The silver men therefore intend to exert themselves to secure his rejection if they can, but as they are in the minority and senate rules are not so exacting in executive session, they may cause delay, but they will not be able to secure his defeat. The president and the secretary promoted him to this position on account of his experience and efficiency in that branch of the service, and their friends will sustain him. Secretary Carlisle emphatically denies that Mr. Preston has done anything to cause such a feeling among the silverites. He simply carried out the instructions of the department.

LONG MOURNED AS DEAD.

But Brother of Senator Turpie Turns Up Alive and Rich.

DELPHI, Ind., Sept. 29.—After being mourned as dead for over 25 years John Turpie, brother of Senator David Turpie, has returned to this city to find the whole family dead except three brothers, one in Washington, one in Kansas City and the other, Robert, occupying the old home.

In 1853 John left home in company with Robert Dickey. Dickey was taken ill at Hannibal, Mo., and had to turn back, but Turpie joined an ox train across the plains, bound for Salem, Ore., and drove an ox team all that distance.

For 40 years he never saw a face from his home nor heard from any one there. He spent three years hunting and trapping with the Indians, and was for a while a sailor on the Pacific coast. He now resides at Astoria.

He says his brother, the senator, visited that place four or five years ago, with a number of other senators, but as he was busy at the time he did not "take the trouble to look Dave up." Unlike his brother, he is a stalwart Republican. The rise of values in Pacific slope lands has made him a rich man.

TREFETHEN TRIAL ENDED.

Case Goes to the Jury After Impartial Charge by Judge Dunbar.

BOSTON, Sept. 29.—In the Trefethen trial this morning, the attorney general continued his address for the government. He took up the question of suicide, raised by the defense, and proceeded to point out the weakness of that line of argument. After drawing attention to the discrepancies in the evidence on this question, he declared that there was not even one foothold in the case for the theory of suicide.

His argument was a strong and searching one, fully equal to his celebrated effort in the previous trial, and was concluded at 12:30. Judge Sherman then asked the prisoner if he had anything to say to the court or jury. Trefethen arose and said: "I am an innocent man."

After a few moments conversation with his associates, Judge Dunbar began his charge to the jury, stating clearly the law bearing on the case and the relation it bore to the several features presented. The jury then retired in charge of the sheriffs.

MORE GENTLE TONE.

French Requirements of Siam Are Now Somewhat Abated.

BANGKOK, Sept. 29.—M. LeMyre de Vilers, the French special envoy, had a conference yesterday with Prince de Vawongse, Siamese minister of foreign affairs.

M. de Villiers adopted a somewhat more gentle tone in presenting the demands of France, and it appears that his requirements were somewhat abated.

Judging from the results of the conference the outlook for a peaceful settlement of the dispute between France and Siam is more hopeful.

This institution belongs to the Protestant Episcopal faith. The school will open Oct. 4, and the name of Miss Briggs appears upon the list of juniors.

NOW SCHOOL HAS BEGUN.

Look Well to the Health of the Childen.

Girls and Boys Who are Studying Need Strength

Experience of Principal L. L. Camp and Prof. C. C. Harper.

School has begun.

Days of suffering for many nervous, sickly children, especially in the high and grammar schools, are at hand. Parents and teachers should see that the store of nervous vitality required in the summer vacation is not impaired. The value of Paine's celery compound in keeping children strong and vigorous is illustrated in the experience of Mr. A. W. Fisher of South Bay City, Mich., who writes:

"My children, Florence, Clarence and Demott, are now enjoying excellent health since they used Paine's celery compound, though before they were weak and run down. I credit their strength and vigor entirely to their liberal use of the compound."

Principal L. L. Camp, of the famous Dwight school of New Haven, and father of Walter Camp, the celebrated college athlete says: "I have taken several bottles of Paine's celery compound, not because I was sick but because I wanted to keep well. I believe in keeping well and can do so best by the use of this helper of nature."

Prof. C. C. Harper of Mt. Carmel, Ill., says:

"My school work has proven a great mental strain, and every spring I have found myself thoroughly worn out. In the spring of 1890 I thought that I could not complete the school term, for I was almost prostrated.

"About that time I commenced the use of Paine's celery compound with splendid results. The use of two bottles completely restored my health. I have been in my present position for eight years, and I am certain that this compound has enabled me to carry on my school work, when without it I should have been compelled to give up. sep30d

HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA.

Swellings in the Neck

Grateful for Permanent Cure by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"I cannot praise Hood's Sarsaparilla enough. For twelve years I have been troubled with scrofula and swelling of the glands in the neck. I consulted several physicians and took many medicines. My neck was also operated upon at the Mount Sinai Hospital, but this did not give me any permanent improvement. One day I read in a paper about Hood's Sarsaparilla, and on trying a bottle I found it was doing me good, so I took two bottles more. The swelling has entirely disappeared, and I am as healthy as anyone in the city. Anyone who should see my picture two years ago and now, would notice

WITH A CUP AND SAUCER.

I send my love a fragile china cup,
With purple violets painted round the rim.
Empty it is, but sweet thoughts fill it up
And peep like tricksy elves above the rim.

Upon a saucer fashioned like a heart
Of palest tint my dainty cup is set.
Dear emblem, symbolizing life's better part—
How can she look upon it and forget?

The charm I drop within the cup is such
That every draft a tender thought will bring;
The crinkled leaves will brighten at her touch,
The flowers will know a mystic blossoming.

Poor pictured violets that never grew
In ferny nooks nor felt a summer shower!
To hearts that hate the false and love the true
[illegible]

But go, my gift, and as my lady sips
Her creamy cocoa or her fragrant tea
Thy happy rim may perchance touch her lips
And bring to her a fleeting thought of me!

"S'POSE IT'S SATAN."

It was only the ground on which the 180 boys of Dr. Kellar's school disported themselves. But besides the boys present there were at least 180 demons and angels of ambition, envy, loyalty, perfidy and truthfulness.

The doctor himself, in a new suit of tweed, seemed to the boys to be far more approachable here in the midst of their sports than when in academic cap and gown he cast gloom through their ranks by stalking along with that searching eye of his well turned on the discomfiture of evildoers. However, even at these gruesome times, the boys admitted among themselves that Kellar was a gentleman, and that they'd rather take a hiding from him than punishment drill from a cad any day.

For they were proud of Kellar's, loyal to the school, and ready to battle to the bitter end against any common foe who dared to asperse it in the slightest degree.

A little lad of 10 had just run light heartedly on the ground when the aforesaid searchlight fell on him, and simultaneously the head master shouted out:

"Colville two, I thought you had detention!"

Colville two, a redheaded, merry faced boy, smiled cheerfully, as if detention were a good joke to which he was well accustomed, and replied with pleasant promptness:

"So I have, sir."

"Then what brings you out here?"

"I s'pose it's Satan. He's always doing it."

"Doing what?"

"Making me naughty," said Colville two, with pathetically fearless frankness.

Then Kellar's little daughter went up and kissed him.

Twelve years later the battle of Tamai was being fought, and Colville two was in the thick of it. He had been slightly wounded in an attack that had been made upon McNeil's Zareba a few days previously, and his colonel had mentioned him in despatches and recommended him strongly for the "V. C." for personal gallantry.

On the strength of this Lieutenant Colville had written to the girl he was engaged to, who was at Cairo with her mother, telling her that he would not wait to marry her a day after he had got his company.

"I've always been a lucky fellow, though I've been in no end of scrapes all my life," the boy wrote, "and now the crowning luck of all is that I shall win you, and the Victoria cross at the same time. Heaps of fellows deserve it just as much as I do, only I happened to be in front, you see, and was lucky enough to be able to make myself a target for the concealed enemy, who had been picking off our men like ninepins. The Arabs turned their fire on me, and our fellows were able to see where the beggars fired from. I must bear a charmed life, I think, for the ground was riddled all around me. Bob (Bob was her brother) and I fought shoulder to shoulder for hours, and we shall again many a day, I hope."

The girl who got this letter was worthy of the gallant, light hearted boy who wrote it, and she sent him pages of such loving, proud, encouraging words as only a proud, loving woman can write.

"I wish I were your wife that I might go to the front and dress your wounds myself, my own love. Even as it is I am capable of dressing as a boy and going to the camp. I quite understand Constance de Beverley's bowing her pride and riding for three long years in Lord Marmion's train. Only, Jack, there would be no 'bowing of pride' in my case. I should be prouder than ever if I could only do something to show the whole camp, the whole world, how dearly I love my boy."

Then she went on to tell how regularly she wrote to his mother, keeping her posted up in all that Jack was doing and suffering and winning. "She is my beloved mother, and only she can fully understand how dearly I have loved you ever since that day when I went and kissed you because you said you 's'posed it was Satan made you naughty.'"

Violet Kellar had fought a hard fight before she had gained her father's consent to become engaged to penniless Jack Colville. The girl's brilliantly good looks, attractive manners and general cleverness had brought far more eligible men to her feet. But she had been faithful to her first love through it all.

"I hate poverty, but I love Jack," she would say, when her father pointed out to her how far more sensible it would be of her to marry a man who could give her a good establishment in which he could stay at home in ease with her than to link her lot with that of a mere subaltern in a marching regiment.

"Probably after they have settled this disturbance in Egypt his regiment will be sent off to India for three or four years, and as he can't marry on his pay you will be left behind to meditate on your folly in having engaged yourself."

"I shall marry him as soon as this affair is over in Egypt, papa, and if he can't give me bread and water enough to support me I'll beg it from some one who can. I don't want a good establishment or a husband who'll stay at home in ease. I want Jack, and I mean to have him!"

"The boy always got what he wanted, confound him," her father grumbled good temperedly, and when he said that Violet knew that her case was won.

Her mother, after the manner of mothers, sympathized with the young people's romance and hopefully assured her that Jack would win promotion in some miraculous way without seeing much dangerous service.

So when Violet said: "Mother, dear, I don't want a swell wedding. I don't even want a wedding dress—Jack likes me in sailor serge better than anything, but I do want to go out and be as near him as I can. Take me to Cairo and let the chaplain marry us as soon as the fighting is over." Mrs. Kellar agreed to do so, and all their acquaintances declared that the mother was as great a fool as the daughter.

* * * * * * *

Violet's letter was keeping his heart warm this day at Tamai. He was feeling unaccountably happy and light hearted, as after a sharp tussle with half a dozen Arabs, three of whom he killed with his revolver, he was allowed breathing time for a few minutes, during which he cut the word "Suakin" on the little black pipe that had been his inseparable companion during the whole of the campaign.

Suddenly just as he had lighted and returned smoking it, he heard a frantic shout, and glancing up he saw young Kellar dash forward and fire at some one behind him (Jack). Simultaneously he felt a sharp agonizing pain in his back and knew that he was struck by a poisoned spear. An Arab, who had been concealed in a bush, had crept out and stabbed him before young Kellar could intervene.

He had staggered and then fallen on his face, and they thought that he was dead for a minute. But when they lifted him and were carrying him away a faint flicker of the old fun came into his fading blue eyes as he said:

"I wanted Violet and the 'V. C. so much. S'pose 'twas Satan"——

Before he could finish the sentence the fading light went out, and the blue eyes closed forever in this world.

* * * * * * *

Who shall tell her? The whole regiment knew the story of Jack's love, and not a man in it but felt heartsore for the girl who had loved and been so proud of her young hero.

"It will break my heart to go to Violet with such a tale," her brother moaned. "I'd rather take a revolver and blow my own brains out than have the task."

"You shall not have it," his colonel promised. "I'll go to her myself with as bitter tidings as I've had to convey."

Colonel Brankeholme's mouth twitched, and his steady, fearless gray eyes filled with tears as he spoke. But this was more for the fine young soldierly life which had been cut short in its glory than for the desolate girl who was left to mourn it. However, he fulfilled his task so sympathetically that Violet soon found her greatest comfort in talking of her lost lover to his gallant chief.

"Time treads on the grave of affection!" Kind, merciful Time! Two years after Jack fell at Suakin, Colonel Brankeholme, who had been away on leave for a month, telegraphed to the second in command of the regiment, "My wife and I will be back tonight."

"We'll give them a grand reception. Have the band to meet them, take the horses out and drag the carriage along the parade," some of the more enthusiastic of the juniors declared. But when young Kellar said: "Better not. The bride is my sister," the regiment felt that the less demonstration they made on the occasion of her joining it the better. Jack's memory was too green with them still for them to give her anything but a silent and rather sad welcome.—Montreal Star.

A Chinese Proverb's Origin.

"'He'll steal your shoes' is an expression which in China is used to describe an arrant knave and pilferer," says ex-Consul Edward Bedloe. "The expression is hundreds of years old and is based on an adventure perpetuated through the medium of decorated crockery ware. A wealthy Chinaman, whose gorgeously embroidered shoes were the envy of the community, was, according to the legend, despoiled of his pride in the following manner: A rascal one day rushed up, gave the rich man a hearty blow on the back, and seizing the astonished gentleman's hat pitched it upon a high wall. The next moment the fellow seemed to discover that it was not an old friend he was greeting so enthusiastically and apologized profusely.

"'How shall I get my hat?' inquired the man with the beautiful shoes.

"'Jump on my back and you can reach it,' replied the schemer.

"The suggestion was carried out, but while the hatless man was reaching for his head covering the rascal slipped off the handsome shoes and made away, leaving the simple minded millionaire clutching the wall."

Squire Osbaldestone's Ride.

Squire Osbaldestone's undertaking to ride 200 miles in 10 hours, which he accomplished so successfully on Nov. 5, 1831, is one of the most remarkable feats of endurance in the saddle and has the merit of freedom from cruelty. The squire rode his race on the Newmarket race course, changing his horse every fourth mile.

Mr. Osbaldestone used 16 horses for his task and rode standing in his stirrups like a jockey, while he kept his mount at full speed from start to finish of its four mile heat, having quite a "set to" with his pacemaker at the end of each. The squire was a hardy man and in good training, so suffered no bad effects from his exertions.—Chambers' Journal.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Oct. 1. Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

TOPIC.—I am ready. Rom. i, 8-17. "I am ready to preach the gospel to you that are at Rome" (Rom. i, 15).

There are two expressions of the Apostle Paul that reveal his entire disposition and attitude toward Jesus Christ and Christianity. The first is quoted above, "I am ready to preach the gospel." The second is in II Tim. iv, 6, "I am now ready to be offered." These expressions reveal the double fact that Paul was ready to live for Christ by preaching His gospel and ready to die for Him by suffering martyrdom in His name.

In reference to the "ready" of our topic let us make three inquiries:

1. For what was Paul ready (Rom. i, 15)? He was ready to preach the gospel at Rome. He had longed to preach it at Rome, but had been hindered before, and there was still a strong inclination upon his part to hold up Christ and the cross in the capital city of the great Roman empire. All Christians should have Pauline readiness to preach the gospel, to make known to all men the glad tidings that a Saviour has been born, who is Christ the Lord. Christian Endeavorers, are you ready to spread the gospel?

2. Why was Paul ready to preach the gospel? He gives two very good reasons: 1. He felt that there was an obligation resting upon him to do so. "I am a debtor both to the Greeks and to the barbarians, both to the wise and the unwise" (verse 14). This was his first reason. He was indebted to all who had not the gospel to give it to them because he did have it. The same debt is owed by all Christians. 2. The second reason was the character of the gospel. "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God to salvation to every one who believeth" (verse 16).

3. Where was Paul ready to preach the gospel? At Rome. "To you who are at Rome." And what did Rome represent but the world? At that time Rome was practically the world, and the world was Rome. Paul was ready, therefore, to preach the gospel to all men. The world was his field, and he actually carried the gospel to the greater part of the then inhabited world. The world is still the Christian's field. We should begin at home, but not end there, and because we fail to do all that ought to be done at home is no reason that we should neglect the needs abroad. The command is, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." Let us obey that command as Paul obeyed it.

Bible Readings—Isa. vi, 8; Jonah, iii; Math. ix, 38; xxiv, 44; Luke x, 2; xii, 40; John xv, 27; Acts i, 6-8; Rom. x, 18; I Tim. vi, 18; I Pet. iii, 15.

Christian Endeavor Singing.

Considerable Christian Endeavor is needed to sort out the popular hymn tunes of the day and to put by themselves, where they can be found when wanted, the songs that truly express emotions fitting for Endeavor meetings.

Attention should also be paid to the hymns, for a good many verses given out to be sung in Endeavor and other religious meetings are anything but helpful to the devotional spirit. There are hymns of discouragement, hymns of fault finding, hymns of personal inexperience, hymns that express religious untruths and hymns that express nothing at all save poor grammar and worse meter. The attempt to sing with enthusiasm poor hymns set to poorer music involves a vast deal of endeavor, not always of a Christian kind.

To encourage "singing endeavors" let us have the right kind of Endeavor music. We want hymns of encouragement, hymns of praise, hymns of faith, hymns of devotion. We want Christian work songs that will stir up the singers "both to will and to do." We want Christian campaign songs that will quicken our pulses and deepen our ardor for the cause of Christ. Then we want these hymns set to music that shall express in its own true language the same emotions. If the hymn sketches the outline of a Christian thought or purpose, the music should fill in the color. If the poetry embodies the idea, the song should waft it heavenward.—Golden Rule.

The Growth of Christian Endeavor.

Some people have expected to see the Society of Christian Endeavor show signs of waning vigor as its years increase. The contrary is true, as is indicated by Secretary Baer's report at Montreal, which showed a net gain of 5,276 societies during the past year, a larger gain than was ever made before in a single year and a number as large as gained by the society during the first seven years of its existence. It must be remembered, too, that this is a net gain, every society that has been changed to a purely denominational society, as hundreds have been changed in the Methodist Episcopal denomination, having been dropped from the roll. In all other denominations the societies are multiplying as never before. Even since the convention at Montreal the list has increased by several hundreds.

Make Christ Manifest.

Christians should not forget that in view of what Christ has done for them they are under special obligation so to live each day as to make His presence manifest in every affair of their lives—in buying and selling, in their social intercourse, in their presence in places of amusement, in their depositing of their ballots—in short, in every act of thinking, loving, receiving or doing they should always manifest the spirit of Christ.—Christian Intelligencer.

The River—A Return Song.

O river! O river!
As you go to the sea
Forever and aye,
So flowing and free,

You bow to man's burdens,
You grind in their mills,
Yet, free, fresh and savage,
You flow as God wills.

O river! O river!
Going down to the sea,
Oh, fill me, oh, fill me,
That I, too, may flow free.

Though I bow to the burden,
Though I grind in the mill,
May I go to the ocean
[illegible] as God wills!
—Christian Register.

The latest list of English societies reports 59, thus divided among the denominations: Baptist, 19; Congregational, 18; Methodist, 11; Presbyterian, 4; Bible Christian, 2; denominations not named, 5.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON I, FOURTH QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, OCT. 1.

Text of the Lesson, Rom. i, 8-17—Memory Verses, 16, 17—Golden Text, Rom. i, 16—Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

8. "First, I thank my God through Jesus Christ for you all, that your faith is spoken of throughout the whole world." Our last lesson in the Acts found Paul at Rome preaching Jesus to all who came to him, but from verses 11 to 13 of this lesson it is evident that he had not as yet been in Rome when he wrote this epistle. He writes as a bond slave of Jesus Christ, set apart to proclaim the glad tidings of God concerning the Son, and addresses his letter to all the beloved of God in Rome, called saints. By receiving Jesus we become saints, He becoming our righteousness, and this being the case we are therefore to live as saints. We are not told how the gospel was first preached at Rome, but there were at this time true believers there to whom Paul wrote this great epistle, emphasizing in the very beginning of it the great truth of the resurrection (verse 4). See how faith in God glorifies Him and becomes known abroad to His honor.

9. "For God is my witness, whom I serve with my spirit in the gospel of His Son, that without ceasing I make mention of you always in my prayers." One of Paul's mottoes was, "God, whose I am and whom I serve" (Acts xxvii, 23), and it was no outward service as a man pleaser (Gal. i, 10; I Thess. ii, 4; Col. iii, 22), but real heart work as in the sight of God, whom he loved to call upon as his witness (I Thess. ii, 5, 10). It was his custom to pray much for the saints in every place (Eph. i, 16; I Thess. i, 2; Phil. i, 4) and he loved to be prayed for (Col. iv, 3; I Thess. v, 25; II Thess. iii, 1). God was his intimate friend, and like a little child he told his father everything (Phil. iv, 6, 7). What he preached he practiced.

10. "Making request, if by any means now at length I might have a prosperous journey by the will of God to come unto you." Outwardly we have seen that as men see things his journey was anything but prosperous, but when we consider his safe arrival and the lives given him (Acts xxvii, 24, 37) it is truly prosperous in God's sight. Joseph in prison under a false accusation was a prosperous man, for God was with him (Gen. xxxix, 2, 3, 21, 23).

11. "For I long to see you that I may impart unto you some spiritual gift, to the end ye may be established." He repeats his longing and desire in the end of the epistle (chapters xv, 23; xxxii, 23). He at one time put the Ephesians in mind of the words of the Lord Jesus, how He said, "It is more blessed to give than to receive" (Acts xx, 35), and His whole life is an illustration of the joy of imparting spiritual things. The way to be established is found in II Chron. xx, 20, "Believe in the Lord your God, so shall ye be established." See the contrast in Isa. vii, 9, and be mindful of I Cor. xv, 58, "Be ye steadfast, immovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord."

12. "That is, that I may be comforted together with you by the mutual faith both of you and me." In writing to Philemon (Phi. 6) Paul said that the communication of faith becomes effectual by the acknowledging of every good thing that is in us in Christ Jesus. Peter speaks of those who have obtained like precious faith with us through the righteousness of God and our Saviour Jesus Christ (II Pet. i, 1). Every believer knows how inspiring is the faith of a fellow believer and how refreshing it is to meet one who can truly say, "I believe God," or "I know whom I have believed" (Acts xxvii, 25; II Tim. i, 12). Confidence begets confidence both in temporal and spiritual things, so that if in quietness and confidence we are resting in the Lord (Isa. xxx, 15) somebody will get a refreshing.

13. "Now, I would not have you ignorant, brethren, that oftentimes I purposed to come unto you (but was let hitherto), that I might have some fruit among you also, even as among other gentiles." Our purposes may come to naught, but the purpose of God will stand and all be in due time fulfilled. The way of rest, therefore, is to place ourselves wholly in His hands that He may work both to will and to do. The word "let" in this verse signifies to hinder. See R. V. and compare II Thess. ii, 7. See also Isa. xliii, 13, where God says, "I will work, and who shall let it?"

14. "I am debtor both to the Greeks and to the barbarians, both to the wise and to the unwise." He did not take any credit to himself for preaching the gospel, but said, "Necessity is laid upon me—yea, woe is me if I preach not the gospel" (I Cor. ix, 16). All who have heard the gospel and have received Christ for themselves are commissioned to make Him known to others, for it is written, "Let him that heareth say come" (Rev. xxii, 17). Whether ordained of man or not, they are ordained of God (John xv, 16) and are put in trust with the gospel, which is to be declared, not as pleasing men, but God who trieth our hearts (I Thess. ii, 4).

15. "So, as much as in me is, I am ready to preach the gospel to you that are at Rome also." "Ready" was one of Paul's watchwords. Ready to every good work, ready to be bound or to die, ready to be offered up (Titus iii, 1; Acts xxi, 13; II Tim. iv, 6). The same word is prominent in the Saviour's teachings with special reference to His coming again (Math. xxiv, 44; xxv, 10). If King David's people could say to him, "Thy servants are ready to do whatsoever my lord, the king, shall appoint" (II Sam. xv, 15), how much more should we say it to our king?

16. "For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth—to the Jew first, and also to the Greek." It is called in verse 1 the gospel of God and in verse 9 the gospel of His Son. It is also called the glorious gospel of Christ and the glorious gospel of the Blessed God (II Cor. iv, 4, I Tim. i, 11), yet many preachers today have become ashamed of it or else seem to think it has lost its power, for they preach anything and everything but the good news concerning Jesus. They surely seem to forget Mark viii, 38. There is no benefit from the gospel unless we believe or receive it (Heb. iv, 2), and receiving it we receive Him (John i, 12) and thus become the children of God. If today, as in the days of the apostles, we gave more heed "to the Jew first," might not the blessing be much greater?

17. "For therein is the righteousness of God revealed from faith to faith, as it is written, The just shall live by faith." Our own righteousness, which is only filthy rags, is opposed to the righteousness of God and must be laid aside before we can enjoy the perfect righteousness of God, which is Christ Himself (Isa. lxiv, 6; II Cor. v, 21; Rom. x, 3, 4). This complete and spotless righteousness was wrought out wholly by Christ and becomes ours by simple faith in Him—or, in other words, by our receiving Him (Rom. iii, 21, 22). "The just shall live by faith."

A Good Excuse.

Judge—You are charged with assaulting this man.

Prisoner—I plead guilty, your honor, but I have a good excuse. I addressed this man civilly three times, and he never answered me.

Judge—Why, the man is deaf and dumb!

Prisoner—Well, why didn't he say so?

Blushing and Blanching.

Blushing is not an art. Neither is it an absolute sign of ill breeding, as some unkind folk maintain. The fact is it is just as natural for some people to blush on one occasion as it is for others to turn pale on another. The same laws of nature which govern the one rule govern the other. The capillaries or small blood vessels which connect the arteries and veins in the body form, particularly over the cheeks, a network so fine that it is necessary to employ a microscope to distinguish them.

Ordinarily the blood passes through these vessels in normal volume, leaving only the natural complexion. But when some sudden emotion takes possession of the heart its action increases, and an electric thrill instantly leaps to the cheeks. The thrill is nothing more than the rush of blood through the invisible capillaries. The color is nothing more than the blood just beneath the delicate surface of the skin. The causes that bring about this condition in the circulating system are called mental stimuli. They consist of joy, anger, shame and the many other emotions.

Sudden horror, remorse or fear, on the contrary, influence the nerves which control the blood vessels, and the face becomes white. Blushing and pallor result from the sudden action of the mind on the nervous system. So if the mind be forewarned and prepared for emotions both habits can at least be partially overcome. But when the nervous system is highly strung it would be a lifelong if not futile task to endeavor to effect a perfect cure. It is the sensitive, nervous girl who blushes easily, while the girl stolid by nature or who by education has her nerves under perfect control seldom blushes.—Philadelphia Times.

How a Logbook Is Kept.

How many landsmen know how a logbook is written up? It seems just as complicated as double entry bookkeeping when one does not know, but after a little careful attention and study it's as easy to keep a logbook as to eat hot gingerbread. There is a list of letters arranged, and they look like so much Greek to the uneducated.

The letter b, for instance, stands for blue sky, whether there be clear or hazy atmosphere; c means cloudy or detached opening clouds; d denotes drizzling rain; a small j, fog; capital F, thick fog; g, gloomy, dark weather; h, hail; l, lightning, and m, misty or hazy so as to interfere with the view.

The letter o represents overcast or when the whole sky is covered with one impenetrable cloud. Passing showers are noted by the letter p, and q indicates the weather to be squally. Continuous rain is indicated by an r, snow by an s and thunder by a t. Any ugly threatening appearance in the weather calls for the letter u, and visibility or distant objects, whether the sky be cloudy or not, is represented by the letter v. A small w is wet dew. A full point or dot under any letter denotes an extraordinary degree. As an example of how the letters are used take q p d l t. This reads very hard squalls and showers of drizzle, accompanied by lightning with very heavy thunder. Numerals denote the force of the wind. A cipher indicates calm, 1 light air, 2 light breeze, 3 gentle breeze, 4 moderate breeze, 5 fresh breeze, 6 strong breeze, 7 moderate gale, 8 fresh gale, 9 strong gale, 10 whole gale, 11 storm, 12 hurricane. This system of abbreviation is generally adhered to on all merchant vessels.—Geographical Magazine.

Simplicity For the Children.

The great secret of successful Sunday school teaching lies in its clearness and simplicity, for "sublimity always is simple," Longfellow says. Whatever else you may teach, teach so that the "still, small voice" may reach the hearts of your scholars.

Is not the Saviour teaching still?
The wheels of Providence He turns.
All is subservient to His will.

Tyndale, the translator of the English Bible, had for his motto, "Banish me to the poorest corner of the world if you please, but let me teach the little children and preach the gospel." There is a great demand for sterling teachers, such as realize the sublimity of teaching. The children's faces of our land are "eloquent." As the poet says:

Save us! Save us! Woe surrounds us.
Little knowledge sore confounds us.
We are willing. We are ready.
We would learn if you would teach.
We have hearts that yearn toward duty.
We have minds alive to beauty.
Souls that any heights can reach!

"How good digestion waits on appetite, and health on both."

To insure both the above ends, good, wholesome, palatable food is demanded. It is next to impossible to present a sufficient variety of appetizing bills of fare for our meals without a liberal allowance of pastry and other food to which shortening is required. How to make crisp, healthful, digestible pastry has puzzled the cooks. A difficulty in all good cooking in the past has been lard. Always fickle, never uniform, most unwholesome—lard has been the base of the cook and the obstacle to "good digestion."

Cottolene

comes now into popular favor as the new shortening—better than even the best of lard with none of lard's objectionable qualities. And

COTTOLENE

comes attended by both "APPETITE and HEALTH."

THE TAX ASKED FOR.

The selectmen recommend a four and a half mill tax for the coming year. There is no question that a four mill tax would raise sufficient money to meet the expenses of the town and to add the usual amount to the sinking fund.

Last year a prominent citizen in the annual town meeting made a motion for the reduction of the tax rate, claiming that in the absence of a state tax a three and a half mill tax would yield sufficient revenue to meet the expenses and with the balance on hand in the treasury leave a good balance at the end of the year.

The claims of this citizen have been verified, for a twenty thousand dollar bridge has been built, another thousand dollars has been paid for the Columbus day celebration and to make the Otis library a public institution, and a balance of nearly $16,000 remains on hand, which is thought to be sufficient to meet the current expenses of the town until the tax levied at the October meeting is collectible.

We have no intention of advocating for a reduction of this tax, which is ample for all purposes; but from a part of it a mile or two of permanent macadamized road should be built, and from the regular appropriations each year this permanent road building should be carried on till the principal roads of the town are all macadamized.

The taxpayers are to be asked to begin on North Washington street at the junction of Lafayette, and to macadamize and improve the street in front of the Backus hospital. This is something the people will be glad to aid in doing, and this is the place to begin a work which should be constant year by year, till the town has a mileage of well-built and permanent roads to be proud of.

The people want the roads; but they want no increase of the public debt. The republicans will do the work section by section, paying for the work as it is done; and that is a good reason why the republican candidates should be elected to the [illegible].

The republican policy:—PERMANENT IMPROVEMENTS AND REASONABLE TAXES.

WORK FOR IDLE MEN.

The scheme recommended by the retiring board of selectmen for improving the town highways by increasing the town debt in order to give work to idle men is well intended perhaps, but it is not a panacea for idleness, or a complete substitute for town aid. By work upon the streets only a part of the workingmen could be helped. The regular laborer would find in such a plan satisfactory relief; and, perhaps, a few hard-muscled mechanics might be able to change for support to the back-breaking work of the street department.

This plan is to be classed with the narrow humanitarian plans which would make of every idle man a sawer of wood or a farm hand. We have noticed that the people who recommend these plans as a universal benefit and blessing for the idle never did the work recommended and if idle would be among the class who could not do it for want of all round physical developement.

How long could mill operatives, clerks or bench workers in light mechanical trades swing an ax or a pick-axe, wield a shovel, swing a scythe or work a hoe? These classes could not do a half day's work in ten hours, and if compelled to keep at it would be sick within a week from over-exertion in new, heavy employment.

Workingmen are no more qualified to do a variety of work than professional men are qualified to turn from one profession to another to gain a livelihood. Every man's work becomes special work in a way; and it is as necessary for men to know how to build good roads as it is how to build good houses or make good shoes, if lasting and satisfactory work is expected.

If the times should continue hard and many men idle and dependent, the proposition to make permanent roads and give those work who can perform the labor satisfactorily, without physical injury to themselves, meets with general approval, no doubt; and still, every one knows that the winter season is not the best time to build roads in this latitude, and that the men who could stand the work and exposure are few. Whether there is work or not these men and their families must be provided for; and most of them would rather earn a dollar than have the town give it to them.

The republican policy:—PERMANENT ROAD BUILDING, TO BE PAID FOR WHEN BUILT!

ECONOMY IN THE POOR DEPARTMENT.

The subject of rendering aid to the outside poor of the cities, and to what extent it shall be carried, has, on account of the large amounts of money which have been expended for this purpose in the past, called out the opinions of the ablest men of the country upon the subject. The methods of keeping the amount of aid to the lowest point are many, but none believe in such a rigid doling out of alms that the homes of the dependents shall become cold or the pinched mark of insufficient nourishment become common on the face of the town's poor.

By the co-operation of the city mission a way has been established for making a searching inquiry into every case of need in Norwich, and the result has been a great saving to the town without injustice having been done to any one. This work will be continued, whichever party wins at the polls on Monday, and will continue to be a factor for economy in the future as it has been in the past.

City Missionary Swan last week found a woman who had applied to the selectmen for help owned a house, the rent of which she was giving to her son. A man who called for assistance on the 25th inst. had the day before taken $287 from a local savings bank. This work of inquiry is carefully and thoroughly prosecuted, and will continue to be if the experienced and capable republican candidates are chosen.

The republicans should rally for a change, which has in it an enterprising and economical administration of town affairs, without asking the people to endorse a scheme increasing the town's indebtedness.

The republican policy:—ENTERPRISE AND ECONOMY IN EVERY DEPARTMENT.

THE CANADIANS REJOICING.

The prospective policy of the democratic party makes the Canadians rejoice; but there does not seem to be much rejoicing on this side of the line because wool, coal, eggs, vegetables, salt and binder twine are to be allowed to enter this country free of duty. The Toronto Globe thinks "this adoption of the principles of freedom is a triumph of common sense in commercial affairs;" but it is curious that "the insane policy of protection on manufactured goods" is enforced in Canada by a duty of thirty-three per cent.; that American manufactures are kept out of competition with goods of that country, and that cloth there sells for one cent a yard more than it sells for in the United States. By an international arrangement raw cotton is freighted to the mill doors in Canada one-eighth of a cent a pound less than the same material can be delivered at the door of any mill in the state of Connecticut; and the mills and manufactories there are driven with work while the industries of this country are paralyzed by fear of the very policy which gives these foreigners such delight.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Van Alen's latest—"Never saw it!"

The suicidal mania of the democratic party promises to carry it beyond resuscitation. No wonder President Cleveland is praying that it may be delivered from the error of its ways.

Representative Morse of Massachusetts has shown Commissioner Lochren is deficient in his knowledge of the franking laws, and Hoke Smith says his rulings with reference to pensioners were too strict to exactly meet his views. Commissioner Lochren is slightly out of joint.

Connecticut day should be borne in mind by the sons and daughters of "the nutmeg state." When Chicago wakes up on Oct 11 she should be made to realize that a New England state is to celebrate the day on her soil; and later she may discover the celebrator is celebrated.

THE NORWICH BULLETIN declares that Mr. Wells' revenue tax will not fall upon brewers, for they will shift it upon the shoulders of the people. By the same reasoning, then, the consumer, instead of the foreigner, pays the taxes and higher prices for what he buys under the McKinley bill.—[The Putnam Standard.

We know the editor of The Standard does not intend to misrepresent THE BULLETIN. If he will reperuse THE BULLETIN he will see that the above assertion was made by a New York brewer. If the McKinley bill taxes the consumer, how was it that the representatives from Bermuda appeared before the ways and means committee and complained that it put a tax upon their produce of $300,000 a year?

The republican policy:—MEN OF ABILITY AND EXPERIENCE FOR SELECTMEN.

VOICE OF THE PRESS

What is the Difference?

What is the difference in morals between the act of a man who buys an office and that of men who try to buy him off?—[N. Y. Tribune.

No Choice!

President Cleveland perhaps finds it fully as uncomfortable to be defended by Voorhees as to be attacked by Stewart.—[Providence Journal.

Grieved.

Hoke is grieved to find that there are those who suspect him of being unfriendly to the old soldier. After all that he has done for the veterans, too.—[Kansas City Journal.

Guiltless.

With all their effrontery, no democratic organ has yet had the hardihood to declare that the McKinley law has closed a single factory or thrown a solitary employe out of work.—[N. Y. Press

Sometimes for Good.

Mr. Wolcott of Colorado is sometimes overruled for good. On Wednesday he was the instrument, in the hand of Providence, of stirring up Mr. Gorman of Maryland.—[Hartford Courant.

It Ought to be Impossible

It does not make very much difference whether the Van Alen appointment is thrown out of the senate or laughed out; but it ought to be impossible that it should be confirmed.—[Boston Journal.

A Compromised Administration.

Now the administration leaders begin to talk about a compromise in the senate. It is always wise to accept a compromise where you cannot get control. It is a very much compromised administration, anyway.—[Boston Journal.

The new combination of Smart Weed and Belladonna, as used in Carter's Backache Plasters, has proved to be one of the best that could be made. Try one of these popular plasters in any case of weak or lame back, backache, rheumatism, neuralgia, soreness in the chest or lungs, and you will be surprised and pleased by the prompt relief. In bad cases of chronic dyspepsia, a plaster over the pit of the stomach stops the pain at once. Ask for Carter's Smart Weed and Belladonna Backache Plasters. Price 25 cents.

The Fresh Fragrance

Of SOZODONT renders it the most agreeable article ever used as a tooth wash. It has none of the acrid properties of the astringent tooth powders, and instead of contracting the gums, it renders them firm and elastic.

If sick headache is misery, what are Carter's Little Liver Pills if they will positively cure it? People who have used them speak frankly of their worth. They are small and easy to take.

"How to Cure All Skin Diseases."

Simply apply SWAYNE'S OINTMENT. No internal medicine required. Cures tetter, eczema, itch, all eruptions on the face, hands, nose, &c., leaving the skin clear, white and healthy. Its great healing and curative powers are possessed by no other remedy. Ask your druggist for SWAYNE'S OINTMENT.

There is no one article in the line of medicines that gives so large a return for the money as a good porous strengthening plaster, such as Carter's Smart Weed and Belladonna Backache Plasters.

Piles! Piles! Itching Piles!

SYMPTOMS—Moisture; intense itching and stinging; most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form, which often bleed and ulcerate, becoming very sore. SWAYNE'S OINTMENT stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in most cases removes the tumors. At druggists, or by mail, for 50 cents. Dr. Swayne & Son, Philadelphia.

VIEWS IN ADVANCE.

Leading Senators on the Proposed Alliance.

STANDS NO GHOST OF A CHANCE.

Inexplicable Proposition Which Will Do Great Harm.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—Wharton Barker of Philadelphia is in the city for the purpose of pressing upon the attention of senators the combined silver seigniorage and protection proposition formulated by the Manufacturers' club of Philadelphia with the view of establishing an alliance between the advocates of silver and protection.

When the original letter with the signatures attached, of which Mr. Barker is understood to be the bearer, is presented to the senate, as it probably will be by Mr. Cameron, it is likely to call out an animated debate.

Some prominent senators on the Republican side have expressed their views upon it in advance. Mr. Aldrich is quoted as saying in regard to it that in his opinion it is not only a wholly unnecessary, but an inexplicable proposition which will do great harm. He believes it does not stand the ghost of a chance of being accepted in congress.

Senators Sherman, Hoar, Frye and others expressed like views yesterday, having only before them the press dispatches as to the nature of the proposition, but waiting its full text with interest.

Mr. Barker's propositions are as follows:

First—That the United States shall admit silver bullion from American mines to coinage in its mints upon the payment by the owner of a seigniorage absorbing three-fourths of the difference between the market (London) price of the bullion and its value when coined.

Second—That foreign silver shall be admitted only for coinage purposes at a seigniorage absorbing all of the difference between the market (London) price of its value when coined.

Third—That the United States shall invite, at once, a conference with those nations of the world which have not committed themselves to gold monometallism. This would include especially the nations of North and South America, Japan and China; and in Europe, France, Russia and others. These nations are deeply interested, as we are, in realizing the necessity to increase the power of silver, and many of them, particularly those of America and eastern Asia, are those to whom we may most easily and and advantageously sell the excess of our manufacturing industries. Such a conference should exclude England and Germany; its conclusion, without them, would direct the money policy of the world, preserve the integrity of bi-metallism, and prevent the enslavement of the United States and others by the capitalist classes of the two great creditor nations.

OFF FOR CHICAGO.

Rhode Island State Party Leaves For the World's Fair.

PROVIDENCE, Sept. 29.—The Rhode Island "state party" to the World's fair at Chicago left this city today, headed by Governor D. Russell Brown. Rhode Island day at the fair is Oct. 5, and the party will be in ample time to make the final arrangements for "Little Rhody's" great day.

The state party, as it was finally made up and arranged under the provisions of a resolution of the general assembly appropriating $10,000, comprises present and past officials of the state, widely known representatives of commercial and professional life, and some of the foremost educators of the state. The personal and military staff of Governor Brown, with Lieutenant Frederick Wooley, U. S. A., will make up the military contingent.

Shortly after noon today, when the party departed, a large concourse of people gathered at the Union depot to bid farewell to the fair excursionists on behalf of the state. During the past week large delegations of Rhode Islanders have been leaving for the west, and many will depart during the next few days in time to attend the ceremonies of Rhode Island day.

Besides the address of Governor Brown an oration will be delivered by Professor Alonzo Williams of Brown university and President E. Benjamin Andrews of Brown will also deliver an address. There will be a banquet at the Auditorium hotel on the evening of Oct. 5, which will be attended by the "state party" and the distinguished sons of Rhode Island, at home and abroad.

The former residents of the state now living in Chicago and the west will also tender a banquet to the governor's party of distinguished people.

FEDERATION MANIFESTO.

Position of the Mine Owners of England Clearly Stated.

LONDON, Sept. 29.—The federation of mine owners have published a manifesto concerning their attitude toward the strikers. In it the mine owners justify themselves for the reduction of 25 per cent in miners' wages, and refuse to discuss any compromise measures with the men. Arbitration, which has been suggested by many distinguished persons, is rejected.

The mine owners adduce figures to show that the cost of labor is two-thirds to three-quarters of the total cost of raising coal, and argue that in times of depression like the present they must reduce wages or do business at a loss.

The last words of the manifesto are: "When the miners' representatives shall be armed with full powers to negotiate, the owners' committee will be ready to meet them; the owners' committee can do no more."

ENGLISH HARD LUCK.

Battleship Nelson Collided With a Dredger and Is Injured.

LONDON, Sept. 29.—While the battleship Nelson was leaving Portsmouth today she overhauled a dredger that was steaming ahead of her, and the latter, in attempting to get out of the way to allow the Nelson to pass, collided with two cargo boats.

After striking the cargo boats, the dredger backed, and then collided with the battleship, slightly damaging her. The Nelson had been undergoing repairs, and was leaving port on a trial trip.

BUENOS AYRES, Sept. 29.—The Brazilian government has issued a decree ordering that all vessels arriving from European ports be quarantined.

LUCKY MRS. BURRILL.

Notified That She Is Sole Heir to a Large Fortune In Los Angeles.

BOSTON, Sept. 29.—Another large fortune which has been going begging for a long time has at last found an owner. Mrs. M. True Burrill of Boston has been informed through a firm of English solicitors that she is sole heir to [illegible] in cash, a vineyard and three houses at Los Angeles, a steam yacht and considerable personal property, left to her father by Henry Kingsford, her cousin.

There were three Kingsfords—Stephen, Roland and William. Henry, the testator, was the son of Roland, and Mrs. Burrill, the only living heir, is the daughter of William, who was a noted Lynn physician.

The testator did not know that his uncle William was dead when he left the will, naming the uncle as heir, and before she could be told of the property coming to her, the next in line, the wife of William died.

The children of the three brothers are all dead, as are Mrs. Burrill's brothers and sisters, so she is the sole representative of the family. She has already furnished proof of her identity, and her lawyers assure her that the property will be soon placed in her hands. The mother's name was Irene J. Perry.

LABOR TROUBLES.

Controversy Between Union and Non-Union Laborers Complicated.

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 29.—The recent controversy between union and non-union laborers is to be further complicated tonight when ex-Governor Charles R. Ingersoll, to whom was referred the question as to the legality of the votes passed at the recent school meeting, compelling the employment in the construction of the new school building of local builders and union labor, will give a decision in which he says the action of the meeting was entirely illegal.

The opinion states two reasons. The first that there was no mention in the call for the meeting which could justify the action taken. The other that the vote was decidedly an instance of class legislation and consequently could not be sustained in law. There is no question but that the board of education will abide by Mr. Ingersoll's decision and will give out the contracts for the new school building without any regard for any person or class.

SPOILS EXPLODED

And the Two Thieves Are Blown to Pieces Instantly.

THOMASVILLE, Ga., Sept. 29.—Two negroes, Shade Lee and Gus Alexander met Wednesday at Lee's house to divide some stolen goods, among which was a 25-pound can of powder.

In dividing the powder some was spilled on the floor. Shade threw a spoonful of this in the fire, which flashed and caused the can to explode, which demolished the house and dreadfully mangled the two thieves.

A shotgun lying near was also discharged, the load wounding Lee's wife. Alexander and Lee cannot recover.

DISHONEST MINISTER

Arrested For Obtaining a Signature by False Pretenses.

VAN WERT, O., Sept. 29.—Rev. J. E. Hall, a Methodist minister, was arrested here yesterday on complaint of John Phillips, who charged the reverend gentleman with obtaining his signature to a note for $1900 by false pretenses. Hall was bound over under bail of $1000 to await the action of the grand jury.

He was suspended from the ministry a few days ago. A large number of his congregation testified to his obtaining property and endorsements to his notes by fraudulent representations.

Rousalka Was Unseaworthy.

LONDON, Sept. 29.—The St. Petersburg correspondent to the Daily Chronicle says that the lost ironclad Roosalka was unseaworthy when she left Reval on her last voyage. She had been repaired clumsily, leaked badly and was generally unfitted for heavy weather. Her deck was but three feet above the surface of the water and her captain was ill. The total number of lives lost was 178.

HONOLULU ADVICES.

Attitude of Hawaii Towards the United States.

DECIDED STAND WILL BE TAKEN.

Annexation Club and Provisional Government Will Stand Together.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 29.—Honolulu advices per steamship Mariposa, which arrived yesterday, are as follows: It is learned that the government will henceforth take a decided stand in the negotiations with the United States. The Annexation club and the government announce semi-officially that they will abide the issue together. When this is considered in connection with the fact that the government's 400 men were supported by the 600 members of the club, it becomes insignificant as showing the combined strength in the event of an emergency. The apparent serenity of affairs is misleading.

It is believed that, should the provisional government show indecision after the arrival of Minister Willis, positions will be filled by persons who have the best interests of the country at heart with a fear of the future.

The appointment of Minister Willis was well received here. Ellis Mills is unpopular here because of his Royalist proclivities shown while acting as Commissioner Blount's secretary, and his appointment is not looked upon as a wise one.

The government had the question of his recall under consideration. It is believed he will not be treated cordially by the Americans here, or at least will find himself among silent friends, who will await any communication or proposition he has to make to the provisional government on the part of the United States government.

HEAVY DAMAGE SUITS.

Threatened by Employes of Santa Fe Who Were Charged With Stealing.

TRINIDAD, Colo., Sept. 29.—The Santa Fe embezzlement cases have been finished, and out of all the hundreds of arrests made not a conviction was secured. The employes now threaten heavy damage suits against the company.

For several years the Santa Fe had been a loser to an enormous amount by thefts of freight from cars in transit. Last spring wholesale arrests began to be made of employes, mainly train crews, operators and station agents, but, notwithstanding the road had what it considered convincing evidence, it was unable to secure a single conviction.

Women Seeking Office.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—A special to The World from Topeka says that in many counties the Populists have nominated women for coroner, register of deeds and county clerk. Inquiries have been sent to the attorney general requesting an opinion from him as to whether women are qualified under the law to serve as county officers. That official replied that he has been unable to find anything in the constitution or statutes which will bar them from qualifying in the case of an election.

Famous Yale Runner Dead.

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 29.—A telegram to this city announces the death of William J. Harmer of Philadelphia, for two years the champion intercollegiate mile runner of America. He was graduated from Yale in '88, after a remarkably successful athletic career, and soon after married and engaged in business at his home in Philadelphia.

Exaggerated Report.

CHICAGO, Sept. 29.—The officials of the Grand Trunk in this city say the report from Jackson of a wreck on their road, near Vicksburg, Mich., is greatly exaggerated. The accident occurred on a freight train, they say and no one was killed. Two or three employes were injured. There were no passengers on the train.

The fortieth year in Bates college, Lewiston, Me., opened on Aug. 30 with a good attendance and a promising freshman class of about 80.

It is announced that Editor Charles A. Dana of the New York Sun will deliver a course of lectures at Union college this fall upon "The Press and Journalism."

THE STOCK MARKET.

Dealings In Leading Securities In Boston and New York.

BOSTON, Sept. 29.—In the outside market call money is quoted at 3 to 4 per cent, and time money is nominally 6 per cent.

Today's stock market was the natural product of yesterday's rally. Efforts to realize on the part of those who had bought at lower figures had a tendency to weaken some of the more active specialties. On the other hand the tide of of opinion regarding the prospects of repeal was more mixed, some of the brokers claiming to have advices from Washington which made them confident of an early vote, and the result was a fairly strong undertone.

So far as surface indications go, however, President Cleveland's letter seems to have only solidified the two sides in the senate. The silver minority certainly declares itself even more determined now, and from the present drift of affairs, with tradition [illegible] necessity and popular demand, it is the members of that body that has to be made to yield. Evidently London has come to appreciate this fact, distinct and encouraging as President Cleveland's letter was. At least quotations from there came ¼ below the range here for all except Louisville and Nashville, which was ⅜ down. Sterling exchange, however, was weaker, and for the time ceased to be a factor.

On the local list New England showed the greatest strength, the result of the announcement of its being granted an entrance into New York. The common sold up to [illegible] during the morning against a final sale of [illegible], and the preferred from [illegible] to [illegible]. Sugar Refining was not as strong, though it was evidently well supported. Starting at [illegible], unchanged from the final quotation, the common rallied to [illegible] and then dropped to [illegible], where the preferred, off ¼ at the opening, recovered again to [illegible]. General Electric was down ¾ to [illegible]. Atchison held steady at [illegible] while Chicago, Burlington and Quincy dropped from [illegible] to 71 and Union Pacific from [illegible] to [illegible].

OLD AGE NOT A DISEASE.

Mrs. Belinda Hodsdon, at 76, and Solomon Davis, at 72, Commend their Experience to all Elderly People.

Old age need not be necessarily feeble. That a man or woman at sixty should say "It's natural at my age to feel weak and feeble," is not so.

Mrs. Belinda Hodsdon, Haverhill, N. H., exemplified this fact very plainly in her letter to Dr. Kennedy, wherein she says, "I recovered from a lingering and painful illness and finding myself continuing in a weak and debilitated condition I used Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy and found in it the one thing needful to supply the wasted vitality in aged people. It improves the appetite, quiets and sustains the nerves, and absolutely cures insomnia (sleeplessness.)"

Mr. Solomon Davis of North Kortright, N. Y., found the same result from using Favorite Remedy. In speaking of it to Editor Champion, of The Stamford (N. Y.) Mirror, he said. "How much better the average old person would feel if they would use this valuable preparation, Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. Outside the fact that it will cure the most obstinate case of constipation, it gives strength and tone to the system, and renews one's vitality." sep29 wsS

CITY NEWS.

The ladies of Trinity parish will have a 4 o'clock tea and supper next Wednesday evening.

The Children's Progressive Lyceum of the Norwich Spiritual union will meet in Grand Army hall tomorrow at the usual hour.

The draughting class of the Art school will meet this term in the lecture room of Slater memorial building. Work will be begun next Tuesday at 7.15 p. m.

Stephen Maslen and his son, Charles C. Maslen, Isaac Cross, Jr., of Hartford and the Rev. A. S. Brown of Norwich will go to the World's fair together next Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. John T. Clark returned Friday evening from a two months' trip through the west, which has embraced visits to all the principal points of interest in that country.

The corporators of the Backus hospital have extended an invitation to the physicians and surgeons of the city to be present at the dedicatory exercises on Wednesday of next week at 2.30 p. m.

Mr. Ferdinand Nowatzky has been negotiating for several weeks with the New York newspapers endeavoring to effect their Sunday presence in this city. Friday, however, he received a telegram which precludes the possibility of the scheme.

The priests of this diocese have all received circulars in which is suggested that everyone of them should have a voice in the choice of a bishop. At present only the irremovable priests have such a voice. What priest originated the project is unknown.

Forty-seven years ago yesterday and today the Fifth Brigade, comprising the militia of Tolland, Windham and a part of New London counties met for parade in Old Windham. Gen. L. E. Baldwin was in command and Mr. Winchester of South Windham is the only survivor of his staff on that occasion.

"A Western Girl."

The four-act comedy drama "A Western Girl" was repeated in the Breed opera house last evening to a small audience. There was every manifestation of pleasure. This afternoon "A Life Sentence" will be presented, and there is prospect of a large audience.

No License Vote in Groton.

There will be no vote on the license question in Groton this year. The town has always been no-license, and only three times has the vote been taken on that issue since the enactment of the law. But the vote has been so overwhelmingly against license each time that the question has been settled for long periods often. Last year the vote was taken, and there were over 670 "noes" to about 50 "yeas."

Across the Potomac.

The above named theater can be seen at the Broadway theater Oct. 4th. The New York Advertiser says of it:

"Across the Potomac" is replete with exciting incidents, some of which are taken from actual occurrences during the late war. The life of Col. Kane of the famous regiment of Pennsylvania Bucktails, was saved by Col. Johnson of Maryland under similar circumstances to those represented at Proctor's theatre during the battle scene at Gen. Heath's headquarters.

The republican policy:—GOOD ROADS WITHOUT BONDING THE TOWN.

A Golden Wedding.

Mr. and Mrs Chas G. Beebe, of Mystic, celebrated their golden wedding Thursday afternoon and evening. None were invited but their sons and daughters; but their neighbors and friends called in large numbers to wish them many happy returns of the day. A remarkable fact is, that for the last twenty five years their wedding anniversary has always occurred on a pleasant day.

They have four sons and two daughters living, and lost one infant daughter. With the exception of this last no death has ever occurred under their roof.

Mr. Beebe was a native of Norwich. Was an early abolitionist. The evening was very enjoyably spent recounting many reminiscences of the past. Among the guests was the venerable and genial Judge Richard Wheeler with his wife, a niece of Mrs. Beebe, giving promise from their healthy and happy appearance, of our meeting at a similar anniversary on their own account. Their pastor made a very pleasant reminiscent speech, and the village poetess, the well known Mrs. Ida Whipple Benham, read an original poem. Altogether it was a delightful festival.

STRICKEN WITH APOPLEXY.

Judge John C. Kellogg Never Rallies from a Shock Last Evening.

Judge John C. Kellogg of the police court suffered a stroke of apoplexy at 6 30 o'clock Friday evening, which proved fatal five hours later.

He had been complaining of dizziness for several weeks, and placed himself under a physician's care. He appeared in the best of health and spirits Friday, and was in a happy mood at the supper table. Half an hour after he grew suddenly pale and lapsed into a semi-unconsciousness from which he was never revived. City Treasurer H. W. Tibbits, who resides in the house with Judge Kellogg's family, hastily summoned Dr. Perkins, who on arrival reported the attack fatal.

The stricken man lingered in a comatose state till 11 30 o'clock, when the breath left his body.

A wife and two sons survive. Mr. Walter J. Kellogg was in Colchester, and when the news of his father's sickness reached him by wire, he started at once for this city, arriving shortly before the grim messenger of Death had entered the household. Mr. John A. Kellogg, the other son, is in Rockville in his capacity as foreman for C. H. Eglee, water works supplies, and will not be able to reach Norwich till this morning.

Judge Kellogg was born in Kentucky, and had been a resident of this city since boyhood. He studied law with the Hon. John T. Wait, and for many years had been an honored member of the New London county bar. For seventeen years he had been judge of the local police court, where his decisions have been rendered universally with equity and wisdom. He was a man esteemed personally for his companionable and cheery characteristics and many good qualities, while professionally his services were in demand for his acknowledged ability. His family have the sympathy of the city in their bereavement.

PEQUOT PROPERTY SOLD.

A Real Estate Sale of $88,000 in New London Friday.

The largest transfer of real estate made in New London in years was consummated Friday, when the Pequot house and cottage, a well-known summer resort, was sold by John J. Haley of Newton, Mass., to J. Hall of Dover, New Hampshire, of the Newmarket National bank. The property was heavily mortgaged and the price is stated to be $88,000.

The republican policy:—ENTERPRISE AND ECONOMY IN EVERY DEPARTMENT.

A VERDICT OF $1,000.

Miss Terrell Wins Her Suit Against Mrs. Peabody of Waterford.

When the superior court came in in New London Friday morning, Judge Hamersley rendered a decision in the suit of Terrell vs. Peabody, that has been on trial for the past two days.

The court found by the evidence that the plaintiff had included services that ought to have been paid for by the intestate, and that after her 15th year she gave the services with the understanding there should be compensation, that Austin knew this, and the party who received the services was guilty of fraud and the estate was liable.

The question of the value of services is hard to determine by the evidence. The story of the girl cannot be given full credence. The offer of Mrs. Peabody, which she was ill advised not to accept, should be considered. Damages are given for $1,000, with costs of suit.

Short Calendar Cases.

The disposal of short calendar cases was next taken up. In the case of the Westerly Savings bank vs. Keegan for foreclosure on a note of $779.88, judgment was granted with limitation to the first Monday in November.

In the case of Pinney vs. Second national bank of Norwich leave to amend answer was granted provided it be germain to the subject.

The republican policy:—PERMANENT IMPROVEMENTS AND REASONABLE TAXES.

TAFTVILLE.

Miss Annah E. Park of Norwich has been engaged as assistant teacher in room 1 of the Wequonnoc school. Miss Park is a graduate of the Free Academy and the Normal class of '93.

Mr. Joseph Roland of Providence is visiting friends in town.

Miss Maud Brainard, who has been visiting relatives here has returned to her home in Lawrence, Mass.

The home of Principal Harroun was made happy by the arrival of a daughter Friday.
